QUEEN PLEADS FOR BULGARIA IN CABLE TO AMERICAN

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A message was received at the London bureau of the AMERICAN today from Queen Elenora of Bulgaria, acknowledging the message sent to her saying that sermons will be preached and collections taken in churches in six cities in the United States today and the following Sunday in aid of the Bulgarian relief fund. The message follows:

Very gratefully and with the deepest satisfaction I received the welcome message advising me of the proposed collection in the leading churches in the six American cities on behalf of the Bulgarian relief fund. May God help your admirable clergy to move the hearts of their flocks in aid of a distressful and most needy cause. Our poor refugees are now stretching their hands hopefully toward the great American nation.

(Signed) ELENORA.

HORRORS OF THE BALKANS ARE TOLD BY MISS STONE

Famous American Missionary Vividly Pictures Conditions of Starvation and Suffering in Bulgaria and Albania

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the famous American missionary whose kidnaping by bandits some years ago brought the whole civilized world to her rescue, joined today in a crusade in behalf of refugees of Bulgaria and Albania.

Miss Stone has spent many years in the Balkan peninsula, is thoroughly conversant with the people and conditions and realizes the horrors of the present situation. Unless prompt action is taken and money sent in large sums, she believes many thousands of refugees, men, women and children will perish of exposure, starvation and disease. She said:

"I am rejoicing with all my heart, that the New York AMERICAN will give its tremendous influence and assistance to this most worthy and needy cause.

"Our American people are noble hearted and generous, but the great trouble is that they become intensely interested in a great case like this and then the interest abates, the people think the matter has been attended to and meantime the starvation and privation goes on.

NEED IS URGENT.

"If out of their plenty, the people of the United States would raise funds to augment the $15,000 already sent by the American Red Cross since New Year's, but which is but a drop in the bucket of the great need which even $100,000 could not meet; but which the larger sum would put on a basis where many thousands could be rescued, much could be done.

"The horrors of the famine and suffering are difficult to picture. I am in constant receipt of private letters and communications from friends and fellow missionaries which portray graphically the terrible scenes of death, starvation, disease and pestilence. From my long residence there and intimate and close knowledge and understanding of the people I can picture the situation and it is one that fairly appalls.

"In Bulgaria there are upward of 800,000 refugees who fled for safety

No Light in Buffalo During Blizzard

Cars All Stalled in Worst Storm in Years.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 31.—This city is in the grip of the worst blizzard of many years tonight. Street cars are stalled all over town and the city has been in darkness for hours.

Mrs. Wilson to Aid "Red Light" Women

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson today joined the forces that are trying to save the unfortunate girls of Washington's "Red Light" district.

The President's wife attended a meeting of officials of the Florence Crittenden Home, the National Social Welfare League and other organizations engaged in the work. She was presented with a Red rose, symbol of the Federation of Women's Clubs, by Mrs. Ellis Logan, who represented that organization. The meeting was called to make plans to raise a fund of $25,000 to take care of the unfortunates of Washington's "Lower Tenth."

Pittsfield Health Board Removed

Found Guilty of Alleged License Favors to Local Hotel.

PITTSFIELD, Jan. 31.—Mayor Fred Moore removed today the entire board of license commissioners, consisting of Chairman Wallace E. Bardwell, George W. Pease and James Kelly, whom he recently found guilty of charges preferred by P. H. Dineen, a retired druggist. The charges included granting a license to the Hotel Wendell after alleged violation of the screen law, failure to file quarterly report and discrimination. The commissioners will appeal to the Superior Court, which may review the removal and nullify it if it sees fit.

Huerta Terrified by Plot Discovery

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 31. — There were many indications today of the nervousness of the government over the discovery of the alleged plot to overthrow Huerta. The display of the troops of the garrison was continued and numerous mysterious arrests were made. Millions of cartridges have been stored in the national palace. Jose Luis Requena, candidate for vice-president on the Felix Diaz ticket, was arrested today.

Officer Aids Five to Escape Flames

Special Officer James Cowan of No. 283 Essex street, aided five neighbors through smoke-filled halls to the street, then carried his daughter out and ran a quarter of a mile to ring in the alarm when a fire caused by the explosion of a leaky gas heater started shortly after midnight last night in the barber shop on the lower floor of the three-story building where he lived.

ARREST CHUBB ON CHARGES OF WIFE NUMBER 3

NON-SUPPORT IS ALLEGED

Frederick Andrew Chubb, grandnephew of the late United States Senator George Frisbie Hoar and a direct descendant of Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, was arrested last night at No. 99 Warren avenue, South End, where he and his "soul mate," Miss Mary E. Chandler, and their baby, Eleanor, have apartments.

The charge was non-support of his third wife and five-year-old son, Timothy Hoar Chubb. Sergeant Irwin made the arrest. Mrs. Annie Hagan Zimmerman Chubb of Minneapolis, Minn., better known as "Mrs. Chubb, No. 3," was present with Attorney Irving Jameson, when the warrant was served at midnight by Sergeants Irwin and McClusky of Station 5.

Chubb told the officers he was dazed and it was his first arrest.

The warrant was granted by Judge Sullivan of the Municipal Court on application of James E. Ewer, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The warrant followed by a few hours the arrival in Boston from New York of Mrs. Chubb.

Mrs. Chubb reached Boston at 10:30 a. m. She had been referred to Agent Ewer by Vice Commissioner Anthony Comstock of New York.

After the warrant was secured Mrs. Chubb conferred with her counsel, Mullen & Jameson, No. 1128 Tremont building. Then she engaged a room for a temporary stay in Boston.

THREATENED WITH DEATH

The story of her courtship carried her into Central America and other tropical countries, to some of which she took her baby boy.

In the Republic of Guatemala, Chubb was employed by the President as a body guard and court painter. Mrs. Chubb declared last night that he became so smitten with a Spanish beauty that she protested and he threatened to shoot her. She says she was forced to hide in the huts of native women eight days, during which time Chubb got out a warrant against her for "high treason, because he interfered with a government employe," meaning himself.

"I am going to win this fight if I starve," said Mrs. Chubb to an AMERICAN reporter. "I don't care if I have to sleep in the Public Garden or appeal for victuals and shelter at the Salvation Army barracks. I'm just about worn out as it is, but I'm going to bring Frederick Andrew Chubb to terms and to his senses, and remind him that he has others besides his 'soul mate,' May Chandler, to look after.

"It makes me laugh, that word 'soul mate.' All bosh. The Chandler woman—he always called her 'Old May'—has tracked him for years. They were schoolmates or childhood sweethearts or something like that. He tries to pretend that he is her guardian. Guardian of what? By the way, the reported quarrel between them over her estate was a bluff, in my opinion.

GETS BIRTH RECORD.

"In all this horrid affair the luckiest find in my opinion was the birth record of the child, Eleanor, born last July. If it wasn't for my Boston lawyers, Messrs. Mullen and Jameson, I wouldn't know anything about that. The birth record showed that my husband was recorded as the father and Mary Chandler as the mother, and they represented that the birth was legal, which signified that they represented themselves as man and wife.

"We were married June 15, 1907 at Minneapolis. He had signed antenuptial arrangements to give me half of everything he owned and earned.

"I shall never forget when I made my first visit to Attol, Mass., my husband's birthplace. I there saw Miss Chandler at the railroad station. He didn't introduce her to me. You can bet him right before my face to go to Boston with her to select hats and dresses, etc. He said he would take

3 THOROUGHBREDS SAVED

Twenty-five thoroughbred horses—representing the cream of steeplechasers and jumpers in New England—were burned to death in a fire which destroyed Alexander Henry Higginson's big barn on his South Lincoln estate late last night. The millionaire clubman, fox hunter and horseman accounted his loss to be $50,000.

Mrs. Higginson, who was Jeanne Caldwell, the famous stage dancer before her marriage to the son of Major Henry L. Higginson, was the heroine of the fire. She personally directed the fire fighters in their work of trying to rescue the horses and of battling with the flames. She stood in the smoke and heat regardless of the evening gown she wore and called on the men employes to do everything in their power to get the horses out of their stalls.

Over the telephone after the fire Mr. Higginson said that of his entire valuable stable of prize winners, only three had been rescued. Two of these ran off in the excitement and were still at large early today.

Mr. Higginson was told that incendiarism was suspected, it being claimed that the flames had started in two places about the same time.

TO INVESTIGATE CAUSE.

"I can't say that the fire was set," he declared. "But I will say that I don't like the looks of it. I have no idea who, if any one, could be guilty of such a crime. I think there will be an investigation."

Mr. Higginson was not at home when the fire was discovered. He was returning to Lincoln from Boston with his young sons. They had been to a theatre. When father and son reached the estate it was to learn that the horses both loved were dead. The fire was then nearly out.

Mrs. Higginson was in the palatial home the Higginsons have on the estate. She heard the cries of employes in the barnyard.

Without stopping to throw on a cloak, Mrs. Higginson ran out. At that time the flames were bursting from the second story where was stored a valuable lot of hay and grain. The horses were on the ground floor. Their whinnying could be distinctly heard for some distance.

MISTRESS OF SITUATION.

"The horses, the horses!" shouted Mrs. Higginson, running to the barn. "Save the horses!"

From that time on she was the mistress of the situation. Coolly she directed the men as they darted into the smoke-filled stable, and then staggered out again half suffocated. With the greatest difficulty and at the risk of their lives they led out three horses, about whose heads blankets had been thrown.

Attempts to rescue the rest of the thoroughbreds were futile. Again and again as Mrs. Higginson suggestion the fire fighters, whose numbers had been swelled by scores of neighbors, went into the barn only to be driven out again.

FAMOUS RACERS PERISH.

Mr. Higginson said the barn with its contents was worth $10,000, and that the horses represented an additional loss of $40,000.

Of the burned horses three were internationally famous racers — Sir Worcester and Ross Fenton, direct National winners and the speediest of their class in 1909 and 1910 respectively, and Prince Hamptom. The other horses were all topnotchers.

Censor on Job at Back Bay Dansant

Back Bay Devotees Flock to Afternoon Affair.

Modes dance devotees from the Back Bay flocked to the Copley Plaza yesterday afternoon despite the pouring rain to attend the dansant from 4 to 6:30 in the big ballroom of the Hotel. The event was in charge of Mrs. Fannie B. Adams, who, as mistress of the ceremonies, acted a censor.

Among those enjoying the modern steps were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright, Miss Ella Lyman of Marlboro street, Mrs. A. Dickinson, Mrs. Livermore, Mrs. E. L. Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Little, John Henry Means, the globe circler, Foxhall Keene, the society polo expert, Mr and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Miss Helen Collier and Mrs. Stella Hoburn.

Pittsfield Block Gutted by Fire

Business District Imperilled by Fierce Blaze.

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 1.—The business district was threatened early today when a fire practically gutted the three-story wooden and brick business block in North street occupied by several varnish and paint dealers.

Chief William Shepard was overcome by a volume of smoke which burst through one of the windows.

Abbott Accused on Indian Affairs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—That serious charges have been filed against former Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs Frederick H. Abbott reflecting on the efficiency and integrity of his administration was admitted today by Senator Robinson, chairman of the joint commission to investigate the condition of the Indians. The charges are preferred by William Johnson, formerly chief supervisor in the Indian service of the inspectors in suppressing liquor traffic.

New Theatre Just to Exhibit Styles

Paris Plan Will Be Followed Up in America.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—A new theatre is to run for the special purpose of giving women practical demonstrations of what to wear and how to wear the latest gowns, is to be opened this Spring. The venture is being financed by the leading Parisian dressmakers. The demonstrators will be statuesque beauties especially selected for their ability to display gowns.

After the opening in Paris which will last four weeks the company will make a tour of the principal cities of the world, beginning with America.

Brockton Man Is Stabbed to Death

BROCKTON, Feb. 1.—James Russo, thirty, of North Main street was fatally stabbed thirty times by three men near his home late last night. His body was found lying on the sidewalk shortly after midnight. The assailants made their escape, but are known to the police.

Russo, in company with his brother Antonio, and three other men, were returning from a party. At the corner of North Main and Linden street they heard a scream and saw a scuffle among the men.

Office Boy to Be Fair With Curley

Faces Discharge, But Won't Leave New Mayor Flat.

Willis Cronin's attitude toward the Curley administration, Willis told his friends last night, is the same as Arthur Everett's.

Mr Everett has been Mayor Fitzgerald's Building Commissioner.

Willis Cronin, sixteen, who lives in Ashmont, is the Mayor's office boy. A caller at the Mayor's office yesterday observed that this was Willis' last day in office, perhaps.

"Oh, I don't know," said Willis. "I'm coming in on Monday. I want to be fair with Mr. Curley and not leave the place flat. If he don't want me, he needn't keep me. If he does want me, I'll be on the job. There'll be no harm in finding out. I'm not dying until I'm shot."

$700,000 on Hand as Curley Enters

Large Amount Result of Mayor's Appeal to Taxpayers.

When Mayor Curley takes the reins of office at City Hall tomorrow he will have in the city treasury a little over $700,000 above all expenses with which to meet new bills. This amount is the result of Mayor Fitzgerald's personal appeal to the heavy taxpayers of the city to pay their taxes before the close of the municipal year. Of this amount $100,000 came from taxes while $700,000 represents other revenues.

City Hall Robber Gets $20 Overcoat

Hibbard DeBill, sixty-seven of No 5 Atkinson Circle, Winthrop Highlands, yesterday pleaded not guilty in East Boston court on the charge of setting up and maintaining a lottery. The case was continued to February 6. The police raided De-Bill's and seized 15,000 lottery tickets and printing presses.

Strenuous Last Day by "Fitz" Includes Dedication of City Hall Annex, Farewell at Town Meeting, Banquet, Speeches

SATURDAY, the last day of January in the year 1914, was John F. Fitzgerald's day. And His Honor the Mayor made the most of it.

Monday, February 2, 1914, will be James M. Curley's day. Mr. Curley will make the most of it. The best that Mayor-elect Curley's friends can wish for him, on his day, is that the new Mayor will get as much joy out of it as his predecessor seemed to take out of Fitzgerald day.

"Fitz" was busy from early morning until late at night. He turned in at 2 a. m. He was up at seven. The telephone being out of order in Welles avenue, the Mayor called his car and was on his way to City Hall soon after eight.

After that it was one thing after another.

There were final reports from departmental heads.

There were people called with last requests. Some wanted promotion for friends.

OFFICIAL GOOD-BY

The new City Hall Annex was dedicated with fitting ceremony. There was a final meeting of the Council.

And then there was the official "good-by" to the people. Mayor Fitzgerald's "Town Meeting" in Faneuil Hall. Some say the like of this affair had never before been seen in Boston.

A thousand people came down into the market district at noon—those who came too late failed to connect with a seat—and listened for an hour while the Mayor read from many typewritten pages just what John F. Fitzgerald thinks of the Boston Finance Commission and, on the other hand, what John F. Fitzgerald thinks of John F. Fitzgerald. It will betray no confidence to say that the Mayor doesn't think exactly as well of the "Fin. Com." as he does of John F. Fitzgerald.

And, by the same token, it may also be written here that every man and every woman in Faneuil Hall early yesterday afternoon—judging from the demonstration—shares to a "T" Mr. Fitzgerald's opinion in both instances.

UGLY RUMOR DISPELLED.

There was an ugly little rumor around town in the middle of the afternoon that the Mayor-elect had not invited Mr. Fitzgerald to attend the Curley inauguration exercises tomorrow forenoon in Tremont Temple. The truth is, that the retiring Mayor has been treated with the customary courtesy by the Mayor-to-be. Mr. Fitzgerald, therefore, will assist at Mr. Curley's inauguration.

It is true, however, that Mr. Curley did not go to Mr. Fitzgerald's big day in Faneuil Hall. This may be reasonably explained by the fact that the Mayor-elect was hidden away somewhere, putting the finishing touches to tomorrow's address. He was said to be as busy as a nailer.

Everybody appeared to be concerned yesterday about Mr. Fitzgerald's future.

The Mayor will "loaf around the house for a few days."

He will write a few pieces for his weekly newspaper.

In a week or two, he will drop out of sight (can anybody imagine "Fitz" dropping out of sight?) and run away with one or two of the children, to be gone three weeks. Where? Off to Sunny Italy, or nearby in our Sunny South. The betting last night was two to one on the South.

After that?

Business!

BARKIS IS WILLING.

And run for United States Senator, perhaps? Eh! What?

A reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN marking lights in the Mayor's office at City Hall at 11 o'clock in the evening—the Mayor was there until well into the night—tramped around to the back door, climbed the stairs and fired the question:

"Senator?"

At the moment it was raining "like all possessed." The janitors out in School street were two young rivers, scooting along to a Washington-street ocean.

"Come here," said the Mayor, beckoning his caller to the window. "What do you think of that? Getting everything ready for Mayor Curley! He will not have a look coming. Washing every street and every alley in town for him. He'll take over a city properly laundered."

"Some think, Your Honor," said the reporter, "that you will be next to welcome you as United States Senator."

"I don't know about that," said Mr. Fitzgerald, "I don't know about that. We shall have to await developments. Should the time ever come when the people regard me as the most available man for that high office I shall be perfectly willing to consider the matter."

"But I have at this moment absolutely no political ambition of any sort whatever. I feel that I ought to have a rest. I believe the people of Boston want that I should have a rest. I think we shall all of us be the better for seeing another fellow in the arena for a while. I am glad to surrender it to him.

PLEASED WITH NEW JOB.

"I want to cut aloof from city politics, and from City Hall and its affairs—such as I possibly can.

"Nothing has given me more pleasure for many months, indeed, than the notation today, through Secretary McKibben, that I had been named by the Directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce to be Chairman of the Foreign Trade Committee of the Chamber. When I think of the stranded relations of only a few years ago, and consider such an honor as this, it makes me feel younger and stronger and happy —and humble. I am grateful to everybody."

SIGNS $25,000 ORDER.

One of the last official acts of the Mayor was to sign an order appropriating $25,000 for a beginning on the proposed Horticultural building in the Fenway.

"One of the ambitions of my life," he explained, "The city owns thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of rare plants and fine shrubs and beautiful flowers. When Winter comes along they have for many years been housed in East Cottage street. . . I have contended that there ought to be a magnificent home for them in the Fenway, so that Sunday concerts for the people out there every Sunday through the Winter. Who isn't in favor of it? The vote is unanimous!

The Mayor also signed an order for a building at Tenneah Beach, out in the Neponset district. This being the beach frequented by the Fitzgerald youngsters, their "Pa" smiled as he signed his name to the draft.

Mr. Fitzgerald did all the talking at his Town Meeting, except when three or four citizens called, at different times, for "three cheers for the greatest Mayor Boston ever had!" or "the greatest living Bostonian!"

When he had done "laying out" the Finance Commission, there were cries from all over the house for "Sweet Adeline."

"Fitz" shook his head.

"AMERICA" THEN "ADELINE"

"America," he insisted, and "America" it was. Everybody arose to sing.

But the crowd would not be comforted, and finally the Mayor sang a verse or two of Boston's national air:

In the evening when I sit alone
a-dreaming
Of days gone by, love, when you were near,
There's a picture in my heart oft appearing Brings back the days, love, to me so dear.

In one of the galleries sat Mrs. Fitzgerald, the Misses Rose, Agnes and Eunice, and Masters Tom, John, Joe and Fred Fitzgerald. The young folks helped "Daddy" out on the chorus—the whole house came in strong, there—and there were tears in Miss Rose's blue eyes.

After which, a thousand men and women walked upon the stage, Indian file, shook hands with the Mayor of the day, said au revoir and passed on.

What most of them said was:

"Governor next, Fitz"!

"Go after that Senatorship"! or—

"You're the chap who put Boston on the map!"

"What I liked most about it," the Mayor said, "was the humanness of the whole thing. The greatest city in the world, Boston, and the best people."

SHORT EXERCISES FOR NEW MAYOR

Big Rush for Tickets For the Inaugural in Tremont Temple.

In the presence of between three and four thousand of the most distinguished people of the city and State, James M. Curley, will take the oath of office as the Mayor of Boston in Tremont Temple at 10:30 tomorrow morning. Faneuil Hall was at first selected in which to hold the inaugural exercises, but the unprecedented demand for tickets, caused a change in the plans and it was decided to engage Tremont Temple.

From present indications the exercises will be the shortest in many years. Mr. Curley's address will be somewhat shorter than that of Mayor Fitzgerald's, and it is said, will deal, for the most part with the development of the waterfront and the city for commercial purposes.

ORGAN FOR ORCHESTRA.

Unlike the usual inaugural, this one will be without the orchestra or the band. The only music will be rendered on the organ in the temple. John P. Hession, the organist of St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury has been selected by the Mayor-elect to furnish the music. Before the exercises commence, Mr. Hession will play selections from Bach, Mendelssohn, Haendel, Widor and Whiting.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Mayor-elect Curley, Mayor Fitzgerald, members of the City Council, Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Court, Rt. Rev. Monsignor M. J. Splaine, rector of the Holy Cross Cathedral, and specially invited guests will assemble in one of the side rooms.

At 10:30 the members and members-elect of the City Council, preceded by City Messenger Edward L. Leary will proceed to the platform, where Councilman Ballantyne, who will preside, will call the meeting to order. Councilmen Attridge and Collins will then leave the platform, go to the assembly room and escort the Mayor, Mayor-elect and other officials to the hall.

WILL TAKE OATH.

City Clerk James Donovan will go through the customary procedure of reading the certificates from the election commissioners of the persons elected at the polls. He will then administer the oath to the three new members of the Council, Daniel J. McDonald, William Woods and George W. Coleman.

Councilman Ballantyne then introduces the new Mayor, who will deliver his inaugural address. It is believed that this will take about a half an hour and will be somewhat shorter than that of his predecessors. At the conclusion of the address Mr. Hession will close the exercises by playing "America." The members of the City Council will go to the chamber in City Hall where the first formal meeting will be held.

Among those on the platform during the exercises will be: Governor Walsh and members of his staff, Lieutenant-Governor Barry, Monsignor Splaine, Mayor Fitzgerald, members of the City Council, City Messenger, City Clerk, former Mayor Curley and one of the Governor's Council, Senators and Representatives in the Legislature, Cardinal O'Connell, Rabbi Fleischer, Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, other clergymen, members of the city departments and other State officials.

BIG RUSH FOR TICKETS.

For the past three days, D. Henry Sullivan, chairman of the Park and Recreation Department, has been decorating the hall and platform with shrubbery and potted plants from the city's greenhouse.

The hall, which will seat less than 3,000 people, will be taxed to its capacity. Already 2,500 applications have been made for tickets. Most of the tickets have been reserved for city and State officials and friends of the incoming Mayor. All day yesterday Curley's headquarters in the Journal Building was besieged with people looking for tickets. Edmund Lolan, the Mayor-elect's private secretary has been working night and day completing arrangements for the exercises.

With speaking at several meetings, attending dinners, Mr. Curley did not have his inaugural address completed until Friday night. It was several hours later that before the corrections had been made.

Mother Seeks Long Missing Daughter

Mrs. F. Levine of Springfield has asked the AMERICAN to help her get trace of her daughter, Clara Levine, who has not been heard from since August, 1912. She thinks the girl may be living in Boston under an assumed name.

Mrs. Levine has tried police and personal search until she is in despair. Dispatches from Springfield say that the mother will pay a substantial reward for any clue to Clara.

The missing daughter was only seventeen years old when she left home. She is, or was then, of striking complexion. She was five feet and two inches tall, well proportioned and weighed 120 pounds.

Society at Benefit for Roxbury Home

Five hundred persons, including a large contingent of society debutantes and matrons were present last night at the musicale of the Junior Charity Club held in the ball room of the Copley-Plaza from 8 to 10 to raise funds to pay off the mortgage upon the Old Ladies' Home at No. 59 Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury.

The alumni of the University of Maine held its twenty-third annual banquet at the American House last night, with about 200 sons of Orono present. Frank Eastman '88, was the evening's toastmaster, and introduced speakers President Robert J. Aley, Dean James N. Hart, '85, and others. Much disappointment was felt over the absence of Governor William T. Haines, '76, who at the last moment was unable to come.

Walsh at Dinner of Georgetown Club

One hundred members of the Georgetown University Club of New England held their annual dinner at the Exchange Club last night. Governor Walsh, who with Justice Charles A. Sullivan of the Supreme Court, were the guests of honor, paid a high tribute to the instructors of Georgetown.

Man Is Slashed in Cambridge Fight

Angelo Visco, twenty-six, was taken to the Cambridge Relief Hospital last night with a ten-inch slash in his neck, as the result of a row between six men, which took place shortly after 8 o'clock in Lambert street, East Cambridge. Visco refused to name his companions.

Press Club Again to Entertain Singers

One of the most elaborate musical evenings ever arranged by a private club in Boston will take place at the Press Club next Tuesday evening, when Mme. Luisa Terrazzini, the coloratura soprano, and Titta Ruffo will be guests. A large number of State and city officials will attend.

SOCIETY BUDS SEE HOCKEY GAME

Another Dazzling Crowd Cheers Harvard in Arena Contest With McGill.

The Boston bud was out in all her dimpled glory at the Arena last night to see Harvard cross hockey sticks with McGill University and possibly to let the admiring Canadian rooters who came down with the visitors see what a galaxy of Boston society girls is really like.

Also—it was another Harvard night, so far as cheering, squealing and clapping hands for the Crimson players went.

When Harvard led off with a goal in the first period the Arena rang with applause until the ice almost cracked.

The weather was mean, but 4,500 enthusiasts turned out and the society buds were as numerous as ever.

Gowns as elaborate as an indoor ice sport will permit and furs whose cost and style knew no limit, added to the smartness and color of the scene.

Albert C. Burrage and Miss Elizabeth Burrage entertained four guests in their box.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hornblower were hosts at another box gathering, as were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Knowles. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson were among the keenly interested spectators. Arthur Winslow was there with one his daughters, Miss Sarah Winslow.

Miss Elizabeth Bennett, one of the season's buds, Miss Helen Draper, Miss Ruth Anthony, Miss Lillian Cotton, Miss Irene Caffrey and Miss Dorothy Forbes were among the bright-eyed girls who followed the swift play with appreciative glances.

Lieutenant-Governor Barry entertained a box party of friends. Peter A. Dyer was host to another party.

Chelsea Couple Married; March 1 Played by People's Band.

A romance of the Salvation Army ended in the ringing of wedding bells last night for the "hallelujah" marriage in the Central Church, Chelsea, of Miss Lizzie J. Ryan to William W. Hussey, members of the Chelsea corps.

The couple first met when they were assigned to the Chelsea corps. The church was crowded with army delegations all over Greater Boston, and the army service was conducted with playing by the People's Palace Band. Colonel Adam Gifford performed the ceremony, assisted by his staff. Miss Gertrude Evans, of the Army, and William T. Hussey, who is not a relative of the groom, were the only attendants.

Jail Chauffeurs in Mail Strike

Bay State Now Without a Tax Law

Tax Commissioner Trefry has discovered that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is without laws by which taxes may be assessed for the present year. The trouble is caused by the codification of election laws which by accident wiped out a paragraph providing for the assessment of taxes.

VERMONT STATE SCHOOL BURNED

Sixty Boy Prisoners Escape—Burlington Sends Aid at $200,000 Fire.

VERGENNES, Vt., Jan. 31.—Fire destroyed the administration building of the Vermont State Industrial school here this afternoon, with a loss of $200,000. During the fire, when guards were fighting the flames from spreading to five other buildings of the institution, sixty boys escaped. Tonight police of surrounding towns were searching for the escaped prisoners.

There were 200 boys in the institution, where all the criminal minors of Vermont were confined.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It had assumed such headway when discovered that the local department was unable to stop its progress. At the alarm of "fire" all the boys who, for bad behavior, were confined in cells, were liberated. The 200 boys were given their freedom and most of them aided the guards in fighting the fire.

The fire burned for three hours before it was under control. A company of firemen with a steamer arrived from Burlington and did effective work in preventing the spread of the flames to the other buildings.

Argentina Meat Imports Increase

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 31.—Exports of meats from the Argentine to the United States are increasing. During the past week 25,000 quarters of frozen and chilled beef have been shipped as well as 14,000 carcasses of mutton and 7,000 carcasses of lamb.

DIAZ RING REAL POWER IN MEXICO

Representative of Big Four Now in Paris Trying to Raise Funds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31. — The Huerta government in the city of Mexico is being run by a "Quadrilatero," or ring, and neither General Huerta nor his prominent conferee, General Blanquet, are admitted to its counsels.

The "cuadrilatero" is composed of four persons, Senors Lozano, minister of public works; Moheno, minister of foreign relations; Naranjo, minister of public instruction; and Olaguivel attorney-general. This information has been received here by a Mexican who is in touch with influential men in his native country.

Further information discloses the fact that this ring is in communication with Senor Limantour, former minister of finance under General Diaz, who is now in Paris trying to raise funds.

One of Limantour's closest friends, Senor Rosendo Pinedo, is in Mexico City looking over things, and is said to be a guiding spirit in the ring although not exactly identified with the group of four. Pinedo is leader of the Cientifico group of Mexicans and the successor of the late Romero Rubio its founder, who schooled Diaz.

Through Pinedo the group has instructed Limantour in Paris to raise funds at any cost, and it is understood that he is now in touch with a banking group in Europe in which the Lazard Freres are prominent.

ELKS TO BURY 19 OF ARCADIA FIRE VICTIMS

INTERMENT AT MOUNT HOPE

The unidentified dead who died in the Arcadia fire horror, who died that Boston might see the need of better laws to save the lives of other lodgers like them, and whose bodies have lain for two months unclaimed in the City Hospital Morgue, have been saved from a pauper's burial. Instead of being borne unwept and unhonored to hasty graves in potter's field, the fire victims are to be carried to their last resting place in honor.

Through the generosity of Boston Lodge of Elks they will be given one of the most memorable funerals ever held in Boston. This will be conducted next Sunday afternoon.

There are nineteen bodies. Sixteen of them are unidentified. Their names will probably never be known. The other three are named, having been identified by fellow lodgers who survived the terrible holocaust. The names are believed to be fictitious—the names they gave when they took the cheap lodgings the night before the fire.

But over them all—named and nameless alike—will be said the same rites had they died in wealth instead of poverty.

In nineteen hearses furnished by the Elks they will be taken from the morgue to Mount Hope Cemetery, after appropriate services either in the morgue chapel or in a church.

Through the streets then will move the procession, nineteen caskets, each banked with flowers, a large delegation of Elks and a line of carriages.

CURLEY TO SPEAK

Prominent men will speak their eulogy. Mayor-Elect Curley, who will then be Mayor, and who is initiated into the Elks today, will be one of the speakers. Exalted Ruler Timothy E. McCarthy of the lodge last night appointed two committees to perfect the arrangements this week for the unusual funeral.

The two has bought a special lot in the Mount Hope Cemetery, and in this nineteen graves will be made. Whether each grave is to be marked with a separate headstone or all are to be given one large memorial stone has not been decided. The services are expected to begin next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

When the Arcadia lodging house burned on December 3, Exalted Ruler McCarthy told Mayor Fitzgerald the Elks would bury all unclaimed bodies of victims. There were held eight weeks in the hope that some mother, or sister or other relative might here and there identify a body.

NINETEEN REMAINED.

However, though thousands came to the morgue, and most of them gazed through tear-stained eyes at the dead in their search for lost kinsmen, the nineteen remained unclaimed.

The committees appointed last night were:

Undertakers who will furnish the hearses and caskets: Frederic J. Crosby, David N. Curtis, Patrick J. McArdle, John Connelley, William Powderly, Andrew J. Grannora, Cristopher McCraffrey, Thomas E. Hafferty, J. O. Cleary, Louis A. Fasco, Thomas J. Lane, Louis Jones, J. J. Sullivan, William Thomas, Patrick J. Brady.

General Committee: Exalted Ruler McCarthy, Colonel John H. Dunn, Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, Dr. Frederick L. Hogan, Thomas D. Rice, Alfred E. Wellington, Matthew T. Birmingham, George Victor Gavanna, J. Edward Johnson and Daniel J. Kane.

Boston Woman Declares She Helped to Pay for House in Worcester.

Mrs. Ethel E. Wilkins, the statuesque Boston cloak model, who has filed a breach of promise suit against Charles E. Patterson for $10,000, following her midnight entry into the home where Patterson and his three-weeks' bride were asleep, said yesterday in Worcester that she is very sorry for the bride.

"I am very sorry that anything of this kind has occurred," said Mrs. Wilkins, "especially for the bride's sake. I know she must feel deeply grieved. I sincerely feel the same. I have no ill feeling toward the girl who moved and I don't believe she knew what was going on, just as I was kept in ignorance by Mr. Patterson that he had been married."

WILL PRESS SUIT.

Young Mrs. Patterson, who was Miss Jennie Lund of Gloucester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lund, said over the telephone that she did not believe any of the stories about her husband and that she would not talk any more, as her husband could do the talking.

The Pattersons were married at Nashua, N. H., on January 8. Patterson is thirty-three years and is employed as chauffeur by Lucius J. Knowles of Worcester. He and his bride are living in a house on Beechwood street, that city, which Mrs. Wilkins declares she has been helping to buy and furnish.

According to Mrs. Wilkins, this part ownership in the Beechwood house is one of the most exasperating features of the whole case. At the Hotel Carlyle, Worcester, where Mrs. Wilkins is now resting from nervous shock, she said:

"I intend to press my suit to the finish. I have property now in the Patterson house, and I surely deserving of some redress for the money I have given time and again to pay on the mortgage."

Mrs. Wilkins was divorced four years ago. She says she has been a close friend of Patterson for the last seven years and that he and his mother and sister understood well that they were to marry.

PATTERSON'S SCHEDULE.

Mrs. Wilkins even says that Patterson saw her after his marriage. According to her declaration, Patterson mingled his meetings with her and his wedding plans into the following complicated schedule:

January 1—Patterson met Mrs. Wilkins in Boston.

January 8—Patterson married Miss Lund.

January 20—Called on Mrs. Wilkins in Boston.

January 24—Told a friend he thought the world of Mrs. Wilkins.

January 27—Spent the evening with Mrs. Wilkins and suggested they go to Philadelphia.

January 28—Mrs. Wilkins broke into the Beechwood house on information that Patterson was married.

Keep School Children's Heads Clean

Don't pull their hair out with a fine comb or insert with poisonous drugs. As a preventive and cure, the simple but sure remedy, Resinol Ointment, supplied by physicians and druggists, should be followed by every mother of children. Wet the hair only, water and rub thoroughly with Pittsburgh's Hair Soap, a medicated soap specially made essentially for this purpose, which can be obtained at any druggist's. This soap will form a rich lather, which should be allowed to remain fifteen minutes or more—in bad cases it should remain over night—rinse off with water, rub dry and comb the hair. For itching, irritating scalps, dandruff, keep the hair free from dust or oil by shampooing with this soap and it will never itch or need dressing. Then it will keep it soft and fluffy, prevent its falling and promote its healthy growth. A little Resinol Ointment, as a preventive, should also save this notice. Do not take any substitute as Fitzgerald Soap Co., Collingwood, N. J., will send you this soap by mail on receipt of price.

EX-SENATOR DOES WORK FOR ELLIOTT

George L. Barnes Will Look After New Haven Interests on Beacon Hill.

Shortly after Howard Elliott took the presidency of the New Haven road, on account of the malodorous conditions under which New Haven legislation was passed, heavy expenses and talk of crookedness, he announced that he proposed to run the legislative end of the railroad differently and, as he expressed it, "when the New Haven required legislation, or was opposed to it," he intended to go up to the State House and knock on the door and tell the Legislature just what the New Haven required."

The Boston News Bureau yesterday announced the appointment of George L. Barnes as sole legislative counsel for the New Haven Railroad. Two years ago Mr. Barnes was a State Senator. Mr. Barnes is at present a member of the Republican State Committee and almost had the chairmanship forced on him last week, and he would have had it, only he knew it wouldn't look very well when he was gazetted to his new office.

Mr. Barnes has been a very active and loud accelerator and hinderer of legislation for financial interests and public service corporations at the State House for some time. He has there considerable business for the insurance companies, for the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, for the East Boston Gas & Coke Company and other companies selling necessities to the public.

Mr. Barnes is a brilliant speaker and socially is genial, but he is the same kind of counsel the New Haven has always had at the State House and doesn't differ in any degree from the genial William H. Coolidge, or the other gentlemen who have assisted the Legislature in legislating.

It will be interesting to see whether he is going to take Mr. Elliott's place in "knocking on the State House front door" and in letting the legislators know the New Haven's desires; also whether he has friends enough in the Legislature to make his appointment at the present moment, with so much important railroad legislation pending, of great assistance to the road.

Chinaman Wins Citizen's Rights

Yung Dun Yot May Return After Trip to China.

Yung Dun Yot, born in San Francisco, taken to China during childhood, educated as a youngster in the Gloucester schools and now anxious to make another Chinese trip with the proper papers allowing him to return to this country, was yesterday declared to be an American citizen by Federal Commissioner Hayes. Owing to his early China trip it was contended that Yung was not an American. Customs Inspector William Stepp of Gloucester testified to Yung's having attended school in the latter place.

MRS. LYMAN READY TO GIVE DIVORCE

Wife of State Official Denies Midnight Raid Figures in Her Affairs.

A sensational midnight raid by State Smoke Inspector Lewis J. Lyman and a squad of men from the Burns Detective Agency, on a fashionable apartment house on Commonwealth avenue, where a wealthy Boston jeweler has a suite, became known yesterday.

Mr. Lyman and his detectives broke down the door of this jeweler's suite. Occupants of other suites came to their doors. Some protested against the racket. Others urged Mr. Lyman on. The spectators were in various stages of dishabille.

Finally Mr. Lyman gained entry to the jeweler's suite. He walked in, looked about him, came out quietly and departed with his detectives, saying, "I am satisfied."

Mr. Lyman is the husband of Mrs. Gladdings Lyman, a comely blonde on the sunny side of thirty and who has not been living with her husband of late. They have two children. She is the daughter of Joseph D. Giddings, who has a hat-cleaning establishment on Temple place. Mrs. Lyman is back at her father's home but her children are with their father.

At the time the news of Mr. Lyman's midnight raid became known there was a report that Mr. Lyman was contemplating alienation proceedings. Mrs. Lyman was asked about the matter. She said frankly:

"If my husband wishes a divorce he can have it. My husband has not supported me for some time. I can prove by physicians that, when I returned to my father and mother there were bruises on my body.

"I had prepared papers seeking a legal separation, but my husband refused to agree to them.

"I assure you there is more than one side to this. The other side will come out in due time. I do not fear anything he might say.

"I met the man whose place was raided after I left my husband. He had nothing to do with my leaving Mr. Lyman. I will never go back to Mr. Lyman and I will not oppose any action for divorce."

To Try $75,000 Love Suit Feb. 4

The $75,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Sarah A. McDonald, twenty-eight, against Frank A. Messenger, Jr., sixty-one, wool importer, at No. 387 Washington street, has been assigned for a jury trial next Wednesday, in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Harvard Club Has Nearly 4000 Members

The Harvard Club of Boston has a membership of nearly 4,000 graduates. The clubhouse is crowded every afternoon and evening. A popular luncheon and dinner is served.

MRS. LYMAN, WHO WOULD WELCOME DIVORCE SUIT

State official's wife declares she once drew up separation papers, but husband refused to sign them.

Police Seek Missing Waltham Man of 93

James Slater, familiarly known as "Cap" Slater, ninety-three years old, of No. 12 Pine street, Waltham, is being searched for by the police following his disappearance on Friday morning, when Mr. Slater, who is a Civil War veteran, boarded a Boston-bound train. He is five feet nine inches tall, slightly stooping and has a gray mustache. He wore a black coat, black soft hat and carried a cane.

MACULLAR PARKER COMPANY 400 Washington St.

OPPER OUTDONE BY REGULATORS OF PRESS GALLERY

Reporters Who Openly Fight for Reforms Now in "Underground" Class.

CUSHING EXPLAINS RULE

What they have just done about "regulating" the reporters at the State House calls for a cartoon by Mr. F. Opper.

This is the story:

There were reporters at the State House, representing newspapers, near newspapers, weeklies, weaklies, bureaus and the like, who also took on special and more or less secret employment through the kindness of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Some of these reporters signed vouchers for their pieces of silver, the vouchers are uncovered by other reporters, explosions followed, and the Public Service Commission began looking into this.

Great indignation!

Widespread demand that this will have to be stopped!

So the present Legislature STARTED OUT to stop it.

A Progressive representative from the town of Hopkinton in Middlesex County, Edward Carr—who is also a Boston lawyer—innocently offered a rule which would have put the corporation reporter out of business. This was Mr. Carr's idea of the right sort of rule:

"No person shall be deemed to be a Legislative reporter, or shall have a seat in the reporters' gallery, if he receives compensation from, or is in any sense an agent or employe of, any public service corporation having business before the General Court."

What happened with this proposition was that it was referred to the House Committee on Rules."

The House Committee on Rules is the committee which virtually runs the House of Representatives. It is called the "Speaker's Cabinet." The Boss of the Boss committee is the Speaker himself.

BOSSES GET BUSY.

And the Boss Committee acted on the Carr resolution, stripped it of all reference to public service corporations and came to the surface with this:

Every Legislative reporter desiring admission to the House press gallery shall state in writing that he is NOT THE AGENT OR REPRESENTATIVE OF ANY PERSON OR CORPORATION INTERESTED IN LEGISLATION BEFORE THE GENERAL COURT, and will not act as representative of any such person or corporation while he retains his place in the gallery, but nothing herein contained shall prevent such Legislative reporter from engaging in other employment, provided such other employment is specifically approved by the Committee on Rules and reported to the House.

Note that they are "cleaning up the gallery" by keeping out every reporter who will not state in writing that he is not the agent or representative of any person or corporation interested in legislation before the General Court.

"We must clear newspapers properly and lawfully interested in ALL legislation before the General Court!"

They propose they ought to be.

They say at the State House that the gentleman who put this one over is none other than Speaker Grafton D. Cushing.

HOW IT WORKS.

A reporter who once represented a newspaper which put the Massachusetts bucket shops out of business asked Speaker Cushing yesterday how newspapers could today push such legislation if the new rule is carried out literally.

"Now you is exactly the thing," said the Speaker, "reporters must be reporters, and in no degree the pushers of such bills as their journals happen to favor at the moment. Take the case of the AMERICAN'S 'pure food' bills for example."

"Do you mean that under this rule reporters for the AMERICAN must not speak to members concerning the 'pure food' bills?"

"I certainly do," said Cushing.

And there you are, fellow citizens! They start a pious and holy war to weed out gentlemen of the press who are discovered to be taking New Haven money, and they bring down reporters who openly boost "pure food" laws.

Can you beat it?

"We'll Paint E'm On," Say the Chorus Girls

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Tights that will wash off—the painted variety—will just have to become fashionable. For the Chicago Grand Opera Company is in a tight place—in fact, in twelve tight places.

Some rude person who is not interested in community welfare has stolen that many pairs of chorus girls' tights. And the weather prediction is "colder, with variable winds."

Guy Hardy, assistant manager of the opera company, was much incensed this morning when he reported the theft to the police.

"Of course, said Mr. Hardy, "tights hardly constitute a topic for general conversation, but there is a lot of money invested in tights, and we are BUYS out. Meantime the girls may they will paint them on.

Charge 2 Extorted Coin from Laborers

Indictment With 11 Counts Against Nawn Employes.

On an indictment containing eleven counts alleging extortion from laborers who worked in the Copley square section of the Riverway tunnel, Edward McDermott and John Kaleda, employed by the Hugh Nawn Construction Company, will be called for trial in the Suffolk Superior Court the second week in February.

It is alleged that some of the laborers, who received as low as $9 a week, had to give up $5 to get the job, and then were called upon to pay 25 or 50 cents each week from their pay.

Muddy Skin—Blotches and Pimples

Are More Quickly Removed and Pure, Colorful Skin Restored by the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Than by Any Other Method.

There is no common sense in pimples, liver spots, blotches, etc., marring your beauty and if you will read the rest of this announcement you will see exactly why this is so.

When you eat you fill the entire blood with all manner of waste matter. If decay and fermentation of a harmful kind arise then this poisonous matter is taken into the blood and must be thrown off.

"I'll Always Be Glad That I used Stuart's Calcium Wafers, Everybody Now Speaks of My Complexion."

The blood is somewhat like a stream of water. It has the ability to cleanse very quickly; but if it is filled with such matter as it cannot handle then it overflows and leaves debris and refuse of all kinds along its course.

The skin of the face is so tender that the impurities in the blood break easily through. The pores of the skin under the influence of poisonous refuse matter become unable to do their work. Then it is that the blood is compelled to throwing waste matter into them, filling them up until they appear like little bills of discolored impurities.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are composed of powerful, blood cleansing ingredients. One of these—Calcium Sulphide—is the strongest blood purifier known.

They go into your blood just like the nutrition from your food. They follow every vein in the body. They open the pores. They help the blood. They kill the elements that cause skin disorders and, better than all else, they do their work speedily, gently and yet forcibly and well.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are pleasant to take and you may obtain a box any where from any druggist. Price, 50 cents.

"Well Whats You think o' a Big Feed Without Pain?"

A Stuart's tablet goes into the stomach like food. It contains nothing but natural digestive elements and when at work in a weak stomach it aids the worn out stomach to supplies the right mixture of stomach juices and under the action of the stomach it thoroughly prepares all the food. Thus when the stomach work is done the meal goes into the small intestines in better shape to be assimilated by the system.

One element of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is so strong and efficient that one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of mixed food, such as meats, vegetables, grains, fluids, etc.

The simple habit of eating a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal will readjust your digestion in a very short time so that you will no longer need assistance.

Dr. Delano Scores America on Radium

Too Much Aloofness on Important Plant, He Declares.

"Radium is a plant of too vigorous a growth to be sniffed at. America ought to raise some plants of its own," asserts Dr. Samuel Delano of Boston in the current number of the the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

"Radium has already a past and has been recording history at a rapid rate, especially within the last year.

"The state of things here in America is by no means creditable.

"So far as it is conditioned upon the expenditure involved or the inability to obtain material. It may be pardoned, but as an expression of indifference it is by no means so easily defended. Radium has to encounter the carelessness of the 'you can't freeze me' character, but nowhere could this be less justified than in the case of radium.

My Meals Don't Hurt a Bit

A Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Will Add Your Exhausted Stomach to Digest Any Meal.

Isn't it a real joy to see children eat? There is almost a ridiculous humor about it. The same joy that a child feels at meal time should be experienced by "grown ups" and would be if they acted only do as children do.

The work, worries and woes of adult life exhaust the digestive apparatus and nature very often is not allowed time or opportunity to renew or repair the exhausted organs and depleted digestive juices.

BEWARE 'FATIGUE' BUG, SAYS DOCTOR

Most Dangerous of All Health Destroyers, Declares Prof. Waters.

CAUSE OF BREAKDOWNS

...There's one little microbe—and it'll get YOU if you don't watch out!

It is popularly phrased the "fatigue" bug.

It has no wings, or legs, or stinger. But, according to physicians and scientists, it is about the most insidiously pernicious little destroyer of the human system yet unearthed. Attorney Louis B. Brandeis put the fatigue bug on the map in a brief to curtail the hours of working women filed last week with the Supreme Court of the United States. The brief showed how health, morals and efficiency are impaired by fatigue. And that fatigue brought on by excessive hours of toil will eventually poison the whole system—so one doesn't careful not to contract it.

MUST BEGIN RIGHT EARLY.

Dr. William H. Waters, Professor of Dermatology at the Boston University School of Medicine at East Concord, N. H., during a talk of investigating declares that not only is fatigue the beginning of a toxic condition, but that the fact that the disease continues the more shocked becomes the system with the poisonous effects. He says that the slowly but surely breaking down of the tissues causes:

"If I focus my attention once or twice or three times each day, a small amount of energy is expended in the process and a correspondingly small amount of waste products is thrown into the blood to be carried off. The blood consequently have no trouble in dismissing this waste.

"But if I sit for hours with my arms and keep doing so for an hour and the excess of toxins formed in this overexertion—this fatigue—is felt over the whole body because of the inability of the natural processes to take care of this excess waste.

"The body is an engine whose fuel is what we eat. The wastes from the body are the ashes. The more work we do the more fuel it requires for consumption and the more ashes there are to be thrown off.

EXTENSIVE POISONS.

"Fatigue is the result or excessive amounts of poison formed into the system. Some of the body is being poisoned. Now it was real before this excess becomes too great in the natural course of things, so that the poison is gradually carried away and the sense of fatigue disappears, but supposing we continue to force our bodies in this half-poisoned state continually. It is reasonable to believe that in time the whole system will become permanently affected. That is what happens.

"Often it requires long periods before over-fatigued persons are able to eliminate the fatigue poisons from their systems. Sometimes they never do."

Would Have Tango in the Synagogue

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 31.—The Rev. Rudolph I. Coffee, rabbi of the Temple of Life Congregation, sees no reason why places should not be provided in synagogues for dancing the tango. He made this statement to a audience of young men and women in an address on "Dancing, Modern and Ancient."

"My observation of the tango and other modern dances of its kind is that they are innocent when they make a man forget his position and a woman her modesty."

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Nature warns you when the track of health is not clear. Kidney and bladder troubles cause many annoying symptoms and great inconvenience both day and night.

Unhealthy kidneys may cause lumbago, rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles, attacks like headache or indigestion, as time passes you may have a sallow complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes feel as though you had heart trouble, may have plenty of ambition but no strength, get weak and lose flesh.

If such conditions are permitted to continue, serious results may be expected. Kidney Trouble in its very worst form may steal upon you.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are among the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patients, who usually content themselves with doctoring for the effects, while the original disease may constantly undermine the system.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run down condition, try taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. The great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys improve, they will help the other organs to health.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., which you will find on every bottle.

Sample Size Bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE—You may obtain a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. This gives you the opportunity to prove the remarkable merit of this medicine. They will also send you a book of valuable information, containing many of the thousands of grateful letters received from men and women who say they found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed in kidney, liver and bladder troubles. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample size bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Be sure to say you read this offer in the Boston Sunday American.

ELIOT OPPOSES AID TO SPANISH WAR VETERANS

As Head of Civil Service Association Protests Preference in Examinations.

SAYS BONUS PLAN IS WRONG

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard is as firmly opposed as ever to giving Spanish War veterans any preference or any bonus in Massachusetts Civil Service examinations.

Dr. Eliot's Civil Service Association served notice last night of an intention to put up at the State House this year, a "stiffer fight than ever" against the demands of the veterans of '98. This year the Spanish War boys raise the issue in a request for an addition of 5 per cent. in civil service marks.

A renewal yesterday of the "Civil Service Association" fight on the Spanish War veterans directed attention to the unprecedented scramble of Republican officeholders all over Massachusetts to get in under the protecting cover of Civil Service.

The Civil Service Association is not opposed to this scramble for protection. The C. S. A. isn't particularly opposed to much of anything, according to its first announcement of the legislative year, except the request of the Spanish war vets.

President Eliot is president of the Civil Service Association, George U. Crocker, treasurer, and Arthur H. Brooks, the secretary on the firing line.

BIG NAMES ON THE ROLL.

Among the vice-presidents and councillors one finds names as big as Charles Francis Adams, former Governors Brackett, Draper, Guild and Long, Congressman Gillett, Charles S. Hamlin, Samuel W. McCall, Moorfield Storey, Richard H. Dana and James J. Myers.

No less than 100 bills affecting the civil service—in the main adding to the long list of those who are protected—are now before the Committee on Public Service. The hearings, Representative William E. Carney of Charlestown says, will occupy many weeks. Mr. Carney is clerk of the committee.

In a sort of panic, induced, it may be, by the recent sweep of the Democratic party, office-holders in every corner of the State are seeking shelter under the Civil Service.

From the long list of matters already referred to the Committee on Public Service the following are selected as at least timely and illuminating:

- To extend the civil service law to counties.
- That Public Service Commission inspectors be under civil service laws.
- On appointments under civil service laws.
- For extension of civil service laws to employes of counties.
- That civil service law apply to Taunton chief of police.
- That officers and employes of State insane institutions be under civil service.
- To put Revere superintendent of fire alarms under civil service.
- That civil service law be extended to employes of Boston House of Correction of Penal Department.
- To extend civil service laws to Hyde Park police when it was annexed to Boston.
- To extend civil service laws to State employes in charge of steam boilers.
- To put Fall River superintendent of public buildings under civil service.
- To extend civil service law to Chelsea Water Commission.

And so and so on.

TO WAGE STIFF FIGHT.

These propositions may all be meritorius, in the eyes of the Massachusetts Civil Service Association, but not so the request of Spanish War veterans for an addition of 5 per cent. in civil service examination marks.

"We propose," says Secretary Brooks, "to make a stiffer fight than ever aginst the Spanish War Veterans' Act. This measure bobs up this year under the sponsorship of Representative Hurley of Marlboro. The fight is to be around the 5 per cent. addition to the examination mark.

"The Spanish War was hardly over before its veterans sought preference in the civil service. Their numerous bills have been defeated year after year with great difficulty, sometimes by only one vote and sometimes by vetoes. No Governor thus far has failed to affix his veto to all such bills, and to stand firmly for the maintenance of the merit system.

"Owing to the closeness of the marks the bonus of 5 per cent. which they ask this year will often jump a veteran over the heads of twenty or thirty men who do better at the examination. Such legislation is class legislation of the worst kind, and wholly destructive of any true merit system of appointments to Civil Service.

St. Elizabeth Hospital Fund Now $124,000

3-Day Whirlwind Finish Starts Tomorrow

Enthusiastic Cheers Greet Report of Committees at Campaign Headquarters.

"Three more days at $25,000 a day." was the slogan cheered to the echo last night at the meeting of the managers of the St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Last night the big thermometer on the building at No. 451 Washington street was given another upward slide. It went from $108,000, where it stood at noon, to $124,000. At this mark it will stay until noon tomorrow.

The second chapter of the hustling campaign to raise $200,000 for the new hospital opens tomorrow. With a splendid record of the first week to inspire the teams, there is now no question of the whole sum being raised by Wednesday, when the lists are closed.

Enthusiasm enough for a whole State election was let loose at the crowded headquarters, as the different teams answered to the roll call. The answer in each case was as follows:

Staff team, $525; Catholic Union team, $108; Y. M. C. A. team, $135; Metropolitan team, $364; Cosmopolitan team, $57; Teachers' team, $56; M. C. O. F. team, $155; Business Men's team, $1,754.

These sums added to the total already in brought the grand total up to $124,000 in round numbers.

Short but rousing speeches were made by T. J. Falvey, P. A. O'Connell, James H. Carney, ex-Representative William J. Sullivan, Dr. M. J. Cronin, Joseph H. O'Neil, Rev. M. J. Scanlon and others, all calling for renewed exertion to burst the top off the thermometer by Wednesday noon.

SACRED CONCERT TONIGHT.

The tickets for the sacred concert at the Boston Theatre this evening went on sale at the box office yesterday morning and were in large demand. At noon a number of tickets were placed on sale at the campaign headquarters. Large returns are expected from this concert, and the gratitude of the committee was accorded the management of the theatre, A. Paul Keith, Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Wood.

On Monday evening in the performance at the Boston Opera House of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci," Ferrari-Fontana, the sensation of the season in opera circles, will appear. Half of the entire proceeds are to go toward the hospital fund. Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera House Company, will furnish some of his best talent for tonight's concert. The National Theatre will do likewise. The big auditorium will very likely not have a vacant seat when the curtain is run up. Yesterday noon's statement of subscriptions follows:

WILSON MAY FIX LITERACY TEST

Senate Plans to Ask President to Dictate Clause in the Immigration Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Without reaching a vote on the immigration bill the House adjourned tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Chairman Burnett was prevented from forcing a vote by the closeness of test votes on amendments. He claims a two to one vote in the House in favor of the bill, but he could not hold his friends for a late vote.

Representative Murray of Massachusetts presented an amendment that the literacy test should not apply to those immigrants who were coming to escape political or religious persecution or oppression, or who were denied in their home countries the right of free speech guaranteed in this country. By a standing vote of the House members this amendment was defeated 62 to 61. The margin in favor of the bill was shown to be so slight that Mr. Burnett was afraid to trust it further and forced the adjournment. Action on the bill by the House is expected Monday.

President Wilson will be asked by the Senate to dictate the provisions of the literacy clause in the immigration bill. Senator Smith of South Carolina, a member of the Senate Immigration Committee, was instructed today by his Democratic colleagues to get the President's ideas. Chairman Burnett, of the House committee, has stated that President Wilson will not oppose the House bill.

SEEK WILSON'S VIEWS.

"We want to find out just what are the ideas of the President on immigration legislation," said Senator Smith. The Senate immigration bill, fathered by Senator Smith, retains the literacy test of the House bill, and in addition restricts the number of aliens to be admitted to this country, using nationalities as a basis. An arbitrary regulation of 10 per cent. of the total population of a foreign country as the limit of immigration is proposed in Senate amendments to the bill.

Political speeches continued today during the discussion of the literacy test bill in the House. Impassioned speeches against the bill were made by members having large numbers of foreign constituents. Party lines were obliterated.

Representative Goldfogle of New York, with a Jewish district, made a plea for the greatest possible latitude in the admission of immigrants, urging that this country was the haven for the decent, oppressed people of all political and religious beliefs provided they supported established government.

NEED HEALTHY MEN.

"What is needed in this country," he declared, "is immigration consisting of healthy bodies and healthy minds rather than ability to read and write. Admitted immigrants soon learn how to speak the language of this country and soon they become citizens, loyal and good."

"We are legislating in days of hysteria," asserted Representative Kahn of California. "Hysterical men and women throughout this country are driving Congress to legislation that should not be passed."

'Love of Three Kings' Coming February 9

Monday, February 9 is the date set for the first performance in Boston of "The Love of the Three Kings," the opera by the new Italian composer, Italo Montemezzi, which is having unprecedented success in New York. No other work produced in recent years has won such universal admiration.

Praise for Kenny at Love Feast

Mayor Regrets People Failed to Appreciate Councillor.

Political differences were forgotten, and good fellowship prevailed at the "love fest" dinner given by the Mayor and members of the City Council at Young's Hotel yesterday afternoon. Tributes were paid to the Mayor by members of the Council and he in turn returned the compliments. All of the members of the City Government were present except Councillor John A. Coulthurst, who is ill.

In his address the Mayor thanked the City Council for their co-operation during his administration. In offering a tribute to President Kenny, the Mayor said: "It is too bad that the people of Boston do not know know Mr. Kenny as we do. He is a modest man and I believe it is partly due to this that he was unsuccessful in the recent campaign."

Councilmen Smith and Buckley, whose terms expire, were praised for their work. Remarks were made by City Clerk Donovan, Councillors Attridge, Watson, McDonald, Smith and Ballantyne. Edward Dunn spoke for the newspapermen.

At the final session of the Council, held during the day at City Hall, President Kenny was given a gold watch by his associates in the council.

Asks $470,000 for Radium Control

Bill for Appropriation and Immediate Work.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Laying the foundation for a radium monopoly by the federal government, Representative Foster of Illinois, chairman of the Mines and Mining Committee, today introduced in the House a bill appropriating $170,000 for the immediate construction of a government radium factory and $300,000 for the purchase and treatment of radium-bearing ores during the fiscal years 1914 and 1916.

The bill suspends the mining laws so far as to give the government a prior option on eleven deposits of carnote, pitchblend or other ores containing radium in sufficient quantity for extraction, except on condition that the ores be sold exclusively to the United States.

Failure to develop and mine any radium-bearing ores on new mining locations with reasonable diligence and failure to prospect and develop deposits of these ores continuously, or failure to work them for four months consecutively in any year will serve to forfeit the claim.

Kissed Scrubwoman; Teacher Dismissed

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Professor Lafayette Talbot, suspended principal of Public School No. 8 of Hoboken, N. J., was dismissed early today after a stormy star chamber session of the Hoboken Board of Education. The charge against him was that he had hugged and kissed a scrubwoman.

REVOKE LICENSE OF GIRL IN CRASH

Result of Wheeler Auto Tragedy in Worcester—Six Others Also Revoked.

The State Highway Commission yesterday revoked the automobile license of Miss Mary L. Wheeler, twenty-one-years-old daughter of Dr. Charles H. Wheeler of Worcester, and prominent in social circles in that city.

The Commission's action is the outcome of the auto tragedy Christmas Day, in which the young woman's machine collided with a trolley car. Her sister, Miss Anna Wheeler, was hurled out and fatally hurt.

The Commission in its report yesterday said:

"After an investigation of an accident which occurred on the twenty-fifth day of December, in the year of 1913, resulting in the death of Anna Wheeler, of Worcester, and in which and automobile operated by Mary L. Wheeler of Worcester, was involved, and after due notice and hearing held, the Commission is unable to find that the accident occurred without serious fault upon the part of said operator."

Other licenses revoked were:

ARTHUR C. LOOMIS, of Westfield, convicted at Pittsfield on the charge of operating a machine while under the influence of liquor.

LESTER C. WOODWARD, of Kingston, convicted in the Third Plymouth District Court of operating an auto while under the influence of liquor.

RALPH B. NETTLETON, of Newton, whose auto was involved in the death at Warwick, R. I., last November, of Axel Carlson, in an accident.

JOSEPH A. RUSSELL, of Worcester, blamed by the commission for operating a motorcycle at Northboro in an improper manner, resulting in an accident.

GEORGE W. ELDRIDGE, of Boston, convicted in the Superior Court of the unlawful appropriation of an auto.

MILTON F. REYNOLDS, of Brookline, whose auto was involved in the death of Mrs. Francella O. Church in Brookline in an accident.

Mgr. Splain Gives Lecture on "Rome"

Boston Catholic Union listened last night to Rev. Monsignos Splain, D. D., rector of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, in his illustrated lecture, "Rome and the Vatican." John Morton, president of the Union, introduced the speaker, who, at the close of his address was given the enthusiastic thanks of his audience.

ELLEN M. STONE JOINS GREAT BALKAN RELIEF MOVEMENT

from the Turks in Thrace and from the Greeks and Servians when they occupied Macedonia, from which the Allies had just driven the Turks.

THOUSANDS OF CRIPPLES

"Ten thousand soldiers are crippled with amputated hands and feet frozen in the fierce winter last year, as they camped on the unprotected plains of Thrace, besides the many soldiers, crippled from wounds in battle. There are 150,000 orphans, with God knows how many widows, all in need of aid.

"Forty-five thousand of the flower of the army are dead on the battlefields and the treasury is practically empty.

"The one bright spot in the dark picture is that the sooner the plea is met, the sooner will it cease, for in Bulgaria itself and in Albania the people are straining every nerve to provide the extraordinary demand upon them.

"Surely we who are safe, warm, fed and in every way comfortable in this favored land of ours, will share with the multitudes in Bulgaria, Albania and what was Macedonia, in this their time of extreme need.

"Crimson-stained and stripped are all these lands, with blackened remnants of houses and charred bones in many sections, ghastly reminders of awful scenes of cruelty and devastation.

COURAGEOUS PEOPLE

"The condition in Albania parallels that in Bulgaria. In a letter I had recently from an American friend who with his wife has lived in Albania for several years past, he says so urgent was the need that although they had started for the United States they turned back to help in the work of relief. Only a beginning could be made to alleviate the suffering which confronted them on every hand.

"Then he wrote again:

"The courage and bravery of our Albanian mountaineers is beyond description. They have fled to the fifty mountains above the villages to defend themselves against the cruel and unjust advance of the Servians, who have invaded Albania many miles beyond the boundary line fixed by Europe and are now massing divisions of their soldiers and trying to make a further advance.

"Two thousand houses in the Dibre have also been burned and 5,000 people are starving for bread. We are telegraphing for more money with which to relieve them. Large sums are imperatively needed to save long of life.

PACE EXTERMINATION.

"A private message was received in New York some time since by the Rev. H. O. Dwight, L.L. D., formerly of Constantinople, from an American, who a month earlier had traveled from Scutari further into the devastated regions of the province. He wrote:

"The Servians are there engaged upon what is believed to be an attempt to exterminate the population of several Albanian districts. Guard from the Servian army patrol territory definitely assigned to Albania by the Powers at a distance of twenty-five miles within that line on the Albanian side to prevent any one from passing into or out of that region. Thousands of refugees are in the mountains without shelter or food, trying to subsist upon anything they can give them. Of course, they are starving to death.

UNTOLD CRUELTIES.

"I found all the way from Scutari many villages burned and few fields planted. The region had been ravaged in turn by Servians, Montenegrins and by the Turkish army under Essad Pacha, who thus punished the inhabitants for refusing to help him save Turkey as their oppressor. At Crotia, the ancient capital, we heard of fifty and more men and women who had been hanged, shot or cut to pieces by the Servians.'

"Another American friend in Albania wrote very recently of meeting Willard Howard of New York and, turning back with him over a devastated region which this gentleman and his wife had just visited, distributing aid. Mr. Howard says 30,000 refugees, mostly women and children, are starving and freezing in Albania. No relief is reaching these sufferers because of their remoteness from the coast and the difficulty of travel. After Mr. Howard saw our American friends with their knowledge of people and their language and saw their Albanian coworkers, she felt if only sufficieft money is forthcoming relief will speedily reach the suffering.

AWFUL CONDITIONS.

"Conditions are awful there, and wring the great sympathetic heart of humanity because in addition to death dealing destitution, insecurity to life itself still continues in sections which the great Powers of Europe announced a few months since should be Albanian, but which Servia and Greece have occupied in defiance of the great Powers.

"In Ancient Thessalonia, modern Salonica, the consular authorities and our American friends have made work trying to secure justice for prisoners of the Greeks just as they were formerly compelled to try to secure it for the Turks. Yet these are fellow-Christians, those were Mohammedans.

"Calling a relative from Switzerland to help her care for her four little sons, the wife of one man is looking after upward of 1,000 little children in that great city.

"Queen Eleanor, who donned her nurse's garb and herself ministered to her wounded soldiers in hospitals during the war, and King Ferdinand's daughters, the royal princesses, who, denying themselves all luxuries and new additions to their wardrobes or other belongings in their pathetic pleadings for aid for the orphans, joined in this appeal to the great heart of Christendom."

NOTED MISSIONARY HEEDS HUMANITY'S CRY FROM BALKANS

Miss Ellen M. Stone, who pictures awful conditions in war-rent mountains and calls on Americans to aid in relief work.

CLERGY START CAMPAIGN TO RELIEVE BULGARIANS

Leading clergymen of Boston and other big cities of the country have opened a country-wide campaign to secure funds for the relief of the terrible suffering of nearly half a million refugees in the Balkans. Today, through the efforts of the Hearst newspapers, at the direct appeal of Queen Eleanora of Bulgaria, many churches will observe the day as Bulgarian Relief Sunday.

In Greater Boston, though a number of ministers praised the great work of charity last Sunday, these pastors with other prominent clergymen will soon urge Queen Eleanora's plea for help from their pulpits—probably after next Sunday, which will be generally observed as "Go-to-Church" Sunday.

In several cities "Go-to-Church" Sunday will be observed also as Bulgarian Relief Sunday a week from today.

Meanwhile the big fund started by the AMERICAN and the other Hearst newspapers is meeting with splendid enthusiasm in New England as elsewhere. Contributions for the relief of the starving refugees continue to pour in—a superb tribute to those that believe that giving to a worthy cause is real living.

LEADERS IN MOVEMENT.

In Greater Boston some of those foremost in the relief movement are:

Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Nazarian of the People's Temple.

Rev. Dr. C. W. Wendte, corresponding secretary of the Unitarian Association.

Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany of the Church of the Disciples, Brookline.

Rev. Dr. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church.

Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, of Tremont Temple.

Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church.

Over in New York today the big-Relief Sunday. A number of rabbis are actively at the head of the campaign, and the synagogues there represent will contribute to the relief fund. In Atlanta next Sunday will be observed as Bulgarian Sunday. In San Francisco today will be observed. In Chicago and Los Angeles next Sunday will be observed. Rabbi Farber of Los Angeles says the Bulgarian appeal is one that will touch the hearts of every man, woman and child in the United States.

WORK JUST BEGUN.

But the good work has only begun. Other cities and other churches are interested. In many synagogues next Saturday will be the special occasion for contributions to the fund. All these contributions to be made today and in the future will be announced in the Hearst newspapers. The money will then be forwarded directly to Queen Eleanora for distribution through the co-operation of the American Red Cross.

Those for whom the relief is sought are chiefly women, children and babies.

Authorities who doubted and have made persons who doubted the truth have been horrified by their discoveries.

Hundreds of communities subsist upon daily allowances of bread and water.

The price of a loaf of bread has reached the prohibitive rate of thirty-five cents.

Some have huddled into old army tents pitched upon the mountainside. Others, absolutely without shelter, wrap their tattered blankets about them and lie down upon the ground at night. They starve by day and freeze by night.

Only in the larger districts are the refugees given the protection afforded by public buildings. In some provinces the sufferers have been herded into the forts, where schoolchildren are turned over to them as shelter houses.

Listen to this appeal from a minister: The Rev. Charles Wilson, the English Methodist missionary, who has just returned to Sofia from a tour through Thrace, says:

"Mothers, wan and haggard through lack of food, cried out to me as I was walking through the streets: 'Give me bread; for the love of God, give me bread for my children to live.' Women and children are dying through lack of even the barest necessities. Every shilling means a life saved. The proofs of distress are heart-rending, and I am familiar with conditions of life in the lowest slums of London."

MRS. "BILLY" CARTER WHO WANTS TO DIVORCE HUSBAND

Mrs. Carter has so stirred Newport with previous escapades that her suit has caused but little surprise.

CARTER DIVORCE NEW ESCAPADE

Mrs. "Billy's" Action Coincident with That of Her Friend, Mrs. Goelot.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 31.—When conversation languished it has for years been the custom in Newport circles for someone to inquire:

"Well—wonder what Mrs. Billy Carter will do next?"

Thus there was no great surprise here at word of her suit for divorce against her millionaire Philadelphia husband. It was simply another of her remarkable escapades.

More than usual interest attaches, however, because Mrs. Carter is such a very intimate friend of Mrs. Robert Goelet, who likewise is seeking freedom and name. The Carters have a residence here and another at Bryn Mawr. Their divorce proceedings will be heard before a master in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Carter was Lucille Polk of Baltimore, a remarkably beautiful blonde of the type that attracted men of that city. The others were Louise Morris and Edith Jones. Harry Lehr ran in the same set. And here are a few of Mrs. Carter's deeds which have won her first rank among eccentric society circles:

1—Having fallow the leader,' follows Harry Lehr in a wild dash through a fountain in Monument Square—to the utter amazement of the dainty evening guests. This was a week before her marriage.

2—Engineers an 'elopement,' shortly after her wedding. Ladies all wore yellow wigs and veils. Soon after the dance, an auto went home to mamma and four bridesmaids answered divorce suits.

4—Inaugurates the fashion of polo among Newport women.

5—Gives 'baby party,' at which all guests appear dressed as something under five years and refreshments served in nursing bottles.

7—First society woman to ride in hounds in 'knickers.'

8—Starts fashion of gum-chewing in society.

AND:

10—Wanders into the ballroom Stratford one fine afternoon, throws back an opera cloak she was wearing and strolls up and down the ballroom in the tightest and the silliest and greenest of green silk tights.

Cassidy Denies Judgeship Graft

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—I never took a cent, directly or indirectly, from William Willett or any combination as Supreme Court Judge, William Cassidy declared today in denying testimony given by Dr. Breard and his colleague, Lemle.

The two physicians, who have been experimenting with the new treatment for some time, say they have been successful in stopping the hemorrhages which sap the strength of the patients, but have also revived eating appetites and diminished the pain of the disease.

Wife of Prisoner Held for Perjury

South Boston Man Jailed and Fined for Assault.

John F. Slattery of No. 506 East seventh street, South Boston, was fined $10 and sentenced to two months at Deer Island in South Boston court yesterday, and Mrs. Slattery was held in $500 for the Grand Jury, charged with perjury, following testimony in which Slattery was accused of assault and battery upon Mrs. Hyacinth Tighe.

Mrs. Tighe testified that Slattery, while intoxicated, kicked her while she was calling upon Mrs. Slattery, and that he struck her little thirteen-year-old daughter.

Treat Cancer with Gold, Claim Success

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Remarkable success in use of gold for the treatment of internal cancer in women is claimed by Dr. Breard and his colleague, Lemle.

The two physicians, who have been experimenting with the new treatment for some time, say they have been successful in stopping the hemorrhages which sap the strength of the patients, but have also revived eating appetites and diminished the pain of the disease.

To Talk on "Four English Cardinals"

Next Thursday morning, in the Hotel Tuileries, Newbury street, Wilfrid Ward of London will deliver a lecture on "Four English Cardinals: Wiseman, Newman, Manning and Vaughan." Mr. Ward is the son of Dr. George W. Ward, a famous English writer and an intimate friend of the Royal household.

Dr. Wilhelm Bode Is Honored by Kaiser

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Among the honors conferred by the Kaiser on his birthday was a title of hereditary nobility conferred upon Dr. Wilhelm Bode, director of the Royal museums.

WHY GRIP IS DANGEROUS.

It is an Epidemic Catarrhal Fever Caused by a Bacillus that Generally Leaves the Patient Weak After the Acute Stage Has Passed.

Grip Patients Grateful to Peruna, the Expectorant Tonic.

Do not make the error of regarding grip as an exaggerated cold. There is a big difference between the two. Grip is an epidemic disease that poisons the vital organs. When a person has grip, the air passages are alive with millions of bacilli poisoning the blood. The infected person feels tired and exhausted.

Peruna is a Tonic Laxative.

It requires a good tonic laxative to keep the body of the patient as strong as possible to counteract the effect of the poisons created by the grip bacillus. An expectorant tonic with some laxative qualities is the safest remedy. Such is Peruna. Errors especially of coal tar powders or tablets because they lessen the vitality of the patient.

There is no specific for the grip.

Mrs. Gentry Gates, 3219 First Ave., East Lake, Ala., writes: "I had a bad case of grip. I tried Peruna and it cured me. I can safely say it is a fine medicine."

Mrs. Charles E. Wells, Sr., 239 Tenth St., Delaware, Ohio, writes: After a severe attack of la grippe I took Peruna and found it a good tonic."

MODERN DRESS A CAUSE OF CANCER

The modern way is to avoid corsets and wear a Dr. Jaeger's Health Garment. Dr. Jaeger, the famous physician, has made a study of the human body for 40 years. He recognized the wrong of the form of the corset and has made it possible for all to wear his garments without sacrificing style or beauty.

[From Boston Journal, Jan. 24.]

Many cases of cancer are now on record, and it is generally conceded that the modern dress is a cause of this disease.

SAYS ST. PETER MET MORGAN WITH A CLUB

Senator Lane, in Debate on Steel Probe, Denounces Financier as a Robber.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Senator Lane of Oregon in debate on the floor of the Senate today, made the following arraignment of the late J. Pierpont Morgan:

"A short time ago one of the greatest financiers of the country, who had robbed the New Haven Railroad system, died. Think of the people of New England, widows, orphans and trust fends, robbed to the tune of millions and millions.

"The late lamented J. Pierpont Morgan manipulated that affair. If the truth is told, that was an absolutely criminal as any special or theft that was ever practiced in this country.

"He said the object of his life was to teach his son to preach the doctrine of salvation and the redemption of sins through the blood of the lamb, and then he would put a dollar in his pocket, pulled out a harp and lit away for the golden shore where I think St. Peter met him with a baseball bat. I don't know, but he ought to."

SENATORS ASTOUNDED

The Senate sat aghast while this language was delivered, and the floor of the chamber in debate. It was caused by the anger of the Oregon Senator over the refusal of the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate to take seriously his resolution to investigate the Steel Trust. Second in authority to the spirit behind the proposed inquiry was David Lamar, late of New York, here almost daily characterized in the Senate as the "Wolf of Wall Street."

"This robber," said Senator Lane, stole in one year more than the Wolf of Wall Street could have picked up in a hundred years. They robbed the people more each year and every year than all the organized and highway robbers have taken out of the people in a century."

The morning expired and brought another spirit before the Senate. Senator Root, sitting beside Senator Cummins, addressed a remark to him, personally, although it happened to be spoken in a tone that carried some distance. Senator Bristow leaped to his feet.

"I suppose the Senator from New York was making a speech, although he did not address the chair," snorted the Kansas Senator. "He says he is tired of the Senate being diverted from its true to a blackmailer. That may be true, but we are very tender when we come to discussing Steel Trust stock which has some 90 ten points out of which $500,000,000 is water, representing not a dollar of invested capital."

REDFIELD ITS BOOST.

Slowly Senator Root rose to his feet. Addressing the chairman, he said in a conversational tone:

"I very much regret that the Senator from Kansas has seen fit to repeat a private conversation so that it finds its way into a public record."

"The Senator from Kansas has a habit of doing that," said Senator Stone of Missouri, sneeringly, as he stepped across the aisle dividing the Republicans from the Democrats, and stood his finger at the Kansan.

"For one," he added, with increased emphasis, "I am tired of it."

Say Foster Fled to Escape Asylum

Father Wanted to Commit Bradley Girl's Elopement Partner.

STAMFORD, Ct., Jan. 31.—The facts concerning the sharing of Joel M. Foster, the wealthy chicken farmer of Browns Mills, N. J., who eloped with Delilah Bradley to Mobile, Ala., recently, in Dr. A. J. Givens' sanitarium here were made known for the first time today in a statement made by Judge N. C. Downs. He said:

"Foster's father, Thomas Foster, of Scranton Pa., retained me in proceedings to have his son committed, and I found that Foster was suffering from incipient paresis. An examination was to have been made Thursday, the day after Foster escaped, and it was evidently for this reason that he was so anxious to get away. So far as I know no effort is being made to find Foster or the attendant who aided in the escape."

Big Cut in Steerage Rates Tomorrow

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A drastic cut in steerage rates from New York and Boston to Hamburg, Bremen, Antwerp and Rotterdam will be made Monday by every trans-atlantic steamship company operating out of these ports. This will be the first definite step taken by the North Atlantic conference to meet the opposition of the Hamburg-American line.

FEW MOMENTS! NO INDIGESTION OR SICK STOMACH—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Digests all food, absorbs gases and stops fermentation at once.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; your head dizzy and aching; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take Pape's Diapepsin, and in five minutes you will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach regulated, and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion, if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is astonishing. Please don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

MME. DE PASQUALI, formerly Bernice James of Hull, who will create the role of Saphoro in the opera of "Moses" at the Panama Fair.

New Opera 'Moses' for 1915 Exposition

Mme. de Pasquali to Create Role of Saphoro.

Dispatches from San Francisco yesterday said that arrangements have been completed for the production, in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition, of Dom Lorenzo Parodi's new and remarkable opera "Moses," in which Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, formerly Miss Bernice James of Hull, is to create the role of Saphoro.

Mme. de Pasquali, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is the wife of S. M. de Pasquali, the tenor impresario, who is to produce "Moses."

Miss Tobin to Wed Harper Tomorrow

Newport Bride-to-be But Eighteen Years Old.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 31.—Announcement was made here today that Miss Florence Tobin and William Harper, whose engagement was given out January 15, will be married Monday evening, at the Club Comique, by Rev. Fr. W. W. Meehan of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Miss Tobin is one of the four nieces of Mrs. James J. Brown. She is only eighteen years. Prince Gonzaga Carraciolo of Italy paid her assiduous attention last year. She is an expert dancer and has a medallion bestowed upon her by the Kaiser after he saw her dance at Potsdam last Summer. Mr. Harper is the New York aviator and engineer, president of the Harper Engineering Company, and connected with the publishing family of that name.

STATE BOARD FINDS INSANE WERE ABUSED

Inadequate Nursing and Medical Service at Worcester, Declares Report.

The State Board of Insanity, in its report yesterday on the investigation into the condition at the Worcester Insane Hospital, declares there were abuses and violence, rays some of the nurses by name, and censures the hospital management for having failed to discover the common practice of "shocking" patients until the sensational revelations at the inquiry hearings.

The report says:

"It appeared that, unknown to the superintendent and his assistants, it had become quite common, especially in the woman's ward, to resort to a method of control known as 'shocking.' This was done by a nurse going behind the patient, putting a sheet over the patient's head, and twisting the ends of the sheet together at the back of the patient's neck.

This was particularly effective in cases of patients who were biting nurses or suffering from delusions. The method is liable to abuse, if not permanent injury.

"As soon as the practice was brought to the attention of the superintendent it was strictly forbidden, but it reflects seriously upon the management that a practice so general as this was unknown to any member of the staff until the fact was brought out at a public hearing."

Mary E. Roache, a nurse who testified to the dragging of patients across the floors, is said by the board to have demonstrated her unfitness to remain in the hospital.

"Nearly all these instances of abuse are charged against nurses or attendants who left the service of the hospital before the hearing, or are confessions of their own misconduct by nurses who join in this complaint to us, about abuses of which they themselves have been guilty," says the report. "This applies particularly to Bessie Lukanoff, Mary E. Roache, Mary B. Meade, Bessie McDonald, Pearl Lalirie, Alma Foster and Isabelle M. Kenny." The report continues:

"As to care of patients, in only one instance was there evidence of violence to a patient to satisfy a grudge. It was, however, common to meet resistance by patients with force, which was not limited to what would be called reasonable.

"On the whole the board is satisfied that this proportion of nurses to patients is inadequate for modern nursing methods. The responsibility is not, however, upon the hospital authorities, but upon those who make the appropriation for the maintenance.

"Owing to the undesirability of the work and to easy feeding it is practically impossible to secure nurses enough without lowering the standard (which is already too low) or very materially increasing the wages paid.

"Some instances of violence to patients were attributed to the lack of nurses, but they seem to the board to relate more to the skill and discretion of the nurses than to their number. It seems to the board that good, wholesome, plain food is furnished, cooked in the way usual in such institutions. The number of small dining rooms at a distance from the kitchen makes it difficult to serve food well.

"The words, where most of the trouble with patients arose were in special charge of Dr. Schorer. By reason of his absence he was unable to be present at the hearing. It is difficult to see how all the practices testified to could have escaped her attention, and if they came to her attention they should have been stopped. The superintendent of nurses also should have been more familiar with what was going on in the wards.

"The board is satisfied that the medical staff are faithfully giving the patients all the care which can be expected from a force of this size, but the force is inadequate."

PARIS TO HAVE ITS SEASON OF BOSTON OPERA

Henry Russell to Open Theatre Champe Elysee, the Last Word in Playhouse Construction.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Paris is to be invaded by the opera combine, which already includes the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and London Covent Garden companies.

Directed by Henry Russell of the Boston Opera, Paris is to be given a season of Italian opera such as it has never known before, and all the resources of the combine will be at the disposal of the Boston manager.

When it was first announced that the Boston company might give season in Paris most people thought it was ridiculous. This is because they didn't know the facts.

Those are the facts. There is in Paris a beautiful theatre, built in large part by Vanderbilt and Morgan money. It was operated all last year by Gabriel Astruc, the celebrated musical agent, and failed. The theatre is now vacant, and Henry Russell and Director Higgins of Covent Garden intend to lease it for a season of two months or more, beginning in May.

LAST WORD IN THEATRES.

The Theatre Champs Elysee is the last word in theatre construction. It is modeled upon the Century Theatre in New York, and contains the only comfortable auditorium in Paris. Astruc lavished a fortune upon its interior decorations and its furnishings, which in part accounts for its failure. He also exhausted his resources before he began.

This theatre is much better suited to an opera season than the Chatelet, where the Metropolitan Opera company performed for two weeks.

Director Russell will assemble there a grand orchestra which will be directed by Felix Weingartner, himself a prime Paris favorite. The male chorus from Boston will stop in Paris on its way home to Italy, and a female chorus will be recruited in England and France.

At the Royal Covent Garden Opera will be assembled Caruso, Emmy Destinn, Alice Nielsen, Martinelli, Sammarco, Melba and Tetrazzini for the annual London season.

Paris is only eight hours distant via Dover-Calais and not a thing in the world to prevent these singers from appearing in Paris when they are not working in London.

In addition there are Edvina, Dalvarez, Calve, Mary Garden and a score of other equally great singers available for service, not to mention Vanni Marcoux, Ferrari-Fontana, Margaret Matzenauer.

SINGERS ARE WELL KNOWN.

No opera house in the world, not even the Metropolitan, contains such a galaxy of stars as Mr. Russell can offer Paris in May and June, because of the peculiar conditions, the closing of the American season, and the assembling in London of a mighty company of singers.

Most of these singers are known in Paris only by name. The National Opera and the Opera Comique cannot afford or their directors will not go to the expense of engaging such artists because of their high fees. Mr. Russell will not encounter strong opposition from the National Opera because in May and June its personnel is always allowed to run down. The Comique closes its doors late in June for the Summer season.

How to Shed a Rough, Chapped or Blotchy Skin

(From Beauty's Mirror.)

This is what you should do to shed a bad complexion. Spread evenly over the face, covering every inch of skin, a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax. Let this stay on over night, washing it off next morning. Repeat daily until your complexion as as clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. The result is invariable, no matter how soiled or withered the complexion. The wax literally absorbs the dry, worn skin, exposing the lovely young skin beneath, which, supplied with lovely young skin beneath. The process is entirely harmless, as little of the old skin comes off at one time. Mercolized wax is obtainable at any druggist; one ounce usually suffices. It is a veritable wonder-worker for rough, chapped, reddened, blotchy, pimpled, freckled or sallow skin.

Pure powdered saxolite is excellent for a wrinkled skin. An ounce of it dissolved in a half-pint witch hazel makes a refreshing wash-lotion. This renders the skin quite firm and smooth; indeed, the very first application erases the finer lines; the deeper ones soon follow.

Ovation Given to Walsh and Fletcher

Two Governors Guests at Vermont Association Banquet.

Governor Walsh and Governor Fletcher of Vermont were given an ovation last night at the annual banquet of the Vermont Association at the Somerset.

"We are having a quiet revolution up in my State," said Governor Fletcher. "With the help, however, of the Republicans, the Progressives and the Wilsonian Democrats we have kept it within constitutional limitations. But Massachusetts can't compare with Vermont as the State beautiful."

Colonel Everett C. Benton was toastmaster. Among the speakers were Attorney-General Boynton, Colonel J. H. Benton, General Charles H. Darling, Former Assistant United States District Attorney Guy A. Ham, I. R. Clark, David T. Montague, Elmer E. Silver, Nelson M. Sheldon and James M. Gleason.

Ad. Fails to Bring Reading Candidates

But Hanscom is Hopeful for Volunteers for Selectman.

E. C. Hanscom, of No. 40 Mt. Vernon street, Reading, the former member of the Board of Fire Engineers of Reading, who yesterday advertised in a Reading paper for a candidate for selectman, has had no replies. The ad inserted reads:

"WANTED—A man for candidate for the Board of Selectmen at the next annual election with the following qualifications: He must be honest; he must have common sense; he must be above playing dirty politics; he must be a man who dares to do right though he may lose a few votes at some future election; he must use the town's money where it will do the most good to the most people; no politicians wanted."

Mr. Hanscom said later "I was one of the fire engineers removed by the present Board of Selectmen. What we want is some good man to run at the next election who will beat out the present board."

ANNIE BONACCORSI, ELOPING GRIL WHO ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Plan Direct Odessa to New York Line

ODESSA, Jan. '31.—Arrangements have been concluded for the establishment of a direct line of passenger steamers between Odessa and New York. The line will be opened for business early next Summer. The ships will cater principally to emigrant traffic, but will also be equipped with a number of fast class cabins.

ELOPEMENT FAILS, GIRL TRIES TO DIE

Annie Bonaccorsi, 17, Takes Poison as Sweetheart Faces Somerville Court.

Because her elopement had been frustrated, and because she feared the boy she loved would be sent to jail, Annie Bonaccorsi, a seventeen-year-old girl, who lives at No. 2 Broadway, East Somerville, took sulphonaphol in an attempt at suicide, in the Somerville police court building yesterday.

At the time, the boy with whom she ran away to Portland, Guy A. Sampson, of No. 12 Mystic street, East Somerville, was before Judge Wentworth, charged by his mother with being a stubborn child. The two were brought back from Portland Friday, after they had gone there in a futile attempt to get married.

No charge was made against the girl, but she came to the police court building yesterday when the boy was to face trial, and went into the office of Clerk Daniel H. Bradley to ask what would be done with the boy. He reassured her—said it would be nothing serious. The girl went out, and a moment later, staggered into the arms of Patrolman Davidson, gasping:

"I'm sick. I've taken poison." She had a half-empty bottle of sulphonaphol in her hand. She was taken to the Somerville Hospital and will recover. The boy was later held under $100 bond till February 23.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Frank Bonaccorsi, is willing her daughter should marry young Sampson. But Mrs. Sampson objects.

"What's the use of trying to stop two young people from loving each other?" she said.

"Guy and Annie have been 'keeping company' for some time. Their association has been bitterly opposed by Mrs. Sampson, who says her son is not competent to select a wife or properly support her.

"I am perfectly willing to have Annie marry Guy. I think they would make a very good couple and if Guy isn't able to support a home of his own I would gladly let them live with me."

THREE BOYS ARE INJURED BY BOMB

North Adams Brothers Explode Cylinder Found in Woods. May Not Recover.

NORTH ADAMS, Jan. 31.—Charles, Raymond and Victor Gay, twelve, ten and eight years old, found a queer looking brass cylinder back of the Normal School today. It was five inches long an inch thick and had a fuse at each end.

The lads took it to their home on Church street, stole into the kitchen, got matches and lighted the fuses.

A terrific explosion blew out the kitchen windows, jarred the house and brought Mr. and Mrs. Gay in from the front room. They found their three boys unconscious, their faces and bodies filled with bits of brass and their clothing torn.

Surgeons at the North Adams Hospital worked two hours over the lads and then said that their injuries were so serious they could not be sure of saving their lives.

The bombs were the two other children of Mr. and Mrs. Gay died after eating green apples.

MONROE SURVIVOR, HOLDING WIFE BY THE HAIR OF HEAD TWO HOURS IN LOSING FIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Out of all the stories of suffering and courageous behavior, which attended the sinking of the old Dominion liner Monroe, off the Virginia coast, came today from the lips of Thomas R. Harrington, a survivor, one which stood out for its tragic pathos.

Harrington, when he arrived in New York, with a party of refugees, from Norfolk, told a simple story of how he had battled in the waters of the Atlantic to save his wife.

"I saved her, but she died afterwards," declared Harrington, who had swam for two hours holding his wife's hair in his teeth to keep her face above water. "When we punged into the water my wife was helpless from a broken arm. I grasped her and whispered to her that I would save her. I don't know how long I remained in the water, but I shall never forget those moments of suffering and danger.

CALLED TO A LIFEBOAT.

"I floated on my back, holding my wife's head above the water the best I could. At intervals I shouted to attract the attention of lifeboats, but tried not to waste my strength, for I knew I would need it all.

"Soon a lifeboat came near and I called to it, but whether the occupants heard me or not I don't know. If they did hear my voice they ignored us.

"I comforted Margaret, my wife, by telling her that another boat would be along soon. She did not reply, but I knew all her trust was in my strength.

"And then another boat came up. I called to the sailors, and when they came close one leaned over and said: 'Drop the woman; she is dead.' That angered me, and I cried out that she was not dead, that she had fainted in my arms.

"You will take us both aboard or you will not take either one of us," I cried. I thought the boat was going to row off. 'If you do not take her on board you will go to hell with the stamp of murder on your souls,' I shouted in my anguish. They lifted us both into the boat, but I still clung to Margaret, shielding her with my body and chafing her hands for warmth.

WIFE DIES ON NANTUCKET.

"It was a cold, nerve-shaking ride through gloom to the Nantucket. The poor girl died soon after being taken on board. Her life might have been saved by the quick application of stimulants, but on the Nantucket all was excitement and there were so many half frozen, hysterical people, all clamoring for clothing and medicines, that I could get no attention.

"I carried Margaret into an unoccupied stateroom and did what I could, but she died while I sat by her side, holding her hands in mine.

"A steward, a heartless fellow, entered as I sat sobbing by the berth. He saw that my wife was dead and advised that her body be thrown overboard.

"That was more than I could stand. Leaping to my feet I struck that man full in the face with all the strength of my right arm. He crumpled down upon the floor and I kicked him into the corridor.

"Then I was left alone with my dead, and throughout the balance of that futurning trip to Norfolk I was unmolested."

ASLEEP WHEN CRASH CAME.

Stating his experiences in further detail, Mr. Harrington said:

"We left Norfolk an hour late. The band played several pieces, but as there was nothing much to do my wife and I retired early. We were sound asleep when the crash came.

"We were hurled across the state room and woke up to hear the most awful racket I ever heard in my life.

"I felt the ship list to one side and looked for my wife. She was huddled on the floor by the door which I unlocked and threw open.

"I spoke comfortingly to Margaret, who was not afraid. As we stepped out onto the promenade deck she told me that her arm was broken, and I think it was. There was a wild scene on deck, with passengers running about and crying to be saved.

"I looked about me, but the lifeboats were all on the upper deck. I told my wife to cling to me and then we jumped overboard together.

"I have been in the water a great deal, but never had it seemed so far to the surface as it did after we jumped. It seemed like an eternity to me. When we finally came to the surface that awful noise was still going on. The freight in the Monroe was sliding back and forth and the glass was smashing while the passengers shouted."

BELIEVE BACKING OF NANTUCKET COST LIVES

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 31.—Federal investigators who are endeavoring to determine the responsibility for the sinking of the Monroe of the Old Dominion line have brought out these material facts:

1st—If Captain Berry of the Nantucket had not backed his vessel after the crash the Monroe would have remained afloat until all passengers had been rescued.

2d—The Monroe, which had blown two blasts threet imes, had stopped her engines and come almost to a complete stop when the collision occurred.

3d—Captain Berry, who was on the bridge of the Nantucket, had sounded his siren in acknowledgment of the Monroe's danger signal.

4th—The Monroe, which was equipped with automatic time whistles, had sounded a fog signal at intervals of one minute.

5th—Some of the lifeboats of the Monroe were stuck fast, and could not be lowered in time to save the lives of passengers.

NANTUCKET OFF COURSE.

6th—The Nantucket, bound south from Boston, was off her course when she encountered the north bound Monroe twenty-four miles southwest of Winter Quarter lightship.

Captain Robert E. Tapley of the United States steamship inspection servtis, who is conducting the inquihy, refuses to discuss the nature of the testimony of Captain Johnson of the Monroe and Captain Berry of the Nantucket and officers and the crew of the two steamships. The information obtained by the AMERICAN as to the important facts brought out, however, is authentic.

Captain E. E. Johnson of the Monroe, late today, filled with the clerk of the Federal District Court a libel of $1,000,000 against the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Company, owners of the Nantucket.

President Walker of the Old Dominion Steamship Company estimates the loss occasioned by the sinking of the Monroe at $1,000,000. The steamship is valued at $600,000, and the cargo at $400,000.

Captain Tapley has instructions from Washington to get to the bottom of the cause of the disaster.

The investigation has not been concluded, and probably will not be until the middle of next week.

WIRELESS MAN HERO.

Few of the survivors have recovered from the horror of their terrible experiences. More graphic stories are related each day of the bravery of the officers and crew of the Monroe. Kuehne, the senior wireless man, and the only survivor agree, was the hero of the disaster.

Charles Sutton, the seaman of the Monroe, who rescued Miss Sallie McCombs, the actress, tonight visited Miss McCombs at the Hotel Monticello, where she is under the care of a physician and nurse.

"No human being can even adequately describe the horror we went through," said Miss McCombs tonight. "There was no panic. There was little hysteria. But written on the faces of the men and women were expressions I hope never again to see.

"As I stood there by the lifeboat which the crew were unable to lower it could not see one hope. I became perfectly resigned to die. It was then that this big manly fellow in overall came to me and said he would save me. He was as calm as though a steamship disaster was a daily event in his life. No words can ever describe my deep gratitude to him. I owe my life to that big-hearted boy."

Miss McCombs hopes to be able to leave for her home in New York within a few days. She will be accompanied by Miss Hilda Thackeray, whose home also is Haviland, N. Y. Watson will leave for New York tomorrow evening. He received a long distance telephone tonight to tell the story of the Monroe disaster in vaudeville.

MR. and Mrs. Thomas R. Harrington of Bridgeport, Ct., passengers on the ill-fated Monroe. Harrington managed to swim two hours, keeping his wife's head above water. Both were rescued, but she died as a result of exposure.

BOSTON MAN TO BUILD BIG LINE

George E. Smith Obtains Charter for 376-Mile Electric Road Across Ontario.

George E. Smith, of No. 284 Washington street, yesterday completed the purchase of the complete rights to the charter, franchises and other property of the Eastern Ontario Electric Railway Company, a new corporation which proposes to build an electric line across the southern line of the Province of Ontario, Canada.

The railway company is chartered to build a line from Toronto to Cornwall at the eastern extremity of Ontario, with a branch from Brockville to Ottawa, the whole being 376 miles long. It touches fifty-two cities and towns en route. The company has authority to capitalize at about $16,000,000.

The charter provides the right to conduct a railway with any motive power except steam, to carry passengers, freight, mail and express and to manufacture and sell electricity for light, heat and power. It has already acquired considerable of the rights of way.

The proposed road will parallel the Grand Trunk for the whole of its distance through Ontario. The latter line was so built that it touches few of the cities and towns in the district mentioned but is laid out from one to five miles from them. The plan of the Eastern Ontario Electric Railway is to go directly through the cities and towns, for which it has received the necessary franchises.

CHAUFFEUR HELD FOR RING THEFT

Letter in Pocket Leads Police to Believe He Was Considering Suicide.

Andrew B. Christopher, a chauffeur, who recently moved to No. 1 Fern avenue, Brighton, was arrested last night on a charge of larceny from Frank H. Lull of No. 1017 Commonwealth avenue of a $115 diamond ring, which he had borrowed, it is said, under plea that he wished to wear it to a dance.

A letter found on Christopher struck the police as indicating an intention of suicide. It was addressed to "Miss Sullivan, bookkeeper, Astor street," and read as follows:

Dear Friend:

I hope you have given everything careful consideration before you acted. I wish you the best of luck. May God bless you. You will never see me alive again. Good luck and good bye.

(Signed) A.

The police say that Christopher told them at first that his sister, who is employed as a maid in Brookline, had come to borrowed from Lull. The sister came to headquarters. She is supported a younger sister, and she said that only yesterday morning her brother borrowed $28 from her saying he wished to go back to Florida. She knew nothing of Lull's ring.

He had given her pawn tickets for another ring, a suitcase and a bag. The ring had been pawned for $22. It was recovered.

Christopher recently lived at No. 230 Massachusetts avenue and worked at the same place with Lull.

Six Little Ones Cared for After Pitiful Story in Court.

Judge Logan, in South Boston court yesterday, ordered six little children sent to the Hartford Avenue Home for Destitute Children as the result of the pitiful story told by William H. Critchereon, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The agent went to the home of John and Mary Lindsay, No. 147 Silver street, in a condemned building, and found John, two, George, five, and Michael, nine, without food or clothing. They were huddled together in a cold room. A table and two broken chairs completed the furniture.

At No. 135 Hanson street, the agent found two-year-old Alfonso McCarthy, half clothed, in a bitter draught, and Raymond Agnes three, in a parking in the rear. Their mother, Mrs. Alice Fantom, was poorly dressed.

Mrs. Fantom, the court learned, is a grass widow. The father is missing.

Call O'Gorman to Identify Gaffney

Whitman to Question Senator in Tammany Probe.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—District-Attorney Whitman will call Senator O'Gorman before the grand jury next week to try to identify James E. Gaffney, the Tammany politician, as the man who asked $150,000 of James C. Stewart.

Whitman feels that the Senator, as confidante of Stewart, may give enough information to make the identification of "Mr. Gaffney" feasible. The senator will be asked about his talks with Stewart and if he learned, upon investigation, that "Mr. Gaffney" was the Gaffney of Tammany Hall.

Plans to Raise the Titanic by Magnets

DENVER, Jan. 31.—To raise the Titanic is a scheme which Charles Roth, a Denver architect, hopes to carry out this year. He intends to lower a submarine by means of a steel cable.

The submarine is lowered powerful electric magnets will be attached to the prow. Light steel cables are to be attached to the magnets, the other end of which will be wound around steam winches on the decks on the surface.

The submarine will push the magnets against the side of the wrecked ship and then signal to the men above to turn on the electric current, thus adhering the magnets to the sunken vessel. Magnets will be placed all around the ship, and when the last one is in place the submarine will be pulled to the surface and the work of raising the vessel begun.

UPSET STOMACH, COSTIVE, BILIOUS, CASCARETS TONIGHT—DIME A BOX

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is sour—your liver is torpid—your bowels constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation. Try Cascarets; they sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning.

BIBLE IN EVERY HOME, WAR CRY IN FIGHT FOR A "BETTER MALDEN"

Modern Crusaders in Remarkable Campaign for Moral Uplift of City—Woman Directs Enthusiastic Workers in House to House Campaign Planned as Opening Wedge for Ministers

By ANGELA MORGAN.

THE most remarkable religious crusade New England has known for years is going on in Malden. Following close upon the heels of the great morality campaign with its startling disclosures of vice and its war against corrupt conditions, this huge plan of uplift comes as a timely aid to the social workers, ministers, mothers and fathers who are trying to save their sons and daughters.

Bibles! That is the first word, the foremost weapon, in this great battle. Bibles by the cart load, Bibles by the thousands, taken to the very door of Malden residents and actually given away to those who cannot afford to pay the cost price, which is all the evangelists ask for the book.

Grand Opera Dancing Stars Introduce Furlana in Boston

DOLORES GALLI and GUISEPPI CECCHETTI DANCING THE FURLANA.

Dolores Galli, the premiere danseuse of the opera, and Giuseppi Cecchetti, the ballet master, have introduced the Furlana, the Venetian folk dance, into Boston ballrooms.

The two dancers have posed especially for the Sunday AMERICAN in a series of pictures showing the various postures of the Furlana, the dance which, the cables say, the Vatican has given its first approval.

It has been officially denied from the Vatican that Pope Pius has ever seen or wished to see the tango, but it has been admitted that he is familiar through long residence in Venice with the Furlana and does not object to it.

The Furlana [illegible] has been danced in Boston at every performance of "Gioconda," the scene of which is laid in Venice. Most people thought the elaborate figures during the fete of the last act were created by the ballet master, but they are actually the ancient dance of the Venetians.

REQUIRES GRACE.

"I have known how to dance the Furlana ever since I was a little girl," said Mlle. Galli. "It is a charming dance, [illegible] of fancy steps. It is a dance for the arms as well as the legs, and I think it is much nicer in [illegible] the tango.

"To dance the tango you must embrace your partner tightly, and whatever else you do you must not relax your grip. The Furlana, on the contrary, is a dance where frequently only the fingertips touch [illegible] when you do approach your partner it is only to retreat [illegible]

"It is quite a pretty [illegible] very difficult and one [illegible] grace. I am afraid that the middle-aged gentlemen and ladies who dance the tango would look very grotesque if they ever attempted the Furlana."

Mlle. Galli in her evening gown, and Monsieur Cecchetti, in his soup and fish suit, then went through the Furlana.

"You will notice," said Mlle. Galli, "that there is one step which resembles the tango, when my right foot and my partner's left are raised from the ground about eight inches, but we are at arm's length instead of being tightly gripped."

DIGNITY ALWAYS.

The first step of the Furlana began when Galli threw one arm wide apart and stepped forward as though she were beginning a breakdown, while Cecchetti put one arm upon his waist and curved the other about his head like a Highland fling dancer.

Galli's arms came together and they grasped hands, moving through complicated steps with an easy grace. The pianist was playing music from "Gioconda" in two-four time.

Once they darted forward with waists enlaced like Paul and Virginia fleeing before the [illegible] famous painting. Again, their limbs lifted and their waists bent back in a peculiarly graceful posture.

The Furlana, like the tango, has a score of positions, which are repeated as often as one desires, but the end of the dance is always the same. The woman sinks to one knee in an old-fashioned courtesy, while the man bows with ancient elegance.

"I do not think it will be popular in America," said Mlle. Galli. "Your young people like the dances that embrace. I do think it is the embrace they like more than the dance steps."

Swift Assails the "Back Bay Loafer"

Committee of Unemployed to Visit Curley.

Morrison I. Swift told a gathering of seventy-five unemployed men who shivered in the raw nor'easter on Boston Common yesterday that the "Back Bay loafer" is worse than the "submerged and down-and-out."

SIT UP NIGHTS ON "BRAINTWISTER"

Answers to Army Puzzle Pour in From All Over New England.

The army on-the-march-messenger brain-test has New England sitting up nights, figuring.

That the "Yankee habit of guessing" has not become obsolete is shown by the wide variety of solutions sent into the AMERICAN office.

Aside from the fact that no one has tried to prove that the army messenger either circled the globe or covered the line of march in an aero, all kinds of extremes are represented in the answers so far received.

Here it is. What is the answer?

A messenger leaves the rear of an army twenty-eight miles long as it begins its day's march. He goes to the front and at once returns to the rear when the army camps for the night. How far did he travel if the army marched twenty-eight miles that day?

KEEN ENJOYMENT OF ANCIENT OPERA

Great Cast Captures House With Rossini's "Barber of Seville."

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

It is just about one hundred years since Rossini composed the "Barber of Seville," and the libretto he used was founded upon a French play at least half a century older.

Yet the Opera House rocked yesterday afternoon with the laughter of a great audience, and the ancient jokes did not fail to make their points.

It was [illegible] expects a wonderful performance. I do not think the opera has ever been sung here with a more finely balanced cast. There was Frieda Hempel from the Metropolitan, the most popular of the young coloratura singers of the day; Pasquale Amato, the superb baritone; Constantino, long famous for his Count of Almaviva; and Jose Mardones, than whom nobody has ever sung better the music Don Basilio; Tavecchia, the only opera buffo I have ever seen who was actually funny; and Elvira Leveroni, whose Elvira is always acceptable.

ROMP THROUGH 3 ACTS.

This wonderful cast romped through three acts of the grand old opera. Such singing of ensembles has rarely been heard, and the comedy went with a snap that would have done credit to George M. Cohan.

Of course we can pick flaws. Frieda Hempel, beautiful, gracious, with a lyric soprano of exquisite tone, is persistently cast for coloratura roles although her high notes apparently pain her, and certainly have no brilliancy or other graces to commend them.

Amato makes an aristocratic figure of Figaro. He forgets that he was a barber, and though bright and clever and full of resources never forgot his place. He sang the rapid-fire music of the part with great spirit and wonderful tone.

MISS SHARLOW'S DEBUT.

Mardones sang the air La Calumnia, usually tedious, with such splendor or color, such contrasts and such intelligence that it was one of the most enjoyable things in the opera. His Don Basilio is an admirable characterization.

In the evening Miss Myrna Sharlow, an American girl and the most promising of lyric sopranos, made her debut as Mimi in "Boheme." She was sweet and pretty and sang with a confidence that was justified by her really splendid voice.

Wreck Widow to Visit Lawrence

James R. F. Rae, Monroe Victim, Former Bay State Man.

LAWRENCE, Jan. 31.—Mrs. James R. F. Rae, who was widowed by the Monroe disaster off the Virginia Capes, is coming from Norfolk, Va., to visit relatives here, it was announced tonight. The heart-broken widow who for a time refused to believe her husband had gone down with the Old Dominion liner, has now given him up for dead.

Mrs. Rae was at first reported among the victims. Later, however, her relations here received a telegram from her saying her husband had not been rescued by the Nantucket.

Mr. and Mrs. Rae lived here for a number of years, but recently moved to New York. They had been South for their health. Mrs. Rae has one son, James.

Urges Mussel as Meat Substitute

Professor Field of Clark Lauds Humble Bivalve.

WORCESTER, Jan. 31.—Professor Irving A. Field of the biological department of Clark University, who has been working on the secret government investigation for cheap sea food at Woods Hole, which recently resulted in strong praise of the mussel, said tonight that it is estimated that mussels can be produced for one-third the cost of steak, substance for substance.

This government investigation has been in progress six years. Silence was maintained so the scientists would not be embarrassed by questions. But now a campaign of publicity in behalf of the humble mussel is on.

CAUSE OF ILL HEALTH

Nine Times Out of Ten, It's the Kidneys.

The subtle and elusive character of kidney disease often leads people to believe they are suffering from neuralgia, rheumatism, pleurisy, heart weakness, and other acute forms of disease. In reality all such trouble sometimes arises through failure of the kidneys to properly perform their functions of removing the poisonous matter from the blood. Unmistakable signs of kidney disease are pains in the head, swelling under the eyes, dry skin, dull complexion, tired feeling, loss of energy, etc. Many physicians say that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy is the only medicine that heals with certainty the frail tubular structures constituting these important organs. It soothes and heals the inflamed parts and gradually restores them to their normal condition. For sale by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 bottles. NAVY WOMEN NOW IN SUNSHINE CLUB

Cheering Messages Pour In From All Sections of New England.

Cheering messages continue to pour in from every section of New England, in response to the Sunshine Club appeal for membership. A surprising feature of the latest applications is found in the large number of women who have joined the club during the last twenty-four hours. Here are some of the latest:

GEORGE E. COLEMAN, No. 39[illegible] Kempton street, New Bedford: "Because I wish to affiliate with those who love sunshine, and believe in 'E Pluribus Union,' for contentment as well as for dollars."

MISS ETHEL M. LUCAS, No. 894 Massachusetts avenue, Boston: "For much better times to come to everyone in New England."

MRS. GALEN MOORE, No. 840 Winthrop avenue, Beachmont: "I have been living in hopes of a still fuller measure of prosperity coming our way."

MRS. LAURA A. DELMARS, No. 43 Hillside avenue, Swampscott: "I believe that we should look on the bright side of life every time, and try to make it as pleasant for others as we can."

PROSPERITY FOR ALL.

MRS. C. H. CLARK, No. 16 Wave avenue, Beachmont: "Even though 'down and out,' prosperity should be acceptable to all."

SUSAN LEWIS ROOPE, M. D., No. 24 Central avenue, Salem Willows: "I am an optimist. Concentration of thought will form a mighty wave of success."

MARTHA DUSTON, No. 265 Union street, Lynn: "For the privilege of sending out my best wishes and receiving my share of the influence exerted by the earnest, honest helpful thoughts of the 600,000 Sunshine Club members."

MRS. E. FERRAGAMO, No. 16 Moore street, Cambridge: "I am an optimist by nature, and believe that the bright side of life always overbalances the dark spots. This club will help keep us on the sunny side."

CHARLES PHILLIPS, No. 5 Cheshire street, Jamaica Plain: "Prosperity means sunshine in the majority of homes, where shadows may not dominate."

WILLIAM MAIN, No. 27 Loring street, Somerville: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion which cannot be removed but abideth forever."

ANNA M. HOLLAND, No. 89 Thorndike street, Cambridge: "Sunshine blooms roses of love and happiness. Here's wishing that our Sunshine Club will bring the bloom of prosperity to all."

RAY OF SUNSHINE.

JOHN T. WARD, No. 142 Main street, Springfield: "I want to help boom New England into prosperity and always want a ray of sunshine with me."

HAROLD J. PIPER, No. 342 Union avenue, Laconia, N. H.: "As a citizen of the glorious United States and for the welfare of all who try to help themselves."

ROBERT S. CARNACHAN, No. 70 Willow street, Cambridge: "I am an optimist, and believe that co-operation is the life of business. Let us work together, that New England grow and prosper."

JOSEPH FIOLA, Randolph: "Prosperity, more trade and more money is what everyone is looking for. May the best of good luck follow the Sunshine Club."

C. FRED GAMING, Williams, Maine: "I am happy myself, and would like to see everyone smile."

ERUPTION ON EAR RED AND SWOLLEN

Watery Discharge for Days at a Time. At Night Hair a Solid Mat. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Cure Complete.

R. F. D. No. 2, Mapleton, Me.—"When my little girl was one year and nine months old her ear commenced being sore around the edge. It broke out with an eruption and was red and swollen and had a watery discharge for days at a time. Then it would get better for a few days. At night it would run so her hair would be a solid mat on that side of her head.

"I treated her with every kind of salve and ointment I could get, cold cream and ———, and made different kinds from herbs that would be recommended by friends but nothing did any good for more than a few days. After two years I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a week her ear was healed so I bought more and continued to use them about six weeks until all redness had disappeared and the cure was complete." (Signed) Mrs. J. F. Ricker, Mar. 26, 1913.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent dry, thin and falling hair, allay itching and irritation of the scalp, remove crusts and scales, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap, assisted by occasional dressings with Cuticura Ointment, afford a most effective and economical treatment. NEXT SUNDAY'S GREAT MESSAGE TO EVERYBODY IN BOSTON

This is go to church day

It is proposed that the above message be sent over the wire to every telephone subscriber in Boston on next Sunday morning, February 8, as a reminder of the great "Go-to-Church" movement

WOULD CALL ALL WITH PHONES ON CHURCH SUNDAY

Ministers and Telephone Officials May Use American's Suggestion Next Sunday.

ENTHUSIASM RUNS HIGH

The Boston AMERICAN has suggested to the body of ministers who are directing the "Go-to-Church Day" movement in Boston, and to the New England Telephone Company officials, that on next Sunday morning between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock, every telephone subscriber in Boston be called and reminded,

"This is Go-to-Church Day."

This would serve as a reminder to the thousands of Bostonians who have telephones in their homes, and [illegible] way to supplement the widespread publicity already given in all the newspapers to this [illegible] movement.

The telephone officials are considering the advisability of doing this. [illegible] automobiles will [illegible] in Greater Boston to carry the aged [illegible] to the churches.

At the People's Temple these automobiles will begin running at 9 [illegible] those taken to the church at that early hour will be given light refreshments, with a cup of cocoa and after the services the aged and the infirm will be taken back to their homes. Or, if they should prefer to stay for [illegible] of the afternoon meetings, a meal will be furnished them.

Many members of the different churches have written postal cards calling attention to the Sunday and giving their friends a cordial invitation to the churches. No special church is designated on these postal cards, but the writer signs his or her name, with the church they attend.

150,000 BUTTONS

More than one hundred and fifty thousand Go-to-Church Day buttons have been distributed among the church organizations.

Cards have been placed in 500 stores [illegible] in Greater Boston. Next Saturday the Boston Elevated will put 5,000 signs in the cars and keep them there over Sunday. Bills [illegible] posted in conspicuous places [illegible] the railroad stations [illegible] many of the churches [illegible] Go-to-Church Day posters, which they have designed themselves on the outside of buildings.

Question boxes will be found in the rear of the churches to receive questions [illegible] churches. "Don't be afraid to ask questions about the [illegible] Go-to-Church Day," says Rev. George H. Spencer of the Forest Hills Methodist Episcopal Church.

BIG SIGNS ON CHURCHES

Eight large signs measuring five feet by four have been put on eight of the largest South End churches.

Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church, in preparing for Boston's great religious day, asks everyone in his congregation to win one person daily for the church. "Just win one more," is his slogan. On the morning of Sunday, February 8, he will preach upon the topic, "[illegible] Religion."

Rev. W[illegible] Hyde, rector of Trinity Church, Weymouth, has made his horse [illegible] Go-to-Church Day work by placing this large sign upon the [illegible]:

"Go-to-Church Day.
Weymouth.
Sunday, February 8."

The animal is driven constantly through the streets advertising the special day.

ITALIANS WEAR BUTTONS.

Two hundred Italians, members of the Methodist Church on Hanover street, of which the Rev. Joseph [illegible] is pastor, are wearing Go-to-Church Day buttons.

The Rev. John F. Brant, secretary of [illegible] Reform Association, No. [illegible] Bromfield street, says:

"This Go-to-Church Day is a splendid undertaking. We want the whole of New England to get into the churches on this special day. What would Christian civilization do without the churches? Let us all realize [illegible] we do the importance of the [illegible] in promoting civic righteousness in every community and [illegible] Boston's great religious day [illegible] and convince the people [illegible] where the churches stand."

MINISTERS ENTHUSIASTIC.

The Rev. A. T. Kempton of the [illegible] Baptist Church, Somerville:

"Make this a happy day for all people. May they all realize what the churches mean to them."

The Rev. Emma [illegible] Poore of the Church of the Higher Light:

The Rev. Edwin L. Miller, pastor of the St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church:

"Make the day full of the great things the churches are doing. Encourage all to keep going to church and this will make the day memorable."

How You May Be a Model Husband

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 31.—Rev. Albert Krummer gives these as the characteristics of a model husband:

"Keeps his wife young.

"Maintains no separate financial account.

"Is a good provider.

"Never flirts or trifles.

"Is always a gentlemanly lover.

Why Go to Church? Asks the Boston Congregationalist in an Editorial.

The Boston Congregationalist calls attention to Go-to-Church Day in its current number in this editorial:

Why Go to Church?

Let us for the present moment emphasize one point of many that have already been mentioned. The church is the greatest agency in the world for the promotion of human fellowship, drawing people together. Why is the promise made to the "two or three who are gathered together" in Christ's name? Is it not because they are together, with one mind and one heart?

The greatest need in the world is real fellowship. The greatest and divinest force in the world is love, heart drawn to heart and life to life. "Fellowship is heaven," said the old preacher, John Ball. "Lack of fellowship is hell. Fellowship is life. Lack of fellowship is death."

Why are these words, spoken over five hundred years ago, still remembered and quoted? Because they contain a vital truth. Sin separates men. Alienation of men from their fellows is the cause of half the misery of the world. The better we know men of any class, in the slums or on the boulevards, the more we find to love in them. God made men to live together, as brothers.

The Church of Christ is the greatest influence on earth to promote sympathy, kindliness, friendship, brotherliness between man and his fellows; between rich and poor, ignorant and learned; the morally strong and the morally weak. It is the supreme training school for social service. This is what the church stands for; this is what it cultivates.

Nothing else stands for universal brotherhood. In the beginning this was felt in the outside world. "See how these Christians love one another," men said. But not only that; "these Christians" also loved all men in trouble—plague-stricken men, wounded men, outcasts, who were not of their number. So today there is no body of men exerting so great influence for human brotherhood, world-wide brotherhood, overleaping race distinctions, crossing national boundaries to carry help everywhere, as are men reared in the churches.

The man who will not "go to church" is in a way antagonizing this greatly needed social expression and culture. If many men stay away, if all men were to refuse to go to church, the results would soon be felt in anti-social influences working human havoc. They are felt today wherever this Christian social expression is declining.

One reason why we should go to church, then, is because we are social beings, needing the culture and guidance of our social nature and needing to work together with others for the widest human understanding and the broadest possible spread of the spirit of fellowship and brotherliness. The only means by which we can develop fully the social nature for which in its perfect estate we are made is by entering as fully as possible into the influence of the great ideals of the church, the fellowship which it teaches, to which it invites us, and which, more abundantly than any other organization, it exhibits.

Hold Lynn Man for Improper Letter

Dana R. Merrill, a Lynn insurance agent with a family, was arrested yesterday by Deputy United States Marshal Ruhl, charged with sending an improper letter to Miss F. R. Watson, of No. 49 Sargent avenue, Somerville. He advertised for a stenographer, and it was a reply to the girl's application that led to the arrest. Merrill was held in $500 for a hearing, Feb. 4.

Armed Robber Locks Girls in an Icebox

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—An armed robber entered the store of the Washington Tea Company, forced Miss Frances Holfron, eighteen, and Miss Marie Sculner, seventeen years old, into an ice box and escaped with $10 from the cash register. He warned the young women that they would be shot if they made an outcry. They remained in the refrigerator until he fled and then telephoned the police.

Lowell Protest on Trolley Service

Board of Trade to Hear Complaints Against Bay State Company.

LOWELL, Jan. 31.—"Complaint Night" at the Board of Trade rooms February 5, will give people of Lowell and surrounding towns a chance to register their grievances against the service of the Bay State Street Railway Company, which recently put into operation a schedule calling for fewer cars at certain hours of the day.

North Tewksbury residents will probably have the greatest cause for fault finding, as they pay 10 cents for a ride of three miles, and in addition walk a mile before they can ride at all. In and about Lawrence, which is ten miles distant, passengers may ride eight miles for a nickel, on certain lines.

Another proposition to be discussed is that of establishing double tracks between Lowell and Lawrence, an undertaking which will cost between $300,000 and $400,000, according to conservative estimates.

Change Old Shirley House to '76 Style

Repair Work Going on at Historic Roxbury Building.

The restoration of the old Governor Shirley mansion on Shirley street, Roxbury, to its original appearance is progressing. The details are being worked out under the direction of an historical organization which recently purchased the place. A fence similar to the one which surrounded the estate in Colonial days has been set in place. It is expected that the building will be renovated by July.

It was in the Shirley mansion that George Washington slept before the revolution. General LaFayette also slept there and later addressed a gathering from a balcony window.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 1476 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

WOMAN DIRECTS WORK.

A woman is the supervisor of this remarkable work—a woman with fair hair and blue eyes and an earnest, yet charming manner. She is Miss Eleanor Edwards, for years an active evangelist, and it is under her direction that the Malden work will be carried forward to a vigorous success.

The Massachusetts Bible Society stands back of Miss Edwards, for it is this society that is the [illegible] promoter and ex[illegible] of the great Bible cru[illegible] New England has known [illegible] History is full of [illegible] revivals and battles for the cause of Christianity waged [illegible] grim spirit of the Pilgrim Fathers, but it is doubtful if anything more wonderful ever occurred than this very Bible crusade carried on right here in the modern city of Malden.

"The greatest religious and social service work is being done in New England" [illegible] this is what the Malden women say of the project.

"The [illegible] of the new age—the church [illegible] close to the lives of all sorts and conditions of [illegible] this is another view as uttered by a prominent reformer.

How [illegible] and awake and energetic the [illegible] group of evangelists who have undertaken the huge task of putting Bibles and religion into every Malden home! How radiant and confident!

THE MAN WITH THE WAGON.

[illegible] starting out on [illegible] large campaign [illegible] impression of [illegible] yet so [illegible] are compelled [illegible]

[illegible] with the wagon [illegible] the first to appear [illegible] their helpers [illegible]

Malden residents [illegible] their [illegible] the Bible-filled wagon has gone through the streets, with Corporal [illegible] handing out gifts of Bibles [illegible] the request [illegible] too poor to pay.

Malden homes threw wide their doors to the evangelist with the gift of the sacred book. Business [illegible] who had been too [illegible] for years to even think of [illegible] Bible stopped work to [illegible] first [illegible] at their mother's knee.

Then came [illegible] of women, Miss Eleanor Edwards to the [illegible], assisted by [illegible] Miss Wilma [illegible] two [illegible]

FLUENT LINGUISTS.

These young women [illegible] speak [illegible] are shown [illegible]

Just what does it all mean, how is it done, how long will it take and what will it do for Malden?

I asked all these questions [illegible] Miss Edwards [illegible] 76 Elm street.

Miss Edwards and Miss [illegible] work.

I learned that it was [illegible] request of [illegible] started [illegible] The pastors [illegible] Massachusetts Bible Society [illegible] and help them in the religious campaign and the invitation was accepted.

[illegible] Miss Edwards says [illegible]

COVERS WHOLE CITY.

It is a [illegible] systematized as to cover every possible detail of information required. It reaches out and embraces every section of Malden, penetrating even the humblest home. Miss Edwards explained it as follows:

"This is the way we do it. We have a regular conventional printed slip, with questions as to the names, [illegible] ages, occupation, [illegible] preference of the [illegible]. When these questions [illegible] we have valuable [illegible] that is of help to [illegible] churches. For example [illegible] a family that [illegible] attend any church regularly, yet [illegible] preference for some one. We [illegible] that information and send the data to the pastor of the church preferred. He writes or [illegible] his workers to bring that family into active church attendance.

"We have maps of the city and [illegible] the territory up into sections and each colporteur takes the allotted section and makes a house to house canvass.

"He carries Bibles with him all [illegible] and his aim is to leave one in every home. Twenty-three cents for a Bible—that isn't much. That is all the Bible Society asks—just cost price. And [illegible] only five cents [illegible] where a request is made and the family is poor, we gladly give the Bibles free of charge.

"This free Bible distribution is a very large part of our work and we are asking and securing funds for it wherever we can.

PROVIDE SPEAKERS.

"But the census taking and Bible giving are not all. Our work is [illegible] four-fold in its aims. We are prepared to give meetings [illegible] and we form a group of speakers for lectures or talks. Some of our number [illegible] musical and we sing and conduct services in the churches.

"The private evangelical work we don't discuss, of course—it is something we wish to do quietly. But it is a large factor in our efforts—this personal service, and winning souls to the cause. We are glad to help everyone who comes to us for aid. If anyone is in trouble, we pray with that one and help him to see the light."

Miss Edwards further divided the work into six distinct purposes. Here they are as given by her:

1—Who is who in every domicile to be tabulated as to religious preference and status.

2—The Bible put into the hands and homes of ALL the people.

3—No propaganda or proselytism. The Jewish scripture for the Jew, the Catholic Bible for the Catholic, the Protestant for the Protestant.

4—Every man and every woman in Malden may have a Bible in his mother tongue; 14,477 copies given away last year to needy persons and charitable institutions.

5—Evangelism:

Looking for lost lights.

Winning wanderers gone wrong.

6—Reading and studying the Bible.

The Bible, the text book of the Christian church; the Bible, the textbook of the Sunday school. Every pupil of the Sunday school to own a Bible. The Bible a textbook of life. To be the guide of every day and every act.

This Bible campaign in its enlarged aspect is largely the achievement of the society's secretary, Rev. Francis E. Marsten, D. D., whose untiring efforts have put the crusade upon its present remarkably efficient basis. Rev. Dr. Marsten will give talks in the Malden churches during the present crusade, explaining the purposes of the [illegible].

Slot Machine Drug Store in Bathrooms

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Have you a slot machine drug store in your bathroom? If not, your bathroom is not of the 1914 model. The bathroom [illegible] was discovered here in every suite of a new hotel. GENERAL WOOD TO FIGURE IN PEARSON FIGHT

Expect Army Chief to Testify in Favor of One Year Term for Adjutant-General.

Major-General Leonard Wood [illegible] Washington [illegible] and last night [illegible] appear [illegible] Committee on Military Affairs [illegible] State House [illegible] term for the Adjutant-General [illegible] Massachusetts Volunteer [illegible] fight is to get Adjutant-General Gardner W. Pearson [illegible]. The Adjutant-General [illegible] forces [illegible] private secretary [illegible] Governor [illegible] wants [illegible] private secretary [illegible] Pearson [illegible] tended in 1912 to five years [illegible] declines to [illegible].

The Committee on Military Affairs decided yesterday to hold [illegible] hearing [illegible] the recommendation of the Governor on Wednesday [illegible] ary 11. All the thousands [illegible] in the military service of the Commonwealth will note the [illegible] date.

A recent poll of the legislative committee indicates that, [illegible] today, the committee favors the recommendation of Governor Walsh [illegible] his military private secretary [illegible] his executive private secretary [illegible] appointed one year at a time [illegible] Governor of Massachusetts [illegible] time of Governor Walsh [illegible] privilege of selecting [illegible] Adjutant-General."

"FOR LEGISLATURE TO ACT."

To Democrats in the Legislature [illegible] distressing feature of the situation is the downright refusal of Governor Walsh to do anything in the way of lobbying [illegible] the expressions [illegible] January 8, to the joint [illegible] of the Legislature [illegible] of his desire to cut off [illegible] scalp of Adjutant-General Pearson but he will not ask for Representatives and Senators to tell [illegible].

"I have done what I consider to be my full duty," the Governor is said to have explained to inquirers. "Now it is for the Legislature [illegible]. On this point my mind is made up. I do not intend to lobby [illegible] one of the propositions I have put before the lawmakers. I do [illegible] and I believe the members [illegible] party will expect, that Democrats [illegible] the Legislature will support [illegible] cratic policies."

The "military private secretary," whose [illegible] General Pearson is an extreme [illegible] of Lowell. He is a relative of former Congressman Butler Ames, the Republican leader of that section.

On the Committee on Military Affairs, whose report for or against the One-Year plan will doubtless have great effect with the Legislature are:

REPRESENTATIVES: (Chairman) Arthur N. Newhall of Stoneham, Republican; Henry L. Andrews of Woburn, Republican; Julius F. Carman of Springfield, Republican; (Clerk) John G. Tilden of Malden, Progressive; John J. Lydon of Ward 15, Boston, Democrat; George Edward Curran of Ward 18, Boston, Democrat; Jeremiah J. Kelley of Ward 22, Boston, Democrat, and Thomas E. Dowd of Worcester, Democrat.

Hence there are six Democrats on the committee as against two Progressives and three Republicans.

Senate Chairman McCarthy served in the Porto Rican campaign of the Spanish War as a member of the Fifth Massachusetts [illegible] eral Pearson was in the [illegible]. They have been closely [illegible] military affairs at the State House. Senator McCarthy, indeed, is [illegible] have handled the close [illegible] two years ago to save the Adjutant-General's term extended from one year to five.

APPOINTED BY FOSS.

Democrats of that day in the Legislature wanted to "take care" of Pearson, who was first appointed by Governor Foss, "in case Foss should be succeeded by a Republican." Now comes a Democratic Governor who asks for the same right Foss had, to pick his own "military private secretary."

What Governor Walsh said to the Legislature about it was this:

"The law passed by the Legislature of 1912, extending the term of office of the Adjutant-General to five years, should be repealed. The Adjutant-General is merely the military private secretary of the Commander-in-Chief of the militia of Massachusetts. There is no sound reason why the military secretary of the Commander-in-Chief should have a term of five years any more than the office of private secretary to the Governor should be for five years. The Commander-in-Chief should have the right to select his own Adjutant-General."

It was said yesterday at the State House that, outside of the Lowell-Lawrence section of the State, all the commanding officers of the militia side with Governor Walsh and want a new Adjutant-General.

Vegetarian Temple for Boston
Moving Pictures to Aid Cause
To Convert the Meat-Eaters

MRS. R. L. SHARPE

Mrs. Sharpe Leading Missionary Work to Impress on People "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

A vegetarian temple where [illegible] of the [illegible] congregate to [illegible] practiced [illegible] where lecture hall, [illegible] bakery, restaurant [illegible] ture play will provide physical and mental entertainment is to be Boston's latest and most novel contribution to twentieth century [illegible] the [illegible] activity of the [illegible] and its founder and [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] R. L. Sharpe of No. [illegible] Commonwealth avenue, Newton.

The idea set forth by Mrs. Sharpe yesterday is based upon a plan for widespread missionary and reform in the field of vegetarianism.

"We wish to convert the world to our cause," she said.

The new building, which is planned to be built in some busy spot in Boston, will contain a vegetarian cooking school, where proselytes will be given instruction for a very nominal fee in the art of preparing vegetarian meals. Young mothers will be trained as vegetarian housewives. Only herbivorous foods, of course will be served in the restaurant or cooked in the bakeshop.

SHOW ANIMAL TORTURE.

An information office will tell where fresh vegetables and the best vegetarian canned goods and meat substitutes can be procured. Lectures will deal with all subjects bearing directly and indirectly upon the humanitarian and dietetic phases of the vegetarian creed.

Graphic motion picture films will depict the tragic process through which the [illegible] animal passes before its flesh is served to the meat eater [illegible] cruelties practiced upon birds and [illegible] feathers and furs are [illegible] devastating the [illegible] human beings, [illegible] means of selected [illegible].

In the proposed great centre meat-eating and the wearing of any article of apparel that entails animal slaughter will be strictly [illegible] the wearing of shoes made from leather will be frowned upon as entailing animal suffering.

The plan for the temple is the latest step of the Greater Boston Vegetarian [illegible] to inaugurate a sweeping meat reform. Underlying it is the deeper motive, to spread the broadest [illegible] vegetarian doctrine, "Thou Shalt not Kill."

"To be a truly vegetarian is to sympathize with those dumb animals and birds slaughtered to give us meat and furs," said Mrs. Sharpe.

Cardinal Gennari Dead at Age of 74

ROME, Jan. 31.—Cardinal Casimiro Gennari died today after a short illness at the age of seventy-four. His death bore out the ancient saying, that "when one cardinal dies three die." Cardinals Oreglia and Rampolla recently passed away. Cardinal Gennari was born in 1839 and was made bishop of Conversano in 1881. There his abilities came to the notice of Pope Leo XIII, and he was created archbishop of Lepanto.

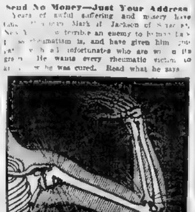
Rheumatism

Remarkable Home Cure Given by One Who Had It—HE Wants Every Sufferer to Benefit.

Send No Money—Just Your Address

Years of awful suffering and misery have taught Mark H. Jackson of Syracuse, New York, how terrible an enemy to human happiness rheumatism is, and have given him sympathy with all unfortunates who are within its grasp. He wants every rheumatic victim to know how he was cured. Read what he says:



"I Had Sharp Pains Like Lightning Flashes Shooting Through My Joints."

"In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent, simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today. MARK H. JACKSON, No. 80 Gurney Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

British Columbia—larger than Washington, Oregon, California and Indiana combined—richer in natural resources than any similar area on the American continent, with a smaller population [illegible] to lay the last of the North American frontier [illegible] the pioneer, the settler and the capital[illegible].

It has greater natural resources [illegible] Mexico or Australia. Yet it has only [illegible] people [illegible] one to the square mile. The adjoining State of Washington has seventeen.

It is Canada's only Province [illegible] United States has three. It is nearer to the Orient than any part of the United States or Mexico.

Study the following facts about the [illegible] and extent of British Columbia's natural resources:

British Columbia possesses the greatest compact area of merchantable timber north of Panama. Dominion Chief Forester estimates British Columbia's standing timber at three hundred billion feet.

British Columbia's coal measures are estimated to contain forty billion tons of bituminous coal and sixty billion tons of anthracite.

3. The area of agricultural and fruit land in British Columbia is estimated at thirteen million acres, of which less than one tenth is under cultivation.

4. British Columbia's mines have produced over four hundred million dollars, in spite of the fact that geologists claim that the mineral section of British Columbia has not yet even been thoroughly prospected and that really very little development work has been done.

5. British Columbia's untouched deposits of magnetite and hematite are probably the greatest in the world.

6. British Columbia's fisheries are practically inexhaustible. Last year British Columbia produced over one [illegible] of the entire fisheries' production of the Dominion.

British Columbia has the only coast line on the Pacific in Canada. Through its ports comes and forever must come [illegible] of Canada's huge trade with the Orient.

Yet, in spite of these tremendous natural resources, British Columbia has today less than one tenth the population of the three Pacific Coast States in the United States, Washington, Oregon and California.

British Columbia is new. On account of its lack of transportation facilities it has been the last of the West to be developed. Its vast, undeveloped treasures only awaited railways, and with them population and capital, to make it the most productive area of its size on the face of the globe.

The railways have now come. Instead of one transcontinental railway last year, British Columbia will have THREE this year. It will have two other railways to bring the 600 miles of its length closer together. The total railway mileage of British Columbia in 1902 was 1,559 miles of steam and 68 miles of electric railways. Today British Columbia has, completed or under construction, 5,250 miles of steam and 150 miles of electric railways. Several thousand miles more are projected in the Province.

But progress—slow to come—anticipated the coming of the railways. Compare the figures for 1902 with those for 1912 for an idea of British Columbia's marvelous progress and the opportunities that exist there:

	1902	1912
Population	200,000	400,000
Fisheries	$5,000,000	$15,000,000
Lumber	282,000,000 ft.	1,262,000,000 ft.
Mines	$17,500,000	$32,600,000
Agriculture	6,750,000	22,000,000
Capital invested in manufactures	7,539,500	123,027,500
Customs	"400,000	11,000,000
Bank clearings	$2,846,000	$28,000,000
Total public works	656,000	8,240,000
Road and trail mileage	11,000	13,576

British Columbia is today on the eve of a giant awakening. If you are a young man, not afraid of hard work for a year or two, come to British Columbia. It is the last American frontier. The country needs you.

If you are only interested in a field for your investments, investigate the possibilities of British Columbia. There is no country on the American continent where the investor is so fully protected or can make his money earn more than in British Columbia.

Men and Money—that is the ringing need today of this wonderful Land of Opportunity, British Columbia. Men are pouring into Canada today at the rate of 500,000 a year. Millions of American capital are being invested here. Richness of natural resources, fairness of laws and the fact that [illegible] are enforced—that is the magnet which draws capital [illegible] this rich, new country.

All Canada with its [illegible] population of over [illegible] chartered banks [illegible] are the profits of a few of the [illegible] 1913, a year noted for its money stringency:

Bank of Montreal	[illegible]	Bank of Toronto	17.01
Royal Bank	[illegible]	Union Bank	15.0[illegible]
Bank of Commerce	14.[illegible]%	Bank of Ottawa
Molsons Bank	17.36%	Bank of Hochelaga

(Percentage of profits to paid up capital.)

It is a well-known fact that every new country needs capital for its development. The scope of the chartered [illegible] Canada is very limited, and there are hundreds, yes thousands of sound, legitimate investments in British Columbia which [illegible] bring a large return that the banks cannot touch under the Canadian laws. Sawmills and factories must be built [illegible] erected, cities and farms developed, industries and [illegible].

There is no place on the American continent [illegible] opportunities for safe, highly profitable investment [illegible] good as they are in British Columbia. With the limited [illegible] of chartered banks the [illegible] source of capital for [illegible] in Canada are the Trust Companies. The opportunities [illegible] legitimate profits by well-managed Trust Companies [illegible] and especially in British Columbia, are unlimited. An idea of the profit-making possibilities of such companies is furnished by two Vancouver companies. The Dominion Trust Company earned 38% on its capital in 1911 and 19.1% in 1912. The Canadian Financiers has paid a total of 149% in dividends in six years, or about [illegible] per month for 72 months. Trust Companies, incorporated under the strict laws of British Columbia, conservatively managed by responsible men, offer an almost unequaled field for profitable, safe investment.

British Columbia, with its dormant treasures of sea, field, mine, forest and commerce is calling you. It offers you the opportunity of getting [illegible] the wealth that is [illegible] from the development of the last American West. It is pointing the way [illegible] you heed that call at [illegible] today—now."

The law of profits is guided by the law of supply and [illegible] new country like British Columbia the demand for capital, to [illegible] stupendous natural resources, is very great. On the other hand [illegible] ply is limited. The growth of the province has been so [illegible] that the present supply is inadequate. Big capital has been invested [illegible] ions in British Columbia, but three times the supply would not [illegible] demand for legitimate, safe, highly profitable investments now [illegible] British Columbia.

British Columbia and Western Canada today is the scene of [illegible] gigantic development ever witnessed on the North American [illegible]. New towns and cities are being born over [illegible]. The old ones are [illegible] and trebling their population. New industries are springing up everywhere. Over one hundred million dollars [illegible] spent in 1913 in Western Canada in railway construction alone. Two new transcontinental railway lines will be completed this year.

Railways made possible the development of the Western States in the United States. Railways are now doing the same for British Columbia. The present era of progress is just beginning. [illegible] large and its resources great. The natural productiveness of the soil will [illegible] be the mainstay of wealth for all time to come.

To develop these resources, to build her cities [illegible] industries, British Columbia needs money. This demand will [illegible] land values and industries will continue to increase with [illegible] business and growth of population.

British Columbia needs money for her legitimate [illegible] the money the Province is willing to pay well. First mortgages on [illegible] property in Vancouver—a city of 200,000, and, in point of population [illegible] seaport city on the Pacific of North America—bring 8 per cent [illegible] is like usury to residents of the older established cities.

But British Columbia and its commercial and industrial [illegible] are new. Hence the high return on investments. Yet the safety of investments in British Columbia is as absolute—if not more—than in the [illegible] established communities. The Canadian laws, as regards protection of investors [illegible] strict, but they are enforced.

To meet this ringing need of money—to grasp the opportunity [illegible] safe profit making—a group of financial and business men of Vancouver [illegible] ing a Trust Company with a capital stock of $500,000, divided into 5,000 [illegible] each. The Company is to be incorporated under the "Trust Companies [illegible] British Columbia. The law is very favorable to the shareholders of such [illegible] and provides stringent safeguards for the protection of depositors, clients an[illegible].

Under the British Columbia "Trust Companies Act," Trust [illegible] quarterly statements under oath to the Minister [illegible] liabilities. During the past few years [illegible] for the protection of depositors [illegible] proposed Trust Company will be [illegible].

The proposed Trust Company will [illegible] United States, as well as sell mortgages and invest funds for [illegible] States and Europe.

In the course of its legitimate business as a Trust Company [illegible] investors, bringing together the money of the [illegible] British Columbia, the proposed Trust Company will [illegible] development of this rich and new country, but afford its shareholders an opportunity of profits coupled with absolute security of principal.

Here is the plan and offer. Instead [illegible] character—get a few men together and put up [illegible] proposed Trust Company have [illegible] ment, which appears in a [illegible].

URGES REFORM IN CARE OF INSANE

William E. English, in Letter to the American, Advocates Administrative Changes.

"PATIENTS KEPT TOO LONG"

William E. English, secretary of the Massachusetts Hospital [illegible] Society, in a letter to the AMERICAN declares essentials which should enter into the administration system of State hospitals for the insane.

"A larger staff of [illegible] nurses," the letter says, "is necessary for the adequate [illegible] ical study and treatment of the [illegible] ly mentally ill. A larger force of stenographers are required to record histories, descriptions of mental symptoms and physical conditions, peculiarities of manner and conduct and details of [illegible]

Reunion of 'Billy' Courtenay and 'Dave' Walsh

Actor and Governor Swap College Memories

WILLIAM COURTENAY GREETING GOVERNOR WALSH

By WILLIAM COURTENAY.

[illegible] had been saying, the [illegible] that players, after all, lead "narrow" lives, that they live, breathe, think and have their being in the theatre.

And on the following day—in part for the purpose of demonstrating that my friend was wrong—though he will [illegible] it, even with the [illegible] in front of him (perhaps you have a friend or two [illegible]) I dropped around to the State House to call upon an old college friend and talk Politics and Statesmanship and the Trend of the Times.

That, at least, was what I meant to talk about. Instead

"I confess I love the theatre, 'Billy,'" said the boy we used to call 'Dave,' but you know I've been tremendously busy. One-twelfth of my year has passed and I have hardly made a beginning in the tremendous work before me."

"How do you like being Governor?" I asked him.

"Tremendously," he half [illegible]

"Isn't it a [illegible] Billy [illegible] the responsibility [illegible] you at times? Don't the [illegible] like a burden?"

If I had stopped to think I wouldn't have asked such a fool question, for if I [illegible] was David I. Walsh [illegible] of [illegible] bright and clear. His skin was as fresh-looking as a baby's. His smile was good for votes.

"No," he said, "I am letting the other fellow do the worrying. Just at this moment the Executive Council is in session. THE "FOUR" OF THE FUTURE

Its Scope and Characteristics Defined by Studebaker Sales Manager.

By ARTHUR I. PHILIP

(Sales Manager, the Studebaker Corporation.)

There was a time when the mention of [illegible] conveyed to the [illegible] a mental image of [illegible] tremendous weight, the employment of a regular chauffeur, [illegible] charges and a first [illegible] to $6,000.

[illegible] for more than a year Studebaker [illegible] building a thorough- [illegible] and fully equipped light "Six," which has been retailing by thousands all over the world. While the Studebaker is the lowest priced "Six" on the market, there has been a general downward trend in all "Six" prices. These concessions and [illegible] "Six" popularity have [illegible] number of manufacturers to [illegible] production of four-cyl- [illegible] centralizing on [illegible] for use in a [illegible] where a large [illegible] demanded [illegible] of the light [illegible] bred in the [illegible] belief that, in [illegible] car may force [illegible] into the back- [illegible] four and the two- [illegible] seven or eight years [illegible] two-cylinder car did [illegible] "sengers" of the earliest [illegible]

[illegible] the past year we have re- [illegible] amount of corre- [illegible] that, in the [illegible] general public there [illegible] doubt regarding the [illegible] of the two types of motor [illegible] where opportunity [illegible] we have declared on [illegible] that, in our opinion, the [illegible] never crowd the "Four" [illegible] Until some revolution- [illegible] in motor engineer- [illegible] there will always [illegible] be said for six-cylin- [illegible] der cars.

[illegible] the light, popular-priced [illegible] a very distinct indi- [illegible] the type of [illegible] will supply the demands [illegible] cannot, however, be de- [illegible]

[illegible] defies competition on its [illegible] and high power and six [illegible] already synonymous. [illegible] speaks of seven passenger [illegible] "Six" is always implied [illegible] motorist who is willing to pay something in addition to the minimum price, to secure flexibility, reserve power, comfort and luxury, will be a "Six" buyer. There will always [illegible] class to whom this type [illegible] will appeal.

But there remains a still larger class of buyers who will always be content with four cylinders. They [illegible] to accept a car of five-passenger capacity, and are willing to make four cylinders answer their uses even though occasional gear changes in thick traffic and on the steepest hills may be implied. They want the absolute minimum on gasoline and oil consumption.

Oldfield Shows Old-Time Form

Having beaten Beachey once and tied him in the second heat, Oldfield raced the airman for the third time, in Los Angeles, Wednesday, January 22, before [illegible] people and won. He made 64 2-5 seconds, the first time and 55 seconds the second. Wednesday the track was in bad condition [illegible] of heavy rains, but Barney [illegible] 61 seconds. Oldfield [illegible] tires each time, the Non Skids performing perfectly. Oldfield's first time is thirty-six and [illegible] fifths seconds, while Beachey's is thirty-six seconds flat.

Business in Warfare

We are often told: "Sell your own goods and let your competitor alone." But in actual business nobody does anything of the kind. Those who do not attack the rival openly do it by more insidious methods. I prefer the open kind of warfare; by warfare is meant that every inch of territory acquired by one concern—every extension of the market—must be taken by main force from the others. That being the case, I believe in using the most modern implements of war—the thirteen-inch gun in the form of space, and the range and speed of the rapid-fire gatling gun in the form of circulation. I would as soon think of starting a selling campaign without using the tremendous circulation, the accuracy and the hard-hitting power of the Chicago Examiner and other Hearst newspapers as a general would think of going on to the battlefield today with crossbows and janvelin as weapons. They tell me about class circulation as against so-called mass circulation. Of course it has to be admitted that with 500,000 circulation every Sunday the Examiner has the mass. Experience, not theory, but actual sales, has taught me that in the tremendous mass is included the class, and that when you train the rapid-fire machine gun on the ranks of privates you mow down the officers at the same time. We used to depend on the sharpshooters to pick off the leaders. Nowadays we discard the uncertainty of the sharpshooters, who proved to be more often targets than marksmen, and trust to the mass circulation of the machine gun to "Get everything that is within range."

Diamond Vitalized Rubber Squeegee Tread Tires

That's how Diamond Squeegee Treads work—they provide the traction that prevents the skid—meaning security.

This extra safety advantage costs you nothing. The increased wear and mileage received from a Diamond Squeegee Tread Tire is so apparent that many motorists use them all the year around from the viewpoint of economy alone.

MOTOR INDUSTRY IS IN BETTER SHAPE THAN EVER

Everything Is Indicative of Continued Increase in Sales and Interest Throughout the Country

By J. C. KERRISON.

THOSE who were in attendance at the Chicago and New York shows could not help but be impressed with the business confidence that now permeates the industry. Less than three months ago there was a feeling of uneasiness in relation to business conditions throughout the United States which has been forgotten. The months have rolled away, and the New Year is beginning with every indication of continuing in its splendor for months to come.

The low-water mark was recorded in December—that is, so far as the general public was concerned or really knew. The impression at that time was that there was no business in the industry, and yet, strange though it may seem, the factory shipments for October, November and December were far in excess of the total shipments for the same period of any other corresponding year.

This was in striking contrast, it is true, to the retail conditions. They showed, beyond question, that while many realized the small amount of retail business being transacted, the future was full of promise, and they were preparing to meet the upward trend of the retail market.

The New York show developed renewed confidence in that locality, and the Chicago show, which closed last night, carried along the good work, bringing about a firmer establishment of business confidence in the Middle West. Manufacturers and dealers unanimously stated that they were acting upon what looked to them to be the banner year in the industry. Business was increasing each day, and it is an actual fact that more retail sales were recorded at the Chicago show, just closed, than at any other of the previous exhibits in HABIT OR HEROISM?

Cost of Upkeep Is Important

Motor Buyers Greatly Influenced by This Question.

There are approximately 1,000,000 automobiles in use in America alone. It is estimated that each will average 5,000 miles per year, making a total of 5,000,000,000 miles traveled by motor cars in America per year, which is equal to going around the world approximately 200,000 times.

Figuring the average miles gotten out of a gallon of gasoline for all sizes of cars at ten miles per gallon, it will take 500,000,000 gallons of gasoline per year to run the motor cars in America, which on the basis of 20 cents per gallon, means $100,000,000 in gasoline bill for motor cars in a year.

The motor car has already reached a stage of perfection where there are a great many of the well regarded staple cars, the repair and maintenance expense of which has gotten to be of so little consequence it is hardly worth considering, so that engineers have naturally turned their attention to the saving of fuel as the next job to be tackled.

Has Exceptional Mileage Record

Probably no motorist in New England an equal the mileage record that has been piled up during the past fourteen years by C. M. Kimball of Winthrop, who estimates that he has driven in that time over 225,000 miles.

Mr. Kimball purchased his first car—a steamer—in 1899, and since then has bought and driven eighteen different automobiles. It is needless to say that such a veteran as Mr. Kimball understands automobiles perfectly from a mechanical standpoint.

"Recently," said Mr. Kimball, "I left Winthrop for Portland, Maine, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning and returned the same day, arriving at Winthrop at 6 o'clock in the evening, covering about 220 miles. On this trip, as on most of my trips, I managed to get fifteen miles to the gallon of gasoline."

Mr. Kimball is a very enthusiastic Stutz owner and states that mechanically and every other way it excels any of the cars that he has driven during the past fourteen years.

PORTER WITH KEETON.

One of the recent important announcements is the news that Joseph D Porter has succeeded W G. Houck, as sales manager for the American Voiturette Company, manufacturers of the Keeton and Car-Nation cars. Mr. Houck's resignation was accepted on January 31, and Mr. Porter assumed charge immediately. The general opinion among the big men in the business is that the American Voiturette has scored a ten-strike in securing so capable a man as Jos Porter to supervise the distribution of its products

Believes Shows Have Good Effect

No Man Can Know Automobiles from Studying Catalogs.

"However closely and attentively he may study his atlas, a man can know the world until he gets out and takes a first hand look," says Ralph Ketchum of the Kissel Kar.

"For the same reason, no man can thoroughly know automobiles from study of catalogues and other sales literature, no matter how truthful the text and illustrations on the printed page. This leads to the conclusion that the annual automobile shows are extremely useful from an educational point of view.

"When I sell a Kissel Kar I want the buyer to feel sincerely satisfied that he is getting the fullest possible value for his money. The more he knows of other cars, the more he must be convinced of the worth of my car when he decides to give me his order. Being car-wise, he will get more immediate satisfaction in driving than he otherwise might. This means less time and attention on my part—less advice and instruction after the sale."

HINTS FOR WINTER.

FUEL ECONOMY.

The Weidely motor found in the Premier car, displayed in the New York and Chicago shows, proved one of the chief attractions. This motor, says its builders, has probably gotten further than any other motor in the lowering of the gasoline consumption per mile and a saving of a minimum of 40 per cent is figured in this motor as against other types, which would mean a saving of $40,000,000 a year.

Will Have Team in All Big Races

It is a long cry from that the racing game has experienced in a long time than the announcement made by the Maxwell Motor Company that Ray Harroun would superintend the construction of three special speed cars to be entered in important speed contests in this country and abroad. Harroun is manager of the Maxwell and Maxwell agencies in Indianapolis.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway classic will be the first event in which the cars will participate, and it is probable that they should make their first appearance there, as it was the opening of that event the first year it was run, that Ray Harroun won the grueling, to become known as the Nordyke Marmon Co. stunt.

The three speed specials which are being constructed in the Detroit plant of the Maxwell Company are now well under way, and the motors will soon be given their first work out.

"The cars will be built right up to the Indianapolis piston displacement limit of the Indianapolis classic, and the motors of the long-stroke type.

"The teams will be made up of the best drivers in the United States, and it is the desire of the Maxwell company that it will be a strictly American proposition."

AMERICA'S ADVANTAGE.

A German is allowed to take out a license in his native land for his car which he proposes to drive. That is nothing; many of our best American trained drivers spend several years in Europe before they take their proper places in the line-up.

Buick Six Has Broken All Records for Economy

We have proved absolutely that the Buick Six uses less gasoline per mile than any other six-cylinder car has even claimed. We have proved that it uses less than most fours.

The test of this car was made in Chicago, January 11, under the supervision of F. E. Edwards, formerly Technical Expert for the American Automobile Association, Darwin Hatch, Technical Expert of "Motor Age," and Reed Parker, Automobile Editor of The Chicago Tribune.

Automobile Editors of the Chicago newspapers were present and some headlines that appeared in their papers are reproduced here, together with their signed affidavit. These tell the story of the greatest economy record ever made by a six-cylinder car. Nothing can be more convincing of Buick Economy than this record of 20 1-10 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

The Buick Overhead Valve Motor uses less fuel per mile than any other motor of equal size, American or foreign make. This we guarantee.

The Buick Overhead Valve Motor is also guaranteed to develop more power than any other motor of equal size.

It is not only in the "Six" that this motor is installed—every Buick Car in all models from $950 to $1985 is equipped with this wonderful Buick Overhead Valve Motor.

See the Buick models at our salesrooms. They equal any car at any price in beauty of line and comfort, besides being the cars of Greatest Proved Economy and Power.

REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE MARKET OF PAST WEEK

Increase in Number of Sales Recorded, but Large Deals Show Falling Off.

SUBURBAN TRADE IS BRISK

Brisk trading, lacking however the characteristics that made the previous two weeks notable, featured the real estate market of the past week. While in number of sales the business greatly exceeded that registered at any time since New Year's, in the number of transactions, involving large properties, there was a decided falling off.

In fact, the market of the past few days represents an exact antithesis of the character of the business of preceding weeks, which was notable for the dimensions of transactions rather than number.

An encouraging development of the past week was the return to activity in suburban property, which has been somewhat ragged since the first of the year. The mild weather of the past few days was an important factor in the increased business of the outlying sections.

While few mercantile properties in the business section of the city changed hands, the outlook for business in this section is promising. A number of properties figure in preliminary agreements, which should be closed within a few weeks.

DOWN-TOWN DEAL.

Fred Holdsworth and Robert D. Farrington contributed one of the biggest deals of the week by purchasing three mercantile properties in the market section, having an assessed valuation of well over $150,000.

They purchased from Ruth W. Sears the five-story mercantile structure at Nos. 52 to 54 Commercial street, corner of Cross street. This estate has a total valuation of $84,000, of which $57,700 is on the 1,459 square feet of land. From Alice Williams they bought the property at No. 50 Commercial street, which is rated at $54,500, of which $48,000 is on the land. The third parcel purchased by Messrs. Holdsworth and Farrington was the property at Nos. 27 and 29 Fulton street. Ralph B. Williams was the grantor. The estate comprises a brick structure and 1,538 square feet of land, and is assessed for $30,000.

Another important transaction was the purchase by Marion E. Pike of the tract of land on Commonwealth avenue, between Summit avenue and Warren street, from Joseph A. Costello et al. The estate is assessed for $53,800. It is the intention of the purchaser to construct several apartment houses. Henderson and Ross consummated the trade.

URGE LAWS TO PREVENT REAL ESTATE FRAUD

Massachusetts Exchange Petitions Legislature for Statutes to Protect People.

Reliable real estate has the strength of [illegible]. Stocks may tumble, securities may fade in value [illegible] time of business depression or [illegible]—real estate always remains secure.

But the elements [illegible] may creep into real estate, as in every other human enterprise. [illegible] so, in fact, because the attraction of owning real property is one of the strongest impulses implanted in the heart of man. And sharpers, quick to take advantage of every human impulse, find real estate an attractive field for exploitation.

The real estate swindler has cropped up in almost every American city. He has made his presence felt especially in those cities where the laws are lax or poorly enforced.

New York, during the past few years has been an example of the way in which sharpers have been down to dominate the real estate field, fleece the public and decrease the business of the legitimate men engaged in the sale of real estate by destroying public confidence.

Fortunately, Boston has been spared the spectacle of a "reign of realty fraud." But we should take the safe track by adopting rigid laws, and then strongly enforcing them.

Legitimate real estate men in this city, whose interests as well as those of the investing public are at stake, feel the need of additional legislation for the protection of the public.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange—a progressive and enterprising organization—has presented two bills, both of which have as their object the protection of the purchaser of securities as well as real estate.

One bill makes it illegal to publish untrue or misleading advertisements concerning real estate.

The other provides for the strict supervision by the Commissioner of Corporations of all companies and corporations which offer for sale stocks or any other kind of securities.

TO PREVENT FRAUD.

Both are excellent measures. They should receive the hearty support not only of the general public, for whose protection they are designed, but of the legitimate men engaged in the real estate business, whose interests would suffer by disclosures of fraud in real estate.

Neither bill is revolutionary in its nature. Both are patterned after measures which have already been enacted with success elsewhere.

The bill which pertains to advertisements should prove especially effective in nipping fraud in the bud—before the public has been fleeced.

Advertising is the only effective means of reaching the public. And a law making it criminal to insert fraudulent advertisements would offer a very effective check to swindles.

Close scrutiny of advertisements and immediate investigation by prosecuting attorneys of the State of any proposal that appeared suspicious would have a very salutary effect in checking fraud.

PROTECTION NEEDED.

But, better than all, it would offer a means of checking the swindler at the outset—before he had concealed the fruits of the swindle or decamped from the State. Prevention is always safer than possible restitution.

These measures should be adopted, if only as preventatives. It is not impossible that the New York realty crooks, who are finding that city too hot to hold them, may select Massachusetts as the seat of their future operations.

As it is we are not without fraud

Poll Realty Brokers on Licensing Bill

A canvas of [illegible] with reference to their position on House Bill No. [illegible], now before the Mercantile Affairs Committee of the Legislature, which provides for the licensing of real estate brokers, is being conducted by the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange. As soon as the poll of the realty interests has been made, the Exchange will announce its position relative to the proposed legislation.

Protest Dorchester "Movie" Theatre

Protests against the [illegible] of the proposed moving picture theatre at the corner of [illegible] and Columbia road have been filed with Mayor Fitzgerald by residents of the locality. A petition signed by three hundred residents [illegible] filed with the Mayor. The petitioners maintain that a moving picture house, so close [illegible] will constitute [illegible].

In the annual report for 191[illegible] of the Board of Street Commissioners [illegible] which [illegible] of [illegible] were [illegible] out of thousands of dollars through the sale of lots of land that were next to worthless. And the operators escaped scot free because there was no law strong enough to reach them.

While such cases are the exception, they occur [illegible] claws and teeth [illegible] forces—for the protection of the public.

The Massachusetts Legislature should adopt both laws. The interests of the public [illegible] be placed on the statute books.

Real Estate Investments. Real Estate Investments. Real Estate Investments. Real Estate Investments. Real Estate Investments. Real Estate Investments. Real Estate—Miscellaneous. Real Estate—Miscellaneous.

There's necessarily a lot of reading matter in this announcement. But—If you are interested in money-making you should read every word of it.

IF YOU have $50, $100, $500, $1000 or more earning small rates of interest, and you want to make big, sure profits in the years to come, you should join this enterprise NOW, while the opportunity is yours. We are NOT GUESSING, or experimenting—we don't THINK "there's something under the ground"—but WE KNOW that something is in and on top of it, because we put it there, and it's growing, and some of it has been shipped at big profits.

THIS is not a s[illegible] to make money from the sale of stock. There are no bonus offerings in the form of "tempting bait," there is no preferred stock or bonds, and no ground floor inducements. The Company is not over-capitalized, its officers are not professional promoters, there are no underwriters employed.

REGARDING PINEAPPLES [illegible] been a slow market when [illegible] rives bruised or cold weather prohibits shipping, we have preserved it in ½ gallon glass jars of shredded Pineapple for soda fountain, club, hotel use, etc, as well as making soda fountain syrup, and we now have in Boston several thousand jars and jugs being labelled and boxed for the trade, which will make big profits.

BUT—This is what prompts this advertisement, and means your opportunity to MAKE MONEY with us if you have the patience to wait, and don't expect to get suddenly rich over night.

WE desire to [illegible] earning [illegible] that's why this opportun[illegible] you. We own the [illegible] through [illegible] want every nickel of profit that's possible in the business, and we are going to get it, and will give dealer and consumer fair profit and fair prices, too, consistent with good business sense. Mind you, the Pineapple end of the business is only a part of the enterprise, and while the canning factory will prove a big profit maker, the Grapefruit trees (and other products) need not be lost sight of, because they, too, will pay [illegible] in bearing [illegible] bear in [illegible] trees in four years.

And then, again, look at the location. It's the centre of the world [illegible] the water ports of the world can be reached from there. The Panama Canal is another big factor in the Island's continued progress and success.

IT is the purpose of the company eventually [illegible] operate eight plantations of [illegible] total six hundred and forty [illegible] completed, and the second is now under way. Profit-sharing certificates will be sold on the monthly payment plan, as heretofore, for the purpose of safety and continued upkeep until each plantation [illegible] profit-sharing certificates [illegible] the profits [illegible] which they are individually interested, while the Company will receive the balance of the profits from each one of the eight plantations.

THE profits to all concerned in years to come should be enormous, because of the very nature of the plans, which are TRULY CO-OPERATIVE from every standpoint. About 350 profit-sharing certificate holders are already booming and boosting our products among friends, acquaintances and storekeepers all over New England. This is a big advertising asset.

JUST [illegible] our enterprise will be [illegible] ground One Million [illegible] Pineapple Plants [illegible] and other products (320 acres), total [illegible] acres. The Pineapples, on an average of six lbs. each (conservative), would weigh [illegible] lbs., and would fill about Five Million cans, and at 25c retail with a profit of only a few cents per can, would alone pay tremendous dividends.

ITS all problematical as to just what dividends will be paid, but on very conservative figures of only $3.00 a box wholesale for Grapefruit (the price is usually $4 to $6 per box) and 10c each for Pineapples (wholesale prices are from 25c to 50c each)—don't get into your mind the little hard, sour, Red Spanish kind, which retail for 15c to 25c each, and that only weigh 1 lb. to 2 lbs. each, and are half waste, the figures for profit appear astounding.

THOSE of us who are actively engaged are devoting the best years of our lives to the enterprise—we can't MAKE MONEY FOR OURSELVES, unless everybody else does in proportion to individual holdings. Mr. P. J. Evans, Gen. Mgr., has had seven years of experience in the commercial upbuilding of the Isle of Pines, and has made a study of every end of the fruit business there, and the Isle of Pines Co-operative Fruit Co. was [illegible] self and a few friends, but as [illegible] was [illegible] and more buildings needed, more stock was sold, until now the stockholders number about fifty. These with the 350 profit-sharing certificate holders make 400 people financially concerned in the success of the enterprise.

WE could name a score of persons located in New England who have visited this Company's plantations on the Isle of Pines, but, for lack of space, the letters cannot be reproduced here. We respectfully refer, however, to Mr. Charles Bray of the firm of Lord & Spencer, Faneuil Hall Market, well-known fruit and produce dealers. Mr. Bray [illegible] from the Isle of Pines, where [illegible] our plantations. This firm sells thousands of crates of Isle of Pines Pineapples and Grapefruit.

ATTENTION is called to the United Fruit Co., to show the possibilities for money making in the fruit business. That [illegible] It started in a small way, and is now capitalized for over forty million dollars. A [illegible] recently [illegible] company, in the past few years, has paid 48 per cent. in extra stock bonuses, extra dividends and regular dividends. Those who joined the enterprise in the earlier days and waited for big profits [illegible]

HERE IS THE PROPOSITION and HERE IS where you should decide and act promptly by SUBSCRIBING NOW for the number of shares you want at $50 EACH. If your check book isn't handy or your cash not ready, write, and state how many shares you want reserved, and send a deposit of good faith and the balance within a few days thereafter. ONLY A LIMITED NUMBER OF SHARES AT $50 EACH WILL BE SOLD. To be used exclusively for building and equipping the Canning Factory. Any shares sold in excess of the amount required for this purpose will be held in reserve for the payment of additional land, upon which we have options.

$1000 for You

A 2-YEAR-OLD GRAPE FRUIT TREE

Raised in Citrus, Cuba, without fertilizer or irrigation. This fruit is of such superior quality that it brings better than $4 00 per box in the Boston markets.

WE are here presenting an opportunity to every high-grade workman to accumulate a thousand dollars, upon a plan that is well within his ability.

You pay us a small sum down and a small sum monthly for a short time.

We invest the money in planting Orange, Lemon and Grape Fruit Trees on our Plantation in Citrus Colony, Cuba.

The trees will be brought to a profitable fruit-bearing state in four years, when they will be worth at least $20 each and will yield at least $4 00 per year profit per tree.

You will then own five shares of the Company stock, which will have a value of $1,000, and that will probably pay in dividends from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. per annum on that valuation.

You can never get rich upon saving alone. Saving is the start of every fortune, but wise investment and co-operation is necessary to accumulate a fortune.

You are conversant with the present high prices for everything in the food line, especially fruits. Why not be one of those to get the profit from these high prices?

Our people are becoming more and more a fruit eating people, and are increasing greatly in the use of oranges and grape fruits.

We are authorized by the State of Massachusetts to issue $250,000 worth of Stock, and we are going to make this Stock worth a million dollars. We want you to be one of those to share in this profit and we have arranged easy payments so that it will be well within your ability.

In no place in the world can these fruits be raised cheaper and better than it can on our plantation in Citrus Colony, Cuba.

We do not have to fertilize or irrigate and there is absolutely no frost to injure the trees and we have no other serious difficulties to contend with.

Other men make money in wise investment. Why not you?

HOW WE PROTECT YOU
In Real Estate Transactions

WHEN YOU BUY REAL ESTATE, come to our office with the seller and let us write the agreement of sale. We will then have one of our attorneys examine the record title and give you a full report on the day promised.

If the title is satisfactory, we will represent you in passing papers, figuring taxes, accrued interest, fire insurance, rents, water rates, etc.

We will examine and approve your deed, record it, give you a title insurance policy and a complete statement of the adjustments.

Our guarantee of the title will protect you against any mistake; it will bind us to remove any objection to your title which may be made by a mortgagee or future purchaser and, best of all, will protect you from loss or lawsuits which no lawyer can foresee, arising from forgery, false personation, secret marriage, divorce, incorrect recital of heirs in probate proceedings and other like dangers.

Notice to Automobile Buyers

OUR MOTTO: FAIR AND HONEST TO ALL

Tell us What You Want to Buy an Automobile of Any Make and It Will Pay You

CLEARANCE SALE

The poor can own an automobile as well as the rich by calling on us at once. We have the best line of Slightly Used Automobiles at Reduced Prices of any dealer in New England. The prices on our cars will fit any man's pocketbook, poor or rich. Don't forget that the cars we are selling at prices below 200 are all good, serviceable cars and not old junk. The guarantee we give with $1,000 cars also applies to $100 cars.

WE HAVE MADE ARRANGEMENTS with the manufacturers, in order to get just a few more cars, so we have added to our stock a number of cars that were sold last season, but which have been taken back in exchange for new cars. These cars have been thoroughly overhauled and put in first-class condition, and we can guarantee them to give satisfaction. Come early before the rush begins.

Hundreds and hundreds of cars to choose from. Come and see us or write us and we will show you hundreds of bargains. BAY STATE MOTOR CAR CO., 1416 Tremont; ask any policeman.

'BEST BLESSING OF MARRIAGE IS. IT LASTS SO LONG'

So Says Dr. Richard C. Cabot in His New Book, "What Men Live By"

ARGUES AGAINST DIVORCE

No man wants to be fastened to his wife's beauty any more than to her apron strings.

Secrecy in the married life involves lying and sneaking about back streets.

One need not insist that all marriages are made in heaven, and could not have been better arranged.

The greatest blessing in marriage is that it lasts so long.

If in marriage a man cannot learn to see himself as others see him, he will probably never learn it at all.

—DR. RICHARD C. CABOT.

[illegible] constant pro[illegible] Harvard Uni[illegible] statements in [illegible] "What Men Live By" [illegible] published by [illegible] Company of th[illegible]

It [illegible] to his wife with [illegible]

> TO MY WIFE,
> [illegible] leader and com[illegible] work, play, love [illegible] of many years.

It is [illegible] that man's best [illegible] best citizenship and his [illegible] comes through the [illegible] outsiders can rarely get [illegible] attains.

WHAT SECRECY INVOLVES.

[illegible] says:

We [illegible] fairly say that marriage has been fairly tried, as long as man remains so fitfully and imperfectly monogamous as he is now. Monogamy is enjoined by Christianity and by modern Judaism, that it is the law of the land, that public opinion supports it enough to make frank polygamy a disgrace, that the history of marriage seems to tend towards monogamy in theory if not in practice—all these important facts.

Against secret polygamy it may be urged first, that such secrecy involves lying and sneaking about back streets, second, that jealousy and mutual bitterness are almost sure to poison the lives of those concerned, and third, [illegible] any such [illegible] a poor nest for any children that may be born.

A sound defense of monogamy must justify first of all its [illegible] forsaking all others [illegible] unto her so long as ye both shall live." Of course this does not mean that [illegible] people shall not [illegible] friends among both sexes [illegible] that there shall [illegible] a core of primary [illegible] shared with no other [illegible]

[illegible] my acquaintance [illegible] to have changed [illegible] The rolling [illegible] no skill because he [illegible] to any job long enough to [illegible] the soul of it or to get its [illegible] towards. May it not be the same with the "free lover"?

THE "ROLLING STONE" THEORY.

Few men stick to their work because they are perfectly in [illegible] with it and never [illegible] love with any other. They [illegible] it because they have learned to believe that nobody [illegible] anything unless he [illegible] to resist his momentary impulses and to learn [illegible] as he [illegible] attraction. No matter how devotedly a man is attached to his wife, he does not want to be fastened to her beauty any more than to her apron strings. He wants to be rationally as well as magically linked to her. He wants to be led by her experience and her nobility as well as by charm.

It is good to be thus linked by bonds of many colors as we are in marriage, rather than by one dull instrument, a contract. Married people share as a rule more and more diverse interests with each other than with any one else. He [illegible] children, sorrows, finances, [illegible] prejudices, sickness and health, who but mates [illegible] share so many richly varied realities?

Perhaps the greatest blessing in marriage is that it lasts so long. [illegible] of my tribute to [illegible] I have put [illegible] I know [illegible] need more. Poultry Department

A [illegible] the [illegible] Massachusetts [illegible] produced within the State, the remaining four-fifths coming from [illegible] of New England and from the Central West. Every year the demand for poultry [illegible] is increasing faster than the supply, and the wonder is that New England farmers and others [illegible] have been slow to recognize the opportunity [illegible] before them and take advantage of it. True, each year adds to the number of poultry keepers, but the number of these new [illegible] with a view [illegible] the [illegible] only. As [illegible] who live on the farms or [illegible] parcels of land or which [illegible] on a larger scale [illegible] have [illegible] to realize the enormous demand [illegible] poultry products and slow [illegible] increased.

[illegible] engaged in the poultry [illegible] to those not familiar [illegible] enterprise [illegible] astonishing. Eight [illegible] the weekly demand [illegible] seven or [illegible] Each of these cars [illegible] from sixteen [illegible] pounds. Remember [illegible] live poultry [illegible] Boston must not [illegible] with the [illegible] proposition. New [illegible] average of [illegible] per week, but [illegible] receipts fail [illegible] up go the prices [illegible] supply has to be [illegible]

[illegible] fifteen cents [illegible] rather low [illegible] applied [illegible] of live poultry [illegible] in one week, it means an expenditure of at least [illegible] of eight cars per week [illegible] the amount turned over [illegible] approximately [illegible] of these cars come from [illegible] the Middle or South Western States, where the [illegible] is a side issue of the [illegible] work and [illegible] by the women and older children. What a great opportunity the New England [illegible] to step in and help supply this demand and share the profit.

The receipts for only two cities have been cited but when the reader recalls that this consumption is going on fifty-two weeks in the year in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco and many other cities he can form but a small idea of the truly enormous proportions of the poultry industry.

Boston receives its supply for at least nine months of the year from outside the boundaries of New England. During the nine months there is a steady out-pouring of eastern money which might better be kept in the pockets of New Englanders or invested in New England industries.

If the Westerner with his $100 per acre land finds it profitable to raise [illegible] for the New England market [illegible] In other words [illegible] to [illegible] at fifteen to [illegible] thirteen [illegible] per pound [illegible]

[illegible] this country [illegible] demand [illegible] in sight that warrants the [illegible] that present [illegible] Five years ago only [illegible] per week were needed to supply the Boston market; what will the demand be five years hence? It behooves every reader of the AMERICAN to think seriously of this situation. Poultry raising produces many desirable results. The profits are sure and the investment of capital and labor comparatively small [illegible] poultry, why it is not profitable, too.

LAYING CONTEST.

The ultra cold weather of last week seemed to have had its effect on the [illegible] in the International Egg Laying Contest at Storrs. As an offset to the effect on the general flock one pen of Reds and one pen of Anconas [illegible] laying during the week.

It is believed that there will now be a steady upward [illegible] fifth week's production of 779 eggs. At least a review of the daily production for the week would seem to warrant such a conclusion. For instance one day's yield in the early part of the week was only eighty eggs whereas toward the end of the week the daily production had come up to 125 eggs.

The Rhode Island Reds [illegible] the English Wyandottes for first place for the week. [illegible] Reds [illegible] Wyandottes have not [illegible] as they did with another pen of Wyandottes belonging to D. J. Ryan & Son of Bridgeport, each having a score of twenty-seven eggs.

As already pointed out, the production of [illegible] little more [illegible] unusually [illegible] in spite of the record at the present moment [illegible] good deal of what [illegible] and they are [illegible] any time to come back [illegible] breeds may yet have [illegible] rate [illegible] is not yet over.

A pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by C. S. Scoville of East Haven has been particularly interesting to follow. Their production has [illegible] been phenomenal in [illegible] way, and yet they are among the ten leading Connecticut pens.

No. 2—The Tale of a Taxicab

I HAVE rumbled the street through the rain and sleet,
And I've carried full many a fare,
Till my paint has worn off, and I wheeze and I cough,
About ready to quit in despair;
For I give you my word that the things that I've heard
And the scenes that I've witnessed inside,
Though not charged on the clock, are sufficient to shock
A respectable taxicab's pride.

Then I picked up as fare an affectionate pair,
And I watched them with nervous delight;
For each time that they kissed my ignition I missed
Or my spark wouldn't seem to work right.
My misfortune progressed with each plea that he pressed
Till my chain slipped away unawares;
And I have to confess by the time she said "Yes"
I was fit to lay up for repairs.

Once I carried a dude, who was frightfully stewed,
And who thought that Broadway was the sea,
And that I was the boat of a pirate afloat,
And he absently climbed into me.
"Oh, you kid!" shouted he, and I chuckled with glee—
"CAPTAIN" Kidd was what he meant, I guess.
What we got out of him when he got out of me
Bought the chauffeur's old girl a new dress.

So I'm tired and old, and I long to be sold
And repose in some graveyard of junk—
Where my shame can be decently sunk.
For I've creaked and I've sobbed, and I've grafted and robbed
Till I can't look my clock in the face.
If they'd take me away from this daffy Broadway
I'd be happy most any old place.

Why the Snake Was Cut Down.

A BOSTON naturalist and writer, who is an authority on snakes, recently sent a good story in this relation to a Western newspaper. Upon the publication of the story of the writer found that there were some slight inaccuracies in the tale as printed. Accordingly he wrote to the editor about them. "In the first place," said he, "I stated that the snake was twenty feet long, and you had it only ten feet long."

In reply the naturalist received this apology from the editor

"Very sorry, indeed, for error, which, however, was unavoidable. We were very much crowded for space at the time we used the story, and we had to cut down everything."

Legal Red Tape.

MANY persons not in the legal profession learn that there are "rules of evidence" which make it possible for court proceedings to be blocked for considerable periods of time. Exactly what these rules are few laymen know. An instance of the humors of a situation brought about by these conditions is told by a Chicago lawyer

"I understand," said counsel, "that you called on the plaintiff. Is that so?"

"Yes, sir," responded the witness

"What did he say?"

At this juncture the attorney for the defence jumped to his feet and objected that the conversation could not be admitted. A half-hour's argument followed. The judges retired to their private room to consider the point

Some time later they filed into the court room and announced that the question might be put

"Well, what did the plaintiff say?"

"He wasn't at home, sir," was the answer.

They Had a Stormy Scene.

THERE was no denying that her brow was clouded as she dashed into the room like a whirlwind and accosted him in a tornado of words.

As she talked she stamped about the room in a literal cyclone of fury, and, with volcanic language, she poured out her words with lightning rapidity

"This is most reprehensible conduct on your part!" she thundered. Then she broke down and her tears fell like rain. It was plain that whatever he had done had played havoc with her feelings.

Then he spoke. In a torrent of words he hailed invectives upon her for her chilling sarcasm. He stormed up and down the room, and while she had heaped a torrent of abuse upon him he retaliated with a perfect typhoon of passion. Whatever principles he may have once had he tore up by the roots. It was a windy scene, and he howled as he talked.

At first she seemed fairly snowed under by his invectives until she got the drift of what he was saying, then she gave him a frosty look and the words she spoke rattled about him like hailstones. Finally he put on his hat.

"Do you think I would remain here and listen to such a weather-beaten frump as you?" he asked, and, passing through the door, he blew away.

A Letter from the Japanese Boy-of-All Work to the Editor of GOOD HOUSE KEEPING MAGAZINE Telling of His Troubles with Household Pets Published by Permission of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE.

To Editor Good Housekeeping Magazine Who do so much to make home-life less homely

HON. DEAR SIR:

Mrs. Benjoman Barnum of Pyramid Park, Penn., is the latest lady to turn me loose. Whether she are a relationship to Hon. P. T. Barnum (deceased) I am not awar enough to say, but she have got a very menag erie mind. Her home is a tame zoo full of pe mals. I am sure, if he had a bigger parlor she would keep a elephant

"Togo," she report to me when she hired me off the Fineheimer Employment Bureau, "noth ing make home so lively as several Pets."

"I noded this," is bright reply from me. "You are the most pettist, Lady I ever seen. Eh!"

She did not seem to [illegible] said, yet they was truthful like [illegible] bied Mr. Noah's Houseboat [illegible] 2-foot & 1-foot beasts it [illegible] statistics Mrs. Barnum posse [illegible] list of live Pets, which she suppos [illegible] hearted reasons of kindness:

1 Dog of wargish ways & Barko [illegible] His name was Julius Siezer, but Nex [illegible] him "Git Out!" because he dug nin [illegible] flower beds. I forgot his nationality [illegible] complexion was Irish. I Cat entitled Flor [illegible] who earned her food by purring for it. Her I was deliciously full of thorns; 1 Parrot call [illegible] Robt. Burns because his soul was in his tai [illegible] 1 canary-bird name Dick. He didn't seem to have no resemblance to his name; 2 Goldfi Twins, Harry & Carry who spent their day swimming in glass & saying nothing

Mrs. Barnum formerly had one husband who went dead. I congratulate him

When all those Pets is going at once, dog bark, cat-mew, parrot-shriek and canary-bird warbul, it sound like a brass band composed of dish-pans & steam whistle [illegible]

"I love my dum friends," explain Mrs. Bar num to me with kind-eye expression

"I love them most when they are most dum, I reparies, suppressing fly ears from those scrambled sounds. "If you could teach those goldy-fishes to sing, the barnonium would be complete."

While I said thus that dog Siezer [illegible] up and bit me on leg

"He do this in fun," say Mrs Barnum.

"So glad to hear!" I necolate. "Dog never hurts so much when they bite humorous"

"If you wish for to be employed in this Lone you must be keeper as well as housekeeper," she tell off. "Promptly at noon o'clock ever day the animals must be fed. Each have peculiaristic diet, which he crave for healt Siezer must have bone, Florence require cream, Robt. Burns expect apple, Dick ask for seed, while Harry & Carry demand fishfood. I should rather see anything than that my Pets go hungry."

I assimulate her words and do what best I can. It require tack and courage to chaperone those Pets. They are all cannibles by appetite and would love to eat each other for their food qualities. When Hon. Siezer, the dog, are unloosed from his mesh he start forthly with wag- [illegible] shelf where Harry & Carry are swimming selfishly around in their toy ocean

Hon Robt Burns, the parrot, are less partic [illegible] ular. He like any sort of food, so long as it are alive. One day he observe me and say with tender squawk: "O darling, come, come to your own sailor boy!" I come. When I approach affectionate close, Oh, sligh! Hon. Parrot re move ¼ from my ear and set there looking satisfied. I sorrow to think he could talk so tender, yet act so tough!

Last Thursday O. M. Mrs. Barnum approach to me. She did not know it was my last day with her. Neither did I. Like is so surprised' Togo," she instruct, "I am going over to Aunt Jane to set by a sick bedside

Are Aunt Jane diseased?" I require

No. It are her cat what has influenza of the ram," she tell. "I shall be gone 1 hour Remember, while I are away my pets [illegible] bring thes violets," and attemp to chew off thumb from me. Everything was affectionate as usual

Nextly I go to shelf where Harry & Carry are batting in glass. I took them to table where I irrigated them with fresh water. I was just feeding them slight lunch of delicious bait when——SCRASH!!!

From next room I heard Hon. Robt. Burns say distinctually, "If you love me, darling, tell me with your eyes!" So I knew he was doing some sort of murder

I rosh in. Oh!! what sight I seen. That parrot-fowell had escaped away from his roost and lept upward to goldy cage where Hon. Dick was making opera with voice. With talented crabb that conversational chicken had ship wrecked Hon. Cage and deposited Hon. Dickbird to floor. When I met Hon. Parrot he was hen-picking that talented songster. I attempt to arrest him for his brutality, but he attach my finger with his eagle mouth. I was removing him from this when, SCRUNSH!!!

Loud crashy of glass from next room I rosh forwards. I was just in time to be too late Hon. Florence had pushed glassy residence of Hon. Goldfishes to floor and was dieting on those gilt swimmers. She look thankful while she make gollup of Harry. She also ate Carry ½, but when I remove remainder from her she make reproachful growell and snagg me with thorny foot. I attemp to resore Hon. Carry who was fainted away, when—BOW WOWS!!!

Hon Siezer approach to scene determined to obtain food supply from that cat. Hon. Florence rosh up curtains with angry size, peculiar to sky-rockets when she seen that dogged approach. Hon. Dog smile up at Hon. Cat and Hon. Cat smile down at Hon. Dog

While thusly they stood Hon. Dick awoke up from where he lay and limped forth on shabby wings. He give 3 and ½ sorry peeps and flitter to fireplace where he flew up flue

Just at this instantaneous moment Hon Robt Burns arrive in with raweuse yellup, and looked his feet to chandelier where he hung suspended downside-up like a umbrella. Dog & Cat continue to gaz up & down at each other like Romeo & Juliet

"Should old acquaintance be forgot?" require Hon. Parrot, twirling his head 3 times in circular manner.

I had no time to reply to this inquisitiveness it were nearly time for Mrs. Barnum to return homeward and I was full of timid fright for fear she might notice how badly her Pets was mixed among themselves. I did not feel sufficient to meet her angry rage

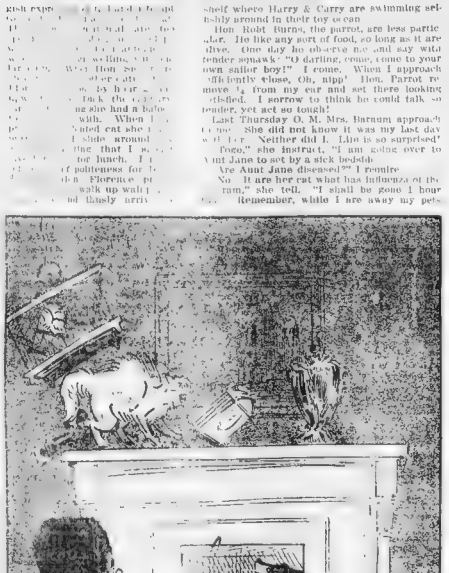
So I handed my resignation to myself

On hasty pieces of paper I wrote:

Esteamed Mrs. Madam—when nextly you see Togo he will be gone. So will your golden-fish & canniary-bird. But I will not be done when they are, because your Pets do not crave me for food. I are not sensitive about this neglect When you left me this morning you assured me that you thought their appetites was failing I could not dishcover that dangerous symptom All they need was change of food. If ever you find them refusing eat in the future, do what I done—turn them loose on each other. If you wish to find Harry & Carry, search Miss Florence. If you can not dishcover Miss Florence when you get back, search Mr. Siezer. I am sorry to go, but glad I went.

Yours truly,

Hashimura Togo,



This Delusive Mammal Are Too Speedful for That Dog, So She Elope with Hissy Noise to Mantel-Piece, Where She Set Growelling with Enlarged Fur,

[illegible] must be fed. Do not neglect this. I would rather anything than that they should go hungry."

I gave her my promissory word

As soonly as she had went I begin task of furnishing bill-of-fare for her zoo. To Siezer I gave bone, to Florence cream. They accept this without thanks. Then I donate one apple to Hon. Robt. Burns who sung, "Every morn I

"I SEE by the papers," said Milton to his father, "that Mayor Mitchel of New York has issued an order to the police department to arrest all gangs and crooks in town."

"Please, Milton," said Mutterzolb, "don't read me such a kind bluffs what's in the papers because it makes me to laugh, and today is the day I must pay my taxes."

"Don't you believe they'll do it?" asked Milton

"Say, Milton, do I look like a feller what's going to be born yesterday, or do you think I wuz just now imported from Ellisses Ireland?"

"I see," said Milton, "that you haven't any confidence in Mayor Mitchel"

"I don't know anything at all about Meyer Mitchel, but I do know this much! If they are locking up all the crooks how is it they didn't lock up Rakofsky, the butcher?"

"Because they haven't any evidence against Rakofsky," said Milton

"No evidence! Say, the bills he sends me every month is plenty evidence to send him to jail for life, or at least hanged. Why is it that poor honest crooks is going every day to jail and such a highweight robber like Rakofsky is going around every day free, just like if he would be in the open air. And I know why. It's because he is a big politician. He thinks maybe I don't know this, but say, there is nothing in my green eyes.

"How long ago is it that his cousin, Abe Warkofsky, by you It's A. B. Wyckoff, ran for an olderman on the Socialist Labor Day Party and wuz elected nearly twice only he wuz short some votes? And didn't his son-in-law, Joe Bloombiatt, run for corner on the same ticket party. But that's nothing. Such a big politician is he that mit my own eyes I saw him many time talking mit policemans? No, sir. When I see a police man I run.

"And because he's a politician what good is it to poor citizens and taxi-payers like me? He only takes advantages. To show you, only once, a year ago I bought from him meat and already he sent me at least twelve bills. And I would pay him as soon as I would think of it, but when a man keeps on sending you so quick a bill every month he don't give you a chance to think from it. Only one time I buy meat from him and he is trying to collect twelve times. Such a crook I wouldn't even pay him once

"I made up my mind I would never again go in his butcher shop. But yesterday I heard he wuz home sick, so I went to see him in his store. And I wuz going to pay him, but is it my fault he wuzn't in? When I come in I see his son in there watching the meat. You know the one what is studying college. He wants to be a doctor. His father wants him to be a butcher. I think he will be both. That boy is terrible fresh. Even he asked me for money. And I ain't his customer at all—I deal with his father.

"It ain't bad enough that goneff charged me thirty cents a pound for chicken. He sends me a ten-pound when I ordered only a six. Say three dollars is too much to spend on a chicken. And when I told that to his son he said that's nothing, he spend already fifty dollars on a chicken. What a liar. Chickens don't grow so big

"Mit such a goneff prices you could be sure that I ain't going to buy so often chicken again like I did. I can't help even if it's mamma's birthday, and the times is so bad, Milton, we'll have to cut down expenses all around."

"Well," interrupted Milton, "the first thing we'll do is cut salaries, but we can't do it on the men in the factory because they're all union men."

"I would cut down the salary from the shipping clerk only he brings me every day cigars from his brother's cigar factory, and besides what could you cut down from six dollars a week? Well, anyway, I wouldn't cut nothing. I couldn't have it on my conscious to do it on my own cousin. But I am forgetting that the other day when I asked mamma what kind cousin he is to me she said only a very long distance cousin and by marriage. Take off a dolar and a half from him. It's better not to let long distance relations get too familiar

"Now the advertising we can't cut because that keeps up the business. But say, when you look into it, it amounts to nearly fifty-two dollars a year. But the competitions is so strong nowadays that I am forced to keep it up.

"And just think, Milton, that in a bad time like this when I am busy with expense cutting down your mother is busy mit expenses cutting up. She asked me for five hundred dollars which she took out of my pocket before I waked up this morning, to buy a diamond tiraha to wear in the head. It's our wedding nursery so I let her have it. I give nearly a good couple cryings when I think on such bad time she should take five hundred dollars from me, and I wouldn't mind it if it wuz for something useful."

"Well," said Milton, "you needn't worry about that. I talked mamma out of getting that tiara."

"Milton," said Mutterzolb, "for saving me five hundred dollars in such a bad times I wouldn't cut even a penny from your salary. You done even more as what I could do. How did you done that?"

"Very easily," replied Milton. "I told mamma how useless a tiara would be to her so she bought a sealskin coat instead which costs only three hundred dollars more than the tiara. It is more useful and besides it is something that mamma won't forget for a long time to come, isn't that so?"

"Sure it is," answered Mutterzolb, "because it's something that I wouldn't forget for a long time, either. For that you don't get no salary at all."

Practical Philanthropy

Great Organized Movement to Aid the Suffering—Noted Men Praise Smile's "Charity Begins at Home" Plan.

SPURRED by the frightful suffering of the clams on the coast during the cold spell, the Smile has started a fund to provide sweaters for all destitute clams.

Picture the little bays and creeks, the happy homes of thousands of clams, frozen over by cruel Jack Frost. Think of the shrinking forms of the unprotected clams below the icy roof which shuts them off from sun and air! Doesn't your heart bleed for them? Sure it does. Then lend your help to the Smile's Fund for Providing Sweaters for Shivering Clams.

Every clam on the Long Island coast will be given, free of all charge, a warm knitted sweater. The colors will be blue and green, and the initials of each clam will be woven in front of its sweater, so that there will be no confusion when a number of clams take off their sweaters to take part in athletic sports or on account of warm weather.

All over the world the Smile's plan has been enthusiastically received

HUERTA OF MEXICO: Our Mexican clams need no clothing, as the temperature of our waters is high, but I heartily sympathize with the Smile's movement for the amelioration of conditions existing in American oceans.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER: You should give each clam one penny. When the penny has earned 500 per cent. each clam will be able to buy its own sweater.

A. CARNEGIE: Have the Long Island clams enough libraries? Will supply one if clams will subscribe for its upkeep.

Send in your subscriptions.

Did You Know That—

An agnostic is a bloke who thinks he doesn't know anything—and is probably right?

An agnostic never reads this column or he would be one?

A Real Reform

"Pirate" Has Plan to Give English Language a Boost.

All of these yappings about "simplified spelling" make me tired. What we need is simplified tenses in the English language. As a starter, I would suggest the following modified tenses:

Present.	Past.	Perfect.
Run	Ran	Beat it.
Sing	Sang	Sank.
Dig	Dug	Borrowed.
Throw	Threw	Trun.
Fly	Flew	Fell.
Walk	Walked	Limped.
Wait	Warted (for his girl.)	Collapsed.

If the English language is changing (as it is) why can't you get busy on this at once?

Great Idea! Glad you wrote—or perhaps we should say wrote us this letter. Next week more improvements.

Mrs. Jinks Tries the Salary Basis

WHEN Mrs. Jinks came home her husband had been in the house all of ten minutes and was tearing about angrily at the delay of his dinner.

"I wanted to get out to the lodge tonight. It seems to me with all day long and nothing to do you might get home"—

"How stupid of you, dear. I did not," she interrupted him. "Don't you see me?"

"I suppose you were gadding about at some bridge party"—

"Oh, no, I've given up bridge. I was attending a meeting of the Homedale Woman's Equal Rights Association."

"You'll be a regular suffragette next and"—

"And we have formulated the loveliest plan. We are all going to demand pay for our services on a salary basis," Mrs. Jinks said smilingly.

Jinks glared.

"Tomorrow I am going to begin to keep a strict account for a week. At the end of that time I will hand you a bill for my services, which I expect you will pay. It is only fair."

"All right, all right, but what about eats?" Jinks asked. He grinned because he didn't believe his wife would bother to keep an account an entire week. But at the end of the week she handed him this bill:

John J. Jinks, to Mrs. Nellie Jinks, Dr

Seven breakfasts at 50 cents	$3.50
Seven dinners at $1	7.00
Making bed 7 mornings at 25 cents	1.75
Sweeping and putting house in order twice	.50
Sewing on shirt button	.10
Sewing on overcoat buttons	.20
Pressing trousers	.50
Darning socks (4 pairs at 15 cents)	.60
Extra meal on Sunday	.75
Playing piano to entertain, 4 times	4.00
Picking up laundry	.20
Attending furnace during day	3.00
Carfare	1.10
Doing shopping for house	2.00
Total	$28.70

Jinks took the bill and studied it thoughtfully. Mrs. Jinks looked on triumphantly.

"You see," she said, "you would have to pay fifty cents for breakfast down town, and you always pay a dollar for dinners in town, and of course, you couldn't hire any one to dust and sweep and make beds and do your shopping and mend and sew on buttons and darn socks without pay, could you?"

"Just a minute, just a minute," and Jinks marked up the bill and did some more writing and handed her the result. It did not read as follows:

Wages of average maid for week	$6.00
Sewing on shirt button	.10
Sewing on overcoat buttons	.20
Pressing trousers	.25
Doing shopping for house	2.00
Total	$8.50

"You see," explained Jinks without a smile, "I can hire a maid to get all the meals and pick up the laundry and tend furnace and sweep and dust for $6 a week. If I am to pay extra prices for breakfasts and dinners, why pay grocery bills? Did it ever occur to you that restaurants include both the raw material and the cooking and serving in the $1 [illegible] charge for dinner?"

"Of [illegible]"

1 lb. chocolates	$ .80
One hat	7.85
One Fall suit	64.00
Theatre and suppers to [illegible]
Taxi (minus $4 for [illegible] playing)	.50
Hooking dress up back three [illegible]	.10
Your half of grocery bill	[illegible]
Rent (week's portion)	[illegible]
Spending money LOANED YOU	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]
Credit, per your bill	[illegible]
Am't due	$ 13.15

"You see," said Jinks [illegible] his plan of [illegible] we [illegible] penses evenly. [illegible] 25 cents. I pay [illegible] this household expenses [illegible] the theatre [illegible] minus the four [illegible] playing those [illegible] are."

TAKE IT FROM SOLOMON

---By J. J. LEIBSON

[illegible] 1914, by the Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

NOTE: A young man was brought before Solomon, charged with attempted suicide. He had been disappointed in love. The King talked to him awhile, and the young man went on his way rejoicing. That evening, while celebrating his narrow escape, the young man gave his rapt listeners samples of the King's wisdom:

1.—MY SON, the unwary fish taketh the hook only when there is bait thereon; the unhappy bird falleth a prey when the fowler spreadeth his net; the Chuckinhead kicketh the brick neath the cast off hat only on all Fool's Day; BUT—

2.—A young man proposeth marriage every hour.

3.—Therefore is he in need of instruction; he wanteth Wisdom.

4.—For the words of his own mouth oft pronounce sentence on him; yea, by the question on his lips is he condemned.

5.—Lo, the woman giveth him a chance; she answereth NO, though she meaneth YES.

6.—OPPORTUNITY looketh him in the eye, yet will he not back out.

7.—Like the cat that is ejected from the rear door, and appeareth later in peaceful slumber on the best parlor furniture, he COMETH BACK.

8.—Then is he taken; and he hath none to blame but himself.

9.—For the woman easeth her conscience with an EXCUSE.

10.—She reflecteth, if I take him not, Somebody Else will.

11.—And somebody Else furketh at every turning, at the theatre and the dance, when he is invited out to dinner, and even in the house of his best friend.

13.—He that will not hearken unto Wisdom, Danger stalketh him, even as a man in a forest surrounded by amateur hunters.

14.—But he that heareth my instructions is as safe as the deer they hunt.

15.—Therefore, my son, if thou wouldst eat the bread with a merry heart, cherish the days of thy liberty lest they depart from thee and become but a memory, only to be recalled.

16.—As a dowager recalleth her youth and figure.

20.—And all that remaineth to him is his growl.

21.—Lo, he riseth at 6 in Winter to tend the furnace, and there he tarrieth among the ashes to smoke his pipe, lest his wife discover his BEASTLY HABIT.

22.—He goeth shopping in his lunch hour and catcheth the dickens if he forgetteth the shoes for the baby.

23.—Against the taunting of thy married friends that thou art as a dog, remember my words, that a LIVING dog is better than a DEAD lion.

HERCULES—Have you ever smoked before?

MATILDA—Once I smoked some corn silk, but I couldn't find anything but wrapping paper to put it in and I got awfully sick.

HERCULES—How could corn silk make any one sick?

MATILDA—Well, you see, this paper had been wrapped around some cheese.

HERCULES—You came near having a Welsh rarebit.

MATILDA (lighting match)—What do I do? Blow or pull?

HERCULES—I would suggest pulling at the start.

MATILDA—I feel funny. Now I want to see it come out of my nose.

HERCULES—I wouldn't try that just yet.

MATILDA—What's the reason I can't?

MATILDA—I know a man who can make it come out of his ears.

HERCULES—Did you see him do it?

MATILDA—No, because I accidentally burned my hand against his cigarette, but he says he did it.

HERCULES—Is it too strong for you?

MATILDA—Yes, this must be Union tobacco.

HERCULES—Why "Union?"

MATILDA—Because "in Union there is [illegible]."

WELL, here I am, all dressed up just as I was when I went to Jess Wilson's wedding in Washington. This dress suit of mine is well named, 'cause it fits more like a dress than a suit. When Woodrow saw the fit, he threw another. Somehow, I have a feelink of insecurity in this suit. There's no affection to it, and I ain't got any confidence in it.

Now, if I could just feel like Uncle Jawge about things I wouldn't be in any suit chung to me. I'd simply let it go hang. Uncle Jawge is [illegible] world's heavyweight champion optimist. He's as happy a [illegible] man who's tickled to death because he ain't bowlegged. [illegible] can't call Uncle Jawge a leech, but he does play [illegible] help. So Uncle Jawge [illegible] new enough to put a piece of lime into a gin [illegible] Then to dress me on an affinity cocktail—you know, the kind you [illegible] and then wife comes in as a chaser.

After seven hours' persistent defiance of the third rail Uncle Jawge replaced his parquet teeth—he had removed some of them to make a clear gangway for the drinks—and started out of the cafe for the most convenient telegraph pole to wait for the car home. You understand that not all of his teeth were born teeth. Of course, some were intact and others—tucked in. I think he has five Woolworths, eight Kresges and four of two other nominal brands.

Anyaow, as he was executing an Edward Payson Weston to this telegraph pole he gave one of these sudden, you know, lurches and bumped right into the pole, and a young fellow leaning up against it, with considerable crash. Down came the pole, right on top of both of 'em. They should have divorced the pole for non-support, but they couldn't move.

For the first time in history a cop came to the rescue and asked if anybody call an ambulance. Uncle Jawge said no, but to call the postmaster. "Why?" said the policeman. "So he can take the post-off-us," said Uncle Jawge. You see, even though he had his ribs all stove in, Uncle Jawge would have his little joke.

When Uncle Jawge got better I took him to the grand banquet of the Dusky Doves Society. Well, the way the ladies there had their dresses hewn out in front would have made you want to sing, "Tailor, spare that cloth. Why, if some of 'em had sneezed they would have been arrested for posing as "September Morn."

Uncle Jawge says, with the cold weather coming on, he thinks he can build up a great trade manufacturing storm-doors for silk skirts. He said he couldn't for the life of him see why these ladies wore transparent gowns. I tell like I could see through it, all right.

"Well," says Uncle Jawge, "with these gowns growing less and less concealing all the time, my only hope is to live about three years more."

These instances of Uncle Jawge's glorious optimism seem to break out of him all the time. And he can't see why I'm a possumist—I mean, pessimist. Listen. I stood outside the door of that banquet hall, just as peaceful as could be, when up jumped a hungry bulldog and insisted on tasting my leg. I yelled for help and another bulldog closed in on me. You know, that thing sorta sours me on the world.

Besides Uncle Jawge's anti-philanthropic activities, he has had conferred upon him the po[illegible]ency of the United Rubber Trust. They hold meetings every windy day in front of the Flatiron Building.

He's goin' into politics, too, pretty soon. Yep. Gonna run for office. He'll be doing well if he gets a job running back and forth from the office. But you got to give Uncle Jawge credit for being liberal. He says in his campaign he's out to please everybody. Says his business from now on is going to be simply pleasing people. He's going to close up the saloons on Sunday to get the church vote, and then close up the churches on Sunday to get the saloon vote. That's his system. Just be fair and square to everybody.

Pople kick because the subway's dusty and stuffy. Uncle Jawge says he'll make all the subways into "L's". And for the people who say the "L" is cold and draughty, he'll make all the "L's" into subways.

The other day Uncle Jawge lost a valuable watch. He said it wasn't for the money it was worth that he cared, but the association. He had to sell a hundred cakes of soap to get that watch. Of course, that required association with a lot of people who needed soap.

Well, Uncle Jawge appealed to Mr. Waldo to recover his watch. Waldo said he would send all three of his plain-clothes men, and guaranteed to see the watch run down. Said he would leave no stone unturned to find it. About an hour later we were walking by one of the excavations for the new aqueduct. A blast just happened to be touched off, and there was a regular explosion. Rocks flew up in the air, and all.

"'Deed, I would like to get my watch back again," says Uncle Jawge, "but still I don't want 'em to blow up the whole doggone island to get it."

Some Stories You Have Never Heard.

Three, Not Four.

A SOUTHERN Congressman tells of a negro in his employ to whom was granted permission to make use of certain land belonging to the Congressman for farming purposes, it being stipulated that the darky should render to the member one-fourth of the crop derived therefrom.

When the crop was harvested, the representative was surprised to find that the darky had not fulfilled his part of the agreement, for, while he hauled away three wagonloads of produce, he had not sent a single one to his employer's barn. The latter called the negro's attention to the fact, asking: "How's this, Moses. Wasn't I to receive a fourth of the crop?"

"Yassuh, you was," was the response, "but dere's only three loads, suh, only three loads."

Easily Explained.

THE house surgeon of a Chicago hospital was attending to the injuries of a woman whose arm had been badly bitten. As he dressed the wound, the surgeon remarked:

"I cannot make out what sort of creature bit you. This too small for a horse's bite and too large for a dog's."

"Oh, it wasn't no animal bit me," was the answer, "it was another [illegible]."

Rubbing It in.

THERE was once haled into a Chicago court a battered specimen of humanity, on whose haggard face, however, were discernable faint reminders of better days.

The Judge, who perceived these evidences of a former prosperity, was interested in the hobo.

"Where are you from?" he asked.

"Boston," said the prisoner, dejectedly.

"Indeed," said the Judge. "Yours is a sad fall. And yet you don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have sunk."

The prisoner winced. "Your Honor does me an injustice," he said. "The disgrace of arrest for drunkenness, the mortification of being thrust into a noisome dungeon, the publicity and humiliation of trial in a crowded and dingy courtroom—all these I can bear—but to be sentenced by a police magistrate who splits his infinitives, that is, indeed, the last blow!"

Not Time in a Mile.

A WASHINGTON horseman tells of an over-anxious owner and a particularly conscientious rider at a recent meet in Pimlico. The owner had issued full orders as to the way a horse was to be ridden in a certain race. The jockey was a diminutive darky. The original orders were supplemented by provisions for all manner of emergencies, all of which somewhat bewildered the jockey.

"See heah, boss," he finally said, "dis heah race is only one mile. I can't do all them things you tells in jest one mile."

The Teacher's Theory Shattered.

"CHILDREN," said the teacher to his pupils, "you should be able to do anything equally well with either hand. With a little practice you will find it just as easy to do anything with one hand as it is with the other."

"Is it?" inquired the urchin at the foot of the class. "Let's see you put your left hand in the right-hand pocket of your trousers."

NEW SECRETS IN JOHNSON 'BRIBE' TOLD BY WOMAN

Wife of Fugitive Bondsman Who Engineered Negro Champion's Escape Declares She Will Jail Those Who "Fleeced" Husband

Mrs. Sol Lewisohn Declares Federal Officers Received Total of $38,000 in Two Cases—Mentions the Sid McHie Trial

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Th Federal investigation into the $25,000 "slush fund," the alleged amount spent by Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight champion, in affecting his getaway before he escaped to Paris, promises to unearth a series of scandals among Federal officials that will cover the entire State, and it is hinted that several of those most prominently mentioned are using every effort to block the investigation

It was brought to light today that the same officials who are mentioned in the Johnson case were also the leaders in the famous Sid McHie bucketshop case, which was compromised with a fine after McHie had divided $13,000 among Federal officials, and that other petty cases were "fixed" for proportionate amounts

WOMAN THE CENTRAL FIGURE.

Mrs. Sol Lewisohn, wife of the fugitive bondsman and banker, the man who is said to have engineered the Johnson deal, is today the central figure in the investigation before the Grand Jury following threats she had made to send to jail the officials who had fleeced her husband and Johnson

It is said on many sides and even hinted by those carrying on the investigation that the inquiry is intended to close Mrs. Lewisohn's mouth rather than to prove or disprove the charges.

Checks have been produced and since seized by District Attorney Wilkerson, which show that Lewisohn paid thousands of dollars to Federal officials.

CHECKS PAID TO OFFICIALS.

These include Assistant District Attorneys L. B. Jacobs, Harry A. Parkin and Ben Davis and United States Commissioner Mark A. Foote, before whom all defendants who obtained bond from Lewisohn had to appear.

The checks were explained in every instance as personal loans. Mrs. Lewisohn says they were dividends on the bond business done by her husband

From Paris Jack Johnson declares that he gave $20,000 to a South Side resort keeper to be divided between two federal officials just before he fled to Europe

He threatens to return to Chicago, face his accusers and take his chances with the courts.

The federal crowd is in a panic because Lewisohn has sent word from his hiding place that he will return to Chicago if Johnson does and aid him in presecuting federal officials.

BOASTS OF FIXING CASES.

Through his wife Lewinsohn boasts possession of proof that he has bribed a dozen federal officials and that he regularly "fixed" big cases in which immunity could be secured for the payment of from $10,000 to $25,000

Mrs. Lewinsohn will be called upon later to repeat in detail her statement that she has seen her husband pay graft money to a federal official and has heard him discuss with a prominent attorney the business of bribing many officials

She will be asked to tell of the $13,000 in cash which her husband brought home as an incident to "fixing" the McHie case, of the telephone conversation she has said she had with a federal official who demanded his [illegible] share of the money.

Her daughter Beatrice, who is said to have listened to her father and a prominent lawyer discussing various schemes of bribery, will be another witness

Mrs. Lewinsohn will tell intimate details of her husband's relations with those interested in the escape of "Jack" Johnson after he was convicted and sentenced as a white slaver and what she knows of the

HEDLUND FIT AGAIN

NOW AFTER KIVIAT

Oscar Hedlund, the fleet miler of the B. A. A., is in perfect condition again and will give Abel Kiviat and the other star milers a great battle in the Hunter mile at the B. A. A. games next Saturday. The Brookline boy showed all of his old speed at the Irish American A. A. track games last night, when he finished first in the one-mile handicap race in 4m 30 4-5s.

Hedlund started from scratch and did not experience much trouble in overtaking his field. If Hedlund had been pressed, he would have made much better time than he did.

WILLIAMS WINNER IN CAMPI BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 31.—Kid Williams, the Baltimore bantamweight, today knocked out Eddie Campi of San Francisco in the twelfth round of their scheduled twenty-round battle. Williams' victory makes him the logical opponent for Johnny Coulon, the world's bantamweight champion

Williams' win over Campi was a decisive one and proved that he is the Coast boy's master. It was the second meeting between these famous fighters. Their first bout was staged here last February and Williams earned the decision after twenty rounds of hurricane fight.

The majority of the "fans" who witnessed today's whirl believe that Williams would have an even chance of winning from Coulon. The Chicago bantamweight has been going [illegible] several years. He only engaged in three bouts during 1913, [illegible] fought once this year.

Coulon [illegible] Young Sinnett in Racine, Wis., recently and had a hard [illegible] Johnny injured one of his hands in that bout and will not be able to enter the ring for several weeks

It is a question whether Coulon will consent to meet Williams. The Chicago boxer has always avoided meeting the leading men in the bantamweight division and may offer an excuse for refusing to sign with Williams. He may demand that the Baltimore boy make 116 pounds ringside, which he would probably refuse to do

Crimson Once More Challenges Lampoon

The Harvard Crimson has once more come to bat with a particularly insolent hockey challenge to its old rival, the Harvard Lampoon, in the following language

After waiting for [illegible]

from the inhabitants of the Mount Auburn [illegible] the management of the Crimson hockey team finds that it must again be the aggressor

If there are seven men among the funny fellows who can skate that is [illegible] the editors of this sheet wish to inform them that they can't do the job well enough to trim the Crimson hockey team in a regulation game under such as catch can or any other case of rules

The only restriction [illegible] we will insist on is that all of the Lampoon's be bona fide amateurs and that they have never played summer hockey for money.

If Mr. Sizer and his proofreaders care to take this seriously, let it be known that the game can be arranged for any day after the mid-year period. Furthermore we might add by the way of warning that although we may not dwell [illegible] we are the boys who put the [illegible] aside from this we have destructive qualities, and although we hate to tease [illegible] we feel that we could take the lamp out of Lampoon.

Be all this as it may, our forwards are alert and our wings are outstretch. Let the ice drop its pen and the bird to egg for it is high time to receive your annual walloping.

We trust Mr. Sizer will be able to [illegible] his so [illegible] confreres before the ice has melted. In the meanwhile "Glory to the Crimson."

GREAT CROWD SEES STARS IN BIG I. A. A. A. TRACK MEET

Oscar Hedlund Finishes First in the Mile Handicap; B. A. A. Flyer Has an Easy Time Crossing Finish Line in the Lead

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

In a whirl of excitement the first annual indoor invitation games of the newly-organized Irish American Athletic Association came to a close at 10:45 o'clock last night in Mechanics Hall. The events were run off with clock-work precision, and from the drop of the hat at 7:45, until the last race was run, there was plenty of stuff to bring forth the cheers of the large crowd

That last race was a relay battle between the crack teams of Harvard and the Boston Athletic Association, rivals of old. But what promised to be a cracking struggle came to nothing when Meanix of the Unicorn four, fell while leading. A quarter of a lap was lost by this accident, a distance the B. A. A. runners that followed Meanix were not able to overcome.

[illegible] of Harvard was opposed to Burns of the B. A. A. when the race started. Burns took the lead and set a slow pace which B[illegible] foolishly allowed him to maintain. Capper and Meanix then took up the running and the pace grew hot. With [illegible] Meanix tumbled to the floor [illegible] before he was up the Crimson athlete had [illegible] lead on him

Merrihew and Bingham were the third pair, but the Harvard man maintained his lead and then came the anchor men, Tom Halpin, of the B. A. A., and Barron, of Harvard. Halpin was like a race horse, but Barron was there with the sprint also and when Halpin found it was impossible to catch his man he slowed down to nothing and Harvard won in a walk

BIG CROWD AT THE MEET

Despite the rainy night there was a large crowd on hand by the time the early heats had been run off. Most of the sprints were disposed of in quick time and then the relay races began. Most of them were exciting contests and kept the crowd cheering [illegible]

Harvard won all the points in the high jump and Yale won first and third in the 65-yard run. The other events were divided up impartially [illegible] enough, the Harvard Freshmen won their relay race from Exeter in much the same way that the Varsity beat the Unicorn, an Exeter man falling when in the lead

There were five wrestling bouts in the [illegible] of the hall and these who [illegible] this sort of sport had a fine [illegible] watching the mat artists

Hedlund ran a splendid mile, winning [illegible] and Harry Smith the New York distance runner, gave a great exhibition in the three-mile event

A glittering list of officials started the program. Heading this list was Mayor [illegible] Curley, who was named as honorary referee. The real referee was A. J. Hill, Jr. A little way down the list was the name of [illegible], who stumped for Kenny in the late campaign

Political differences were buried for the evening, at least, and all hands did their best to make the games a success.

Charlie Brickley, he of the great football foot, captain of the Harvard football team, was one of the prominent athletes entered. He was billed to put the shot, with a handicap of 4 feet 2 inches over J. P. Lawlor of the I. A. A. A.

HEDLUND WINS MILE.

[illegible] to begin at 7:[illegible] the first heat of the 40-yard handicap did not get under way until 7:45, but from that time on things came fast

After [illegible] heats in the handicap dash the 40 yard scratch invitation was put [illegible] Although there were twenty-three entries, only enough athletes to make one heat showed up, [illegible] that way

[illegible] of Lowder Point, won this race [illegible] with Jamieson, the Maynard lad, second. The time was [illegible] of a second over the record

Eight [illegible] huskies got on their marks for the mile handicap run. Oscar Hedlund wearing the Unicorn colors was on scratch, giving as high [illegible] yards to his field. They got the pistol at 8:15. It was not fast until Hedlund was able to pass his first [illegible] Greene, a team mate, but from that stage he mowed them down fast [illegible] ran into the lead on the sixth [illegible] Once in the lead he set a terrific pace and easily shook off all [illegible]. Blackman, the Harvard [illegible] who started from the 65 yard [illegible] ran a splendid race, coming up [illegible] nipping second place by a foot [illegible] the fast tiring Greene of the

It [illegible] been the dream of the practical football player every year to let the rules crystallize so that we would get a permanent form and it would not be necessary for a man to learn a new manual every year, nor would it impose upon the men who have graduated two or three years the sense and feeling of being more or less out of it until somebody has explained to them what changes have taken place in the rules since their day.

For the last three years, we have come more near this desirable crystalization than ever before, and if the efforts of all reformers be limited to clearing up the difficult points of the present rules rather than altering the style of play, it is safe to say that spectators and players for 1914 will be greatly relieved.

Moreover there are enough minor points—minor in the sense of affecting the play—that need be made definite and also to be enforced to give the Rules Committee and those who wish to help plenty to do.

PROPOSED CHANGES TO MAKE RULES CLEAR.

IF any one wishes to experiment, let him take the rule regarding the placing of the [illegible] man on defence and attack, namely, that one which forbids a guard or tackle, if dropped out of the line, to run with the ball unless he goes five yards back.

Probably any one who knows anything about football understands the meaning of this rule, but how to word it so that a coach shall be free to use his men as he pleases on defence, which is one of the traditions of football, and yet prevent [illegible] from taking advantage of this [illegible] to [illegible] allow to run with the ball is a puzzle that has [illegible] far [illegible] too much for the rule makers.

Another point that was evidently somewhat misunderstood last season was what I referred to generally among players as the "on side kick." Hundreds of letters came to the writer indicating that players were confounding comments on the rules with the rules themselves.

When last year it was [illegible] lawful for a kicker to punt from a point nearer the scrimmage line than five yards, that legislation of itself opened up the possibility of the return of the old fashioned on side kick. That is, a [illegible] so performed that men of the kicker's side would be behind him when he kicked the ball.

It was not at all the on side kick of three or four years ago. That on side kick was introduced by the rule which provided that when a kicked ball struck the ground it placed the kicker's men on side, whether they were ahead of the ball or the man when the ball was kicked or not.

This rule regarding the on side kick lasted for a few years, but it brought in the expression "on side kick." Hence, when comments were made this year about the reintroduction of the on side kick, many players assumed that this rule had been brought back into force.

That is not so and the only on side kick possible is the one wherein the player is behind the man when he kicks the ball. It may be necessary to put a definition of this into the rules.

FIELD JUDGE ADVISABLE TO ENFORCE RULES.

THERE are many suggestions for making the game more complicated. Every effort should be turned in another direction; that is, of simplifying it all possible. Most of the methods of play and rules (thanks to their remaining nearly stationary for a second season) are now fairly well understood by the player and spectator, and with the clearing up of a few points like the above, we should have a game that has a chance to develop along sound lines.

We must, however, have the rules enforced. That was the rock upon which the game came near being wrecked formerly, and no matter what may be the object of those who are objecting to the return of the field judge, they must realize, if they wish to see fair play, that, like the second umpire in baseball, it is the only way to produce it.

Understand, I do not at all refer to the trivial incident of a man being six inches off side or any of the minor points of the play. I do mean that if two teams have the proper amount of diversified attack there will be cases where, in order to rule fairly on the play and to see the points that are of importance, a field judge is necessary.

No men were better equipped in knowledge and experience, in integrity of purpose and ability to divide up work than those who officiated in several of the big games last season, and yet there were plenty of cases of the most unwarranted infringement of rules and infringement that meant a material difference in the play, all of which went unnoticed simply because the officials could not cover the necessary points.

FOOTBALL MOURNS NEIL SNOW'S DEATH.

EVERY football player in the last dozen years, and every graduate of the University of Michigan, as well as many of the University of Chicago and other Middle West universities, were profoundly shocked at the news of the death of Neil W. Snow of the University of Michigan.

Thousands remember well the big blonde official, first in the Middle West and then drafted on for the big games in the East. Snow was a fine, all-around athlete—one of the best that ever graduated from the Ann Arbor institution. Yost picked him as end on his All-Time Michigan team. He was also a good baseball man and track man.

Snow was the umpire of both the Harvard-Yale and Yale-Princeton games last Fall, and his loss will be strongly felt in football circles.

Walter Camp will explain the other changes proposed in the football rules of 1914 in tomorrow's Boston AMERICAN.

cage but Mann made a perfect stop and bounced the puck to the side.

Rankin tried hard during the next few minutes of play to score and made several well meant rushes up the rink only to be stopped by Willetts and Claflin.

SCORE TIED IN SECOND PERIOD.

The Harvard forwards got into working order again and made several good shots at the goal but Mann waded off each attempt and the half ended with Harvard having one goal advantage.

Harvard outplayed the visiting team during [illegible] half, but Parsons of McGill tied the score and made the goal go into overtime play.

Hopkins and Smart both had opportunities to score in this period, but were too over-anxious and did not take the time to make a straight shot.

Hopkins had the puck directly in front of the McGill cage with none but the goal tender in his way, but he shot hurriedly and the puck went a sailing several feet to the side of the net.

Smart, shortly after, received a backward pass [illegible] directly in front of the McGill cage, but could not make a straight shot.

After sixteen minutes and sixteen seconds of play [illegible] tied the score. It was only his speed coupled with clever dribbling and stick handling that enabled him to get by the stonewall defence of Willetts and Claflin and cage the [illegible].

Parsons was slightly injured during the last minute of play when he tried to trip a Harvard player. He was sent off the ice for two minutes and time expired while he was still serving his penalty.

PARSONS WON THE GAME.

When the first five-minute extra period was played Kendall took Parsons' place but after a short rest the young rover was put back into the game. Hopkins and Smart again missed [illegible] easy chance to win the game.

BARWISE WINS HIGH JUMP.

Barwise, of the B. A. A., the scratch man, won first place in the running high jump with [illegible] jump of [illegible] feet [illegible] inches from scratch. [illegible] was loudly applauded.

The relay battles began about 8:15 and, as usual, furnished plenty of tumult and excitement in nearly every match. One of the best of the early ones was that between Boston College and Worcester Poly.

It was not until the third relay took up the running that Boston was able to take the lead, but Rowan cut down [illegible] the anchor man made good in the last spurt, winning handily by eight yards in good time.

One of the fiercest races was the three cornered affair between the Emmet Guards, the Coast Artillery and the Armory A. A. Each team took a turn at leading, but the Emmets had the best at the end.

Then came another corking relay between the Harvard Freshmen and Exeter. Williams the Exeter man established a lead over Wilcox, but fell just before he finished and Harvard took the lead. It was nip and tuck the rest of the way, but the Crimson held the whip hand to the finish.

BEST ATHLETES WILL COMPETE IN ANNUAL B. A. A. GAMES NEXT WEEK

BIG FIELD IN B. A. A. MEET

400 Track and Field Athletes Entered

SPECIAL MATCH RACE FOR HALPIN WITH LIPPINCOTT

Greatest Array of Sprinters Ever Entered in Big Games to Gather Here for Prizes.

OLD MARKS ARE IN DANGER

Long Distance Stars from All Over Country Will Have Separate Event in Three-Mile Run.

The climax of the indoor track season in New England will be reached when the B. A. A. holds its monster athletic meet in Mechanics Building next Saturday night. More than 400 of the leading track and field athletes in the United States will compete in the long list of events which make up the program.

The Unicorn games are always the chief event of importance in New England track circles. They are eagerly looked forward to by the leading college, club and schoolboy stars in the East. The star track men of other sections of the country also journey to Boston in order to take part in this annual classic.

There is but little chance for the unknown track man in the B. A. A. games. There are so many experienced veterans in these games each year that the novice has only a slim chance of winning a place in any event.

HALPIN IN SPECIAL EVENT.

One of the big features of the B. A. A. games this year will be a special match race between Tom Halpin of the B. A. A. and Donald Lippincott, who will run under the colors of the University of Pennsylvania. Lippincott is one of the heroes of the 1912 Olympic games and he is certain to give Halpin a merry battle for supremacy.

Halpin has been running in wonderful form this Winter. He has almost shattered several world records and seems to run faster in every race he enters.

Lippincott needs no introduction. His deeds are known almost everywhere foot racing flourishes. He has few equals in races from 100 to 440 yards.

Another big event will be the Hunter mile. The men entered in this event are as follows: Oscar Hedlund, B. A. A.; Abel Kiviat, Irish-American A. C., New York; R. P. Greene, B. A. A.; W. F. Gordon, Yonkers, N. Y., and W. Anderson, D. Noble and O. Gibbons, Yale.

Kiviat is under suspension for engaging in a Pilgrim fork race in New York, with Hannes Kolehmainen a week ago last night. The little Irish-American A. C. star will receive a hearing Wednesday and it is believed that he will be placed in good standing again.

KIVIAT MAY LAND HUNTER CUP.

The New Yorker has already won two legs on the famous Hunter trophy. Therefore if he can breeze across the finish line in the lead Saturday evening the Hunter Cup will become the permanent property of the Irish-American A. C.

Hedlund, however, asserts that he will win from Kiviat. Hedlund has the physique to make a champion but he does not use the best of generalship in his important races. If the Brookline boy uses his head as well as his feet Saturday, he will have an excellent chance of beating Kiviat.

A large number of men will take part in the 40-yard dash. Most of them have made good in the past and the battle for first place is sure to be a bitter one.

The star men who will know Saturday are as follows: Lippincott, University of Pennsylvania; Bowser, Syracuse University; O'Hara, Tech; Wilson, Tech; Burns, B. A. A.; Stevenson Trinity Club, New York Tesseract, Harvard; Moore, Yale; Rosenberger, Irish-American A. C., New York; Nevers, Bates; Reiler, Cornell; Inserroll, Cornell; Ainsworth, Yale, and I. T. Howe, unattached.

GREAT ARRAY OF SPRINTERS.

This is one of the greatest arrays of sprinters ever assembled on an indoor track, and it would not be surprising if the winner should break the track record for 40 yards. Stevenson was the winner of this event last year, but will have to be at his best if he is to repeat his feat this year.

A classy field will compete in the 600-yard run and the spectators should witness plenty of excitement. Included in the list of men who will battle for places are Spledeo and Potter, Cornell; Wolkie, Yale; Baker, New York A. C.; Meredith, University of Pennsylvania; Donahue, Syracuse; Taylor, Syracuse; Warner, B. A. A.; Stone, Harvard; McClure, Harvard; Caldwell, Cornell; Burke, B. A. A.; Hershell, Reilly and Shepard, Irish-American A. C., New York; Perry, Yale and Howe unattached.

Many of the men who are entered in the 600-yard run will also start in the 1,000-yard run. The best men are Spledeo and Potter, Cornell; Bosworth Brown; Baker, New York A. C.; Meredith, University of Pennsylvania; Taylor, Syracuse; Tweed and Marcuse, Dartmouth; Stone and McClure, Harvard and Burke, B. A. A.

Only a few stars have entered in the one-mile handicap race, with leading milers who save their strength for the Hunter cup. The best men in the mile handicap are as follows: Spledeo and Potter, Cornell; Bosworth Brown, Tesseract, B. A. A.; Blakeney and Stone, Harvard and Young Yale.

The three mile race has attracted an intense amount of interest, virtually all of the stars at this distance in the country will be seen at the Mechanics Building.

The complete entry list for the event is as follows: Hugh Spain, Bronx Church, New York; Hayes, Kolehmainen, Irish-American A. C., New York; Cliff Bourne, Tech; W. J. Cooke, Tech; Will H. Kline, Long Island A. C., New York; H. A. G. Wicks, Irish-American A. C.; Russell Springsteen, Yonkers, N. Y., and J. P. Hedigan, unattached.

FINN MAY START IN THREE MILE.

Smith won the event last year but he was not opposed by a crack field. Kolehmainen will probably be a favorite Saturday night, provided he is placed in good standing again, but Smith and Spraguetz, the recently won from Smith, and it is not fast fall in stating that he will beat Kolehmainen and Hayes.

Alva Richards, the winner of the high jump at the 1912 Olympic games, will take part in the high jump and will represent the Illinois A. C. Harsine of the B. A. A. will be the most dangerous opponent and he believes that he will win easily. The other star men who will compete are Tesson and Hall of Penn; W. Whalen, B. A. A.; Johnstone, Tech, and Carr, Harvard and Richard, the New York A. C.

The leading contenders for first place in the shot-put are as follows: Alva Richards, Illinois A. C.; Yale Bartlett, Brown Taylor, Irish-American A. C.; Cooper and Wilson, B. A. A.; Whitney and Mansfield, Dartmouth; Brackley, Hardwick, Storer, Horrigan, Dunn, Irish-American A. C., New York, and McDonald, Irish-American A. C., New York.

CLASSY FIELD IN HURDLES.

A long list of prominent men also entered in the three standing jumps. They include Alva Richards, Church, New York; A. W. Tressider, Holyoke Y. M. C. A.; Paul Austin, New York A. C.; M. A. Talbot, Irish-American A. C.; L. A. Whitney, Dartmouth, H. T. Worthington, Dartmouth, H. Johnson Trinity; A. W. Brookes, Boston Club, Fall River; Dunn, Bronx Church, Bronx Church, New York.

A large number of men have signified their intention of competing in the hurdles and the contest will be forced to run close to record time. The entries include those of Pritard and Kiler, Irish-American A. C., New York; Storrer, Cornell; Smith and Davidson, Yale; Noble and Jackson, Harvard; Worthington, Dartmouth; Clapp and Offutt, Yale; Huff, Tech, and Brady and McDonald, Columbia.

LONDON FOOTBALL TEAMS DEFEATED

Put Out of the Race for English Association Football Championship.

LONDON, Jan. 31. — The second round in the English association football tournament was fatal to the hopes of the London teams all of which were beaten. Tottenham fell victim to the City of Manchester, while the Clapton were surprised by a second half at Brighton. Millwall's victory over Bradford was the outstanding feature of the round. After they had scored a goal at half the Lions more than held their own, and thus they entered the round after two Trail matches over two of the first league clubs.

Nothing could be more remote from the truth. An athlete is jerked from his Winter quarters on or before the middle of February, dragged through floods, bum hotels, washouts, razor-backed diamonds, swamps, morasses, southern cooking and quagmires; he is brought into contact with mosquitoes, malaria, fleas, sticks, alligators, Pullman porters and other insects, then he is hurried northward and injected into the box of a blizzard and instructed to put on various exhibitions of the national pastime, vulgarly known as baseball.

The real idea back of a training trip is that if an athlete is able to survive the said trip he has the proper constitution, physique and morale for a big league ballplayer. Some of them are so rugged that they regain their normal health as early as the Fourth of July.

Ball players are not paid on training trips. All they get is food, lodging, traveling expenses and abuse. Some of them are allowed to draw on their prospective salaries, but they don't keep it long.

A scribe, traveling on a training trip, learns many things. One of them is that the gent who first called it the "Sunny South" was grossly misinformed.

WILLARD THINKS HE CAN DEFEAT 'GUNBOAT' SMITH

TOM JONES ENTHUSIASTIC

Willard's Manager Tells Naughton That His Man Has Improved and Smith Hasn't.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

The pugilistic trials and tribulations of one Jess Willard of Kansas form an interesting study. Once in [illegible] as a ringman, when his [illegible] beamed brightly, he [illegible] of Luther McCarty [illegible]

McCARTY'S DEATH ENDED IT.

That a [illegible] between the pair would surely be arranged some day seemed inevitable, but something happened at Calgary and McCarty's name was no longer associated with pugilist[illegible] happenings.

Willard went West and secured matches and by the same token forfeited all the good opinions that were formed of him by the coast sports before they saw him.

As a fighter he went from bad to worse, and was regarded as one of the jokes of the White Hope [illegible]

H[illegible] unfortunate [illegible] Los Angeles and while [illegible] connection with the [illegible] of "Bull" Young, came East and [illegible] bout with Carl Morris. Then suddenly the world brightened. The [illegible] acquitted him, and before he was quite done receiving the congratulations of his well wishers, Manager Tom Jones wired him from San Francisco that there would be a Jess Willard-"Gunboat" Smith [illegible] for the [illegible] heavyweight [illegible] of the world at Coffroth's Daly City arena next Fourth of July.

HE HAS A CHANCE NOW.

He is right [illegible] where he was a year ago when the ambition to get a crack at the title was strong in him [illegible] is better off, in fact. There was no assurance that he would get a match with L[illegible] McCarty, whereas the meeting with [illegible] Smith is definitely arranged.

[illegible] question put by the writer [illegible] vast improvement in Willard [illegible] said Jones. [illegible] he did not have to improve to beat "G[illegible]." He beat him the last time but was the victim of as wrongful a decision as was ever delivered. But let that go. Next time [illegible] will have so little [illegible] simply be 'amongst those present.' Yes sir, Willard has improved to such an extent that those who saw him fight before will [illegible] realize it is the same man."

"Are you allowing nothing for improvement in [illegible]?"

"Not a great deal," said Tom, with the suspicion of a sneer. "There are fighters who never improve and [illegible] is one of them. He is only a [illegible]. All he has is that haymaker and it's only the fellows who are scared of it that get in the way of it. They tell me he missed Pelky a hundred times and might have kept on missing him only that Pelky was tired and discouraged and did not care what happened."

'YOUNG BOB' FITZ A FIGHTER NOW

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—"The New York State Boxing Commission may bar me from re-entering the ring in New York, but they cannot bar Bob Fitzsimmons, Jr. from some day becoming the champion."

[illegible] by the results of the [illegible] his efforts to [illegible] the ring in New York State, [illegible] boxing [illegible] his son placed there, "Old Bob" finds some happiness in the fact that his son gives promise of developing into the greatest fighter of the age.

"That boy of mine is a wonder," declared "Old Bob." "He's a natural fighter. There never was another as good as he is. Why, right now he's so good he could whip me if I were in my prime—and I guess that was some little job according to what the newspapers used to say.

"Why, only yesterday the boy landed [illegible] and put me out. Of course it was only in a training bout, but it shows the punch the kid has got. Even Jeffries, when in his prime, could not hit any harder. It was some wallop and it took me several minutes to come to.

"I did not want my Bob to be a fighter, but he took to it like a duck goes to water. Before I knew anything about his ability he was knocking the daylights out of some toughs and bullies in our home town, Dunellen, N. J.

"KID" IS A NATURAL FIGHTER.

"One night I heard that a scrap was to be pulled off between a fellow that weighed about 200 pounds and some unknown kid. That 200-pounder was supposed to be the best scrapper in the neighborhood, but the kid made a punching bag out of him. I wasn't at the scrap, but I was told about it the next day.

"Well, right then and there I had a talk with the boy. He told me that he wanted to be a fighter. I tried to talk him out of it at first but he was determined. So I just set about teaching him some of the tricks that I had picked up. He learned 'em in no time, and invented a lot of his own that were wonders.

"He's been begging me to turn him loose on some of those white hopes that are shining the public with [illegible] theatrical exhibitions, but I want the boy to bide his time. He's young yet and not fully developed. Another year will do the trick. I'll work him up the ladder gradually and when he finally blossoms out you'll find what I tell you is right—that he'll take rank as the greatest heavyweight in the history of the game.

CARRIES A TERRIBLE PUNCH.

"That boy carries a terrible punch, he's as fast on his feet as a lightweight, heady and cool, has an almost perfect defence, and is absolutely fearless. What more does a fighter need?"

"Old Bob," who has been training at his home his son for a sparring partner. It's a treat to watch them. The old warrior seems to be almost as fast as he was in the days of his prime, but it looks as if his punches lack the terrific power that sent so many men to dreamland in days gone by.

"Young Bob" boxes with a smooth precision that makes him stand out as a real boxer. None of his movements are studied. He throws himself heart and soul into the contest and remembers but two things—one that he must not let his opponent hit him and the other that he must never fail to hit his opponent. But he remembers those well.

BURLESON FOR U. S. MONOPOLY OF WIRE LINES

"PRACTICAL AND DESIRABLE"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Purchase by the government of the telephone systems of the country, except the "farmer" lines, and the establishment of a federal monopoly over all telephone, telegraph and radio communication, are recommended in a report submitted to the Senate today by Postmaster-General Burleson, in compliance with the resolution of Senator Norris, requesting information from the postoffice department on the subject.

COMPLETE MONOPOLY.

The report was made on findings of a departmental committee, which made a study of the practicability of government ownership of telegraphs, and makes these recommendations:

That Congress declare a government monopoly over all telegraph, telephone and radio communications and such other means for the transmission of intelligence as may hereafter be developed;

That Congress acquire by purchase at appraised value the commercial telephone network, except the "Farmer" lines.

That Congress authorize the Postmaster-General to issue in his discretion and under such regulations as he may prescribe, revocable licenses for the operation by private individuals, associations, companies and corporations of the telegraph service and such as may not be required by the government.

SERVICE VS. PROFIT.

Declaring all economists who have treated the telegraph subject are agreed as to the monopolistic tendency of this business and believe it should be controlled by the government, the report continues:

"There is a radical difference between the policies of a public and private monopoly, both as regards the extension of service and the fixing of rates. In the extension of service the determining factor with the government is the needs of the people; with the private monopoly, the consideration of profit."

No insurmountable obstacles are found by the committee in the way of merging the telegraph and telephone facilities with postal service.

The committee, which was composed of Daniel C. Roper, first assistant postmaster-general; Chief Clerk Merritt O. Chance and John C Koons, superintendent of the divisions of salaries and allowances, does not believe that any serious difficulty would be encountered in financing the proposition.

Expect 15,000 at Ball for Jewish Hospital

COPPER METAL.

The copper metal market was dull at the end of the week with consumers slow to buy electrolyte at 14¾ cents a pound. Recent sales of the Lake brand have been at 15. Copper sellers believe that a buying movement is near, and that there is a better outlook for prices going higher than for a decline.

The Ironmonger of London, says: "American news is now entirely discredited after the last returns issued by the American Copper Producers' Association, which are regarded by most as having been manipulated if these present figures correctly represent the position, then it is held in many quarters that the preceding figures have not done so."

COTTON PRICES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31. The cotton market opened steady, but prices being 2 to 3 points higher. Liverpool cables were also regarded as favorable. Offerings were very light.

and if he did put his name on that sort of a product in connection with a statement as to what it was made of he would not very long [illegible] business as a shoe manufacturer."

The Congressman referred to the fact that buggies are sometimes advertised in catalogues for $40, the advertisement stating that the buggy in question is just like those you pay $85 for in the local market. The dupe sends in his $40. The buggy comes. It has no name on it. In about three weeks the paint begins to come off, and in three months the wheels and then the young man who expected to have a buggy [illegible] would last him a year or two has a broken[illegible] that was not worth 40 cents in the first place, and he does not know where to go to have his wrongs righted.

Similar frauds are widely practised in the [illegible] of pianos. It has been discovered, the Congressman pointed out, that pianos were put up in [illegible] instead of the kind of hardwood [illegible] used in the construction of pianos.

"Cheap, worthless pianos are yearly placed upon the market at a cost to the public of millions of dollars," he declared, "and the public is absolutely defenceless [illegible] this, all because the name of the maker [illegible] is not placed upon it."

That millions and millions of dollars are taken from the public every year with spurious articles of jewelry that are sold for gold, but do not contain [illegible] of the precious metal, was another charge.

Congressman Lindquist [illegible] at merchandise frauds of this character had [illegible] teresting revelations to make.

"Perhaps there are no commercial products on which there is a greater swindle," he declared, "than in the clothing industry. It is a known fact that many manufacturers have deliberately placed a label on cotton mixed and shoddy goods, stating that the goods were all wool. Such a label naturally enables the merchant to sell the goods at a higher price than would be possible if that same garment were properly labelled, because the average person cannot detect the quality from which a suit of clothes is made."

He displayed a piece of staple serge which is commercially known and sold by many merchants as pure wool. He had had it tested in laboratory, and the result showed that the supposed "wool" cloth contained 32.14 per cent cotton and only 59.74 per cent wool. Congressman Lindquist pointed out that the laboring people of this country are purchasing clothing made from this quality of serge and in most cases are paying $5 more for the suit simply because it is woven to imitate a high-grade pure worsted. He contended that if the manufacturer were compelled to put a label on this piece of goods showing that 32 per cent of it was cotton he would not be able to exact wool prices for it.

The Congressman also exhibited a piece of silk bought in one of the large New York stores. It had every appearance of being made of pure silk, but according to chemical tests it was only 65 per cent silk. If this silk had been genuine, as claimed, it could have been packed away in a trunk for fifty years without the least sign of deterioration, whereas silk of this character often cracks three months after its manufacture.

The weighting of silk, the Congressman pointed out, is accomplished by what is called a weighting bath. This bath is the most important one in the dyeing of "weighted silks," as the manufacturer can regulate the weight of the silk by the addition of tin crystals so as to increase the weight of the silk to an astonishing degree. The proportion of tin crystals used is regulated by the number of iron baths that have been previously given the silk. If two baths of iron have been given, 5 per cent of tin crystals is used; if four baths, 10 per cent, and so on.

Just why this is so is something of a mystery. All that is known is that by reason of some peculiar quality possessed by silk it is enabled to combine with iron and tin, and that exposure to the air after the bath fixes these chemicals permanently upon the fibers, thus increasing their weight to almost any extent. Silk, according to its quality and weight, will take up these substances from [illegible] to 300 per cent without creating suspicion in the mind of any one but an expert. Instances have been known in which silk has been [illegible] times its own weight. Some silk is made from pure cotton and wood pulp.

In the case of linen, Congressman Lindquist pointed out, frauds are almost universal. Few people can determine the difference between a fine piece of cotton and pure linen. The most frequent fraud in the selling of linen is found to be in the mixing of cotton and linen in such a way that only the shrewdest expert can detect whether the article is adulterated or not. Linen goods are also loaded with starch and clay in the same manner as cotton goods.

In discussing leather frauds, which cost the public millions of dollars annually, he showed that [illegible] leather "loaded" with glucose and epsom salts, but the substitution of leather is a big item in the swindle. There are four parts of the shoe that are most commonly counterfeited, namely, the heels, counters, insoles and [illegible]. These parts are usually substituted with one of five different compositions, as follows:

Leatherboard, which is made from a mixture of about 95 per cent leather scraps and 5 per cent paper or rags. It is reduced to a pulp and made into sheets in the same manner that cardboard is made.

[illegible] the material of which is similar to leatherboard, but it is said to be treated by a chemical process which makes it less susceptible to moisture, will disintegrate and crumple quickly upon being soaked in water.

Strawboard: This is a cheap paper board made from paper, straw, rags, etc., which are macerated and reduced to a pulp. It is then rolled into sheets and dried. No leather scraps are used in it. This material is very porous and disintegrates very quickly upon being soaked in water.

Pate: This material is manufactured from [illegible] ings of sole leather or belting leather. These shavings are pasted together and compressed. This material will not resist water. There is a lower grade of pate [illegible] contains no leather.

Chrome pate: This material is made from [illegible] ings or shavings of chrome leather pasted together and compressed. The pate previously described is made from bark-tanned skivings.

[illegible] the discoloration [illegible] only a [illegible] persons [illegible] these remedies is now customary, but [illegible] as it appeared [illegible] the skin [illegible] is not a harmless manifestation, but is due to destructive changes in the blood which are the direct result of the use of the drug, and that it is accomplished by impoverishment of the blood. Hence, those who take these remedies habitually must suffer from "anemia," or thin blood, and the symptoms which usually accompany this condition—pallor, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, muscular weakness, disinclination to take any exertion, etc.

The injudicious use of these remedies also has a harmful effect upon the heart, thus tending to exaggerate the symptoms above mentioned. In [illegible] give rise to other ill effects which arise from weakness of the circulation, and may often produce death.

It has long been known that most of the drugs in headache mixtures are habit-forming drugs. The habit is usually acquired through the use of the remedy for headaches and minor pains. Troubles of this kind are peculiarly likely to return again and again, and as the remedy has but a temporary effect the dose must be repeated. In time the patient may easily become dependent upon the drug.

Furthermore, the ache or pain for which the [illegible] was first taken is often worse than ever after the effects of the remedy have passed away, because of the weakened condition of the system, which may result from the use of these agents, and hence there is additional call for the remedy. Thus a habit may be established—more drug, impaired bodily health, lessened resistance, [illegible] pain, more drug.

How WOMEN Lost Their BEARDS

PREHISTORIC [illegible] Through all the [illegible] fixed idea regard[illegible] They must have [illegible]

NEW LIGHT on the Mystery of PAIN

A[illegible]

[illegible] becomes agony. When we burn [illegible] sensations of heat follow one another [illegible] takes a very short time to [illegible] of pain.

[illegible] sometimes mar[illegible] to pain, and [illegible] to touch, taste or smell. It is supposed [illegible] allows the nerves [illegible] with sufficient [illegible] from reaching the stage of pain.

The cornea or transparent portion of the eye presents a problem. If you touch the cornea ever so gently [illegible] pain. The explanation would naturally be [illegible] nerves of the cornea transmit sensations so [illegible] always cause pain. But this is not so. [illegible] a fine stream against the cornea the [illegible] touch nor of pain, but of cold. [illegible] sounds like thunder, drums and cart [illegible] leaden pain. High sounds and bright [illegible] red, increase sensitiveness to pain [illegible] most at the moment of awakening in [illegible] and least of all in the afternoon.

What to Do When Your Eyes Go Wrong

A "COLD" in the eye [illegible] most annoying and liable to be expensive.

You get up in the morning, look in the glass and find that one of your eyes or maybe both [illegible] much inflamed. If you do nothing about it, the condition may not pass away for a number of days, and meanwhile you are more or less disabled.

Very possibly, in some alarm, you go to see the oculist. He frightens you at once by telling you that it is "conjunctivitis"—a long word which means simply inflammation of the membrane that covers the eye. He puts some drops in the eye and tells you to come back the next day. You are finally cured, and the bill comes to $15 or $25.

That is all well enough. Perhaps you don't mind the bill, or the trouble of going to the doctor's. But [illegible] likely that you would be less satisfied if you knew that you could easily have cured yourself much quicker and without any expense at all.

If you have a "cold" in your eye, you can get rid of it within a few hours by bathing the eye freely and often with a solution made by putting [illegible] formaline into a teacupful of water.

The formaline you can buy at any drugstore. It [illegible] be used with an eye-dropper or an eye-bath, either of which can be had from the drugstore. But it is even more effective to allow somebody else to pour it into the eye by squeezing again and again a rag or piece of cotton saturated with it.

A "cold" in the eye is nothing in the world but a germ infection. Formaline kills the germs.

But don't use formaline in any stronger solution than two drops to the teacupful. If you get it into your eye in a pure state, you might destroy the sight. At the least, you would suffer frightful pain.

Incidentally it may be said that the best eye-water known to oculists for the treatment of sore eyes or lids [illegible] made by mixing ten grains of boracic acid and five grains of tannic acid with one drachm of camphor water [illegible] enough ordinary water to make a total of one ounce. [illegible] ingredients are cheap, purchased from the [illegible] and you can prepare them yourself if you care to.

How Birds FIND THEIR WAY HOME Better Than You Can

SOME persons are always "getting turned round" [illegible] step out of subways or theatres; [illegible] ers rarely, if ever, "lose their bearings," even in the most confusing surroundings. The cause of this difference in people lies in their childhood training. Those who are easily confused should blame their parents and teachers for it.

There are two methods by which creatures keep their bearings. One is by keeping in mind the points of the compass. This may be done by actual use of a compass, as on the ocean, or in deep forests, or by noting stars or the sun.

The second method ignores the points of the compass and relies on a single point, the starting point. This is the natural method [illegible] by birds, insects, fish, as [illegible] four-footed animals and savages. [illegible] more or less civilized man [illegible] points of the compass, and [illegible] ly used them clumsily. Indeed, [illegible] often become hopelessly lost through their inability to make use of the compass they have with them.

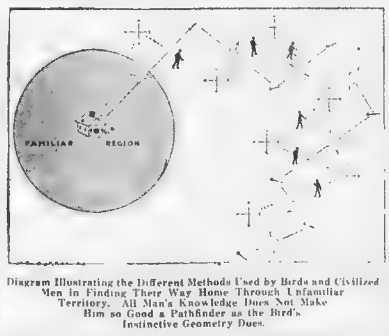

Diagram Illustrating the Different Methods Used by Birds and Civilized Men in Finding Their Way Home Through Unfamiliar Territory. All Man's Knowledge Does Not Make Him so Good a Pathfinder as the Bird's Instinctive Geometry Does.

The remarkable feature of the natural method is the amount of intuitive geometry it involves. A bird or fish will travel through unfamiliar territory, changing its direction many times, and yet when it wants to go home it will head for it on a "bee line."

As long as the creature keeps on a straight line he has only to face about in order to find his way home. As soon as he changes his course a problem of geometry is involved. With each turn the problem becomes more and more complicated and the strain on the memory more surprising.

It may be this subconscious strain on the memory that brings animals back to their starting points. It may be that with each turn the creature makes its muscles instinctively register in the brain the exact amount of deviation from the air-line home.

Foxes and wolves have a central point, either the place of their birth or a cave or burrow where they have spent considerable time. Even when this becomes uninhabitable they are known to appear periodically, gaze at it and whisk off again. Children would all take to the natural method and do pretty well with it if it were not for their early training regarding the points of the compass.

Recent experiments have [illegible] that persons who have what is known as a "bad sense of direction" have also "imaginary maps" in their minds. An imaginary map is [illegible] a set of false ideas as to where [illegible] are.

Ask a person to make a [illegible] mark representing the place he [illegible] and then indicate the direction of other cities, and even distant buildings and streets in his own town. If these points are fairly accurate you may be sure that this person is not one who is easily confused no matter where he is.

With as many as 30 per cent [illegible] will find the maps are ridiculous. Many people don't really know which way the centre of the town lies of the [illegible]. To many persons [illegible] west of New York [illegible] San Francisco still farther [illegible] Japan and China to the [illegible] other [illegible] of Europe.

These "imaginary maps" [illegible] confuse us all our lives [illegible] result of our early lessons [illegible] geography. We are taught this science long before it interests us and we talk glibly about east and north without at the same time placing them in our minds.

A geography teacher should get the points of the compass in the children's minds as regards their desks and the schoolhouse before a single map is shown. Then from time to time the teacher can test the mental map as it grows in each child's head and correct the imaginary features before they take root.

Why GREAT THINKERS Are Often ABSENT-MINDED

U[illegible] often [illegible] pressed [illegible]

[illegible] or indifferent pupils [illegible] The reason for this is that great [illegible] have poor memories. It is extremely difficult for them to memorize.

This difficulty is so pronounced that mental [illegible]

[illegible] which depends largely on [illegible] multiplication [illegible] prodigies in mental [illegible] are [illegible] to do any independent [illegible] even upon commonplace subjects.

[illegible] the ability to memorize depends what [illegible] terms associative memory. This is the power to bring two subjects quickly into relation with each other, making for all those qualities [illegible] under the popular term [illegible]

Judged by these standards, the great thinker [illegible] "inefficient." He cannot remember [illegible] facts quickly, nor can he remember [illegible] related facts very quickly. The [illegible] average man and woman will understand very quickly the great thinker will understand [illegible] slowly, not because his attention is [illegible] but because it is laborious work [illegible] associative memory recall just [illegible] which is so obviously funny to the [illegible] out of perspective, or out of [illegible] or incongruous. For, according [illegible] laughter is occasioned only by [illegible] not in proper relation to each other.

"My Path Leads to the Morgue — Then to Potter's Field"

The Career of Miss Florence Schenck, Who Realized the Fatal Folly of Her Misspent Life When It Was too Late---And the Lesson It Preaches to Women

POTTER'S FIELD.
The End of the "Primrose" Path.

IT is only a few days ago that Florence Schenck, the gay, wilful Virginian beauty, whose escapades made her notorious in two worlds, died the day after she arrived at her old home.

Three days before her death, she dictated the article that appears on this page.

Florence Schenck thought that she had at least a year to live, and she had determined to devote every working hour to warning other girls of the path she had taken—the gay primrose path, whose end is the unnamed grave of Potter's Field. This article was to have been her first move in her fight.

The lesson she would have taught in it has been vised by Death, and it is more important now perhaps than it would have been with its writer still alive.

Miss Schenck, it will be remembered, was the daughter of Dr. Powhattan Schenck, a retired surgeon of the United States army and member of one of the "First Families of Virginia." She ran away with Charles Wilson, a whip in the Alfred Vanderbilt stables. She had tired of the humdrum, respectable life in a modest home in the seaport town of Norfolk, Va. She wanted to see the world. She saw it. And what she saw and experienced killed her.

Florence Schenck at the Height of Her Gay, Misspent Life.

Florence Schenck As She Was When She Ran Away From Home with Charles Wilson, Vanderbilt's Horse Trainer

"Beware the Path I Trod!"

By Florence Schenck.

(Dictated by Her Three Days Before Her Death.)

WHEN my father, in answer to my pleadings, came to see me in my little room at the hospital, I could not see him through my tears. I could not speak for the sob in my throat. I clung to his hand, thinking: "Poor father! He has seen many a shipwreck down home, but never one more terrible than this of his daughter's life." I stared up into his face that was very stern and sad. I whispered:

"Kiss me, father."

He pressed his lips upon my forehead and I heard a little choke in his throat.

Then my lovely sister Ann came in and kissed me and cried. She went out of the room and two doctors came in and they and father looked at my bruised side and the purple gash where the surgeons had made an incision, and all of them looked very grave. Afterwards I looked up at father and he shook his head.

"You cannot live long, my daughter," he said. "At best it will be but a short time. If you seem to recover it will only mean that your short life will be that of an invalid. You have repented, have you not? Then spend whatever time is left to you in warning other girls against the path you have followed."

"The path that leads to the morgue and then to Potter's Field," I thought.

With my hand in his and our tears mingling I promised. And this is the way I shall do it.

I shall grow a little better. That they all expect for me. Knowing that it will only be a short time and that inevitably I shall grow worse and then the end will be very near, that time of being a little better will be my golden time. It is then that I will carry out my plan.

I shall not go back to my old home at Norfolk. That would be too severe a cross for my proud family, though they have not refused me shelter. But I shall leave New York, whose other name is temptation, for girls who have not great talents or the greatest talent of all, which is the ability to resist the lure of idleness and gayety. Even now with the shadow of death upon me I fear it, for its fingers, though wreathed in flowers, are strong and cruel.

I should like to go to a small city, for instance Richmond, and there live quietly and either lecture from the platform or with my pen, until the end comes. Always my sermon will be "The wages of sin is death," and always I will address myself to girls, weak, pleasure-loving girls, who know not what they say when they utter those ominous words, "I want to see the world."

Seven years ago I slipped out of my quiet home on the outskirts of Norfolk and came to New York in Alfred Vanderbilt's private car, the Wayfarer. The name of the car was an omen. But I did not know it then. It was the most luxurious sight I had ever seen, with velvet draperies and the scent of sandalwood and of fine cigars and of old wines hanging about it. People who boarded the car and got off again were people who belonged to the smiling world, where there is no fear mingled with the thought of paying next month's bills. I had forsaken the work world where I had been a stenographer, working in the Fair Grounds at the Jamestown Exposition at seven dollars a week, and had entered the play world, where I had nothing to do but look pretty and be gay spirited.

This alone would not have seemed justification to me for leaving my home. But I had at my elbow and figuratively at my feet a man with whom I was infatuated, Charles Wilson, whom I had met at the Horse Show, while I was admiring the Vanderbilt horses. I saw that he admired me and I was flattered. When he began to make love to me I believed him. When I got aboard the Wayfarer I believed that he would marry me when we reached New York.

Instead he took me to his home at Newport when a sweet faced, grayhaired woman greeted me kindly and called him Charlie. When I asked him who she was he said: "Don't make a fuss about it. She's my wife!"

I left their home in Newport and came to New York. He followed me here. I threatened to go home and tell my father everything.

"You'll not stay long," he sneered. "They'll kick you out. Do you suppose an F. F. V. will have such a girl as you now are under its roof?"

Although he spoke in anger, I knew he told the truth. I had always admired and loved my father, but I knew him as he was, a proud, stern man with little sympathy for the weaknesses of human nature. I had been very weak and foolish. That I loved this man who had strewn my life path with wreckage when I was only seventeen years old would be little excuse to him. Southerners are hot headed as well as high-spirited. If I told father the truth he might follow Charles Wilson and kill him. Before that thought I quailed. Often a woman's heart is traitor to her own best interests. I remained in New York. Wilson told me he would divorce his wife and marry me.

I tried to believe him and I waited. I hoped and prayed for the time when, rehabilitated, as his wife, I could pay a visit to my home. But waiting is a dangerous pastime in New York. Especially if you are young and beautiful.

If I went out for a walk my appearance attracted attention. I was always accosted, or was followed home, by some man, usually one with cruel eyes and a predatory mouth. Often I reached home just in time to slam the door in his face. If I dared to go to a play in the afternoon, it was the same.

I was very lonely. Charles Wilson's travels with the Vanderbilts' horses and his care for them at the stables in New York and in Newport kept him busy. I saw him seldom, and then for only a short time. If you are very clever you can amuse yourself. You can study and read. Your thoughts are excellent companions. But if you are only pretty and dependent the hours you are alone are hours of torture.

I have heard a girl like me say: "People have different ideas of hades. Mine is just being alone."

When you are alone, if you are such a girl, thoughts assail you. You see yourself deserted, starving, dying and alone. You think of a way out. You plan suicide but you are afraid. In those long hours alone while I was waiting for Charles Wilson to keep his promise I learned to drink.

A girl who was blue and lonely like myself advised it. "It will drive away the blue devils. You'll think you are a princess—for a little while," she said.

Two glasses of champagne made my head whirl, made me dance and sing, made me laugh, made me build air castles of the time when I should go home and introduce my husband and when my mother should take me in her arms and say, "Daughter, I forgive you."

The next time I was alone and blue I drank again, this time three glasses. I kept on comforting myself thus in secret.

Once Wilson came to call and found me unconscious, with the empty bottle and glass beside me. He was very angry. We quarrelled. He stayed away. I entreated him to come back. It was the beginning of many scenes between us.

Whether he would have willingly kept his words had I not in those months of waiting formed the habit of drinking, I don't know. I have never been sure. But of this I am sure. It gave him an excuse for procrastinating. It gave him reason to tell me that his love was gone because the girl who had come from Norfolk with him was gone.

My mirror told me that this time he told the truth. I was not the same girl. My figure was losing its slim, youthful lines. My features were bloated. My eyes were smaller and the lids were heavy. My fresh color had disappeared and had given way to a gray, pasty look. I was sober the morning I looked into the mirror and saw the truth that all I had, my beauty, was vanishing. I threw myself on the bed and cried for hours. I promised myself to stop drinking.

But that evening some gay friend phoned me of a party that was to [illegible] up at a rathskeller to watch the old [year] out and the new in. I knew I s[hould not be] alone. I went. I slept all of the [next] day. When I awoke I knew what [that] heavy torpor meant. I had drunk too much, far too much.

The Dowager Queen Who Is Always in Debt

London, Jan. 21.

FOR some time past Queen Alexandra's financial affairs have been the subject of a good deal of talk among those in her immediate entourage. Her Dowager Majesty is perhaps one of the worst women of business who ever had the unfettered control of a considerable fortune. Her income from the state is $[illegible] per annum and her private fortune, in the way of charges on the estate of the late King and interest from investments, amounts to about $600,000. This income, properly managed, would far [illegible] have sufficed to [illegible] Her Majesty after King Edward's [death], and would have [illegible] have kept her in the [illegible] the widow of the [illegible] naturally desired to [illegible]

But [her] expenditures have been steadily increasing until during the past year, it has exceeded her income by several tens of thousands.

Why I Shot Wm. E. Annis

Who Shot to Death William E. Annis on the Boat Landing of the Bayside Yacht Club, New York, August 15, 1908.

Annis had invaded Captain Hains's home, had taken advantage of the Captain's absence on army duty and, aided by the cunning deceitfulness of Mrs. Hains, had almost succeeded in persuading the injured husband that his suspicions were groundless. How the full truth was unexpectedly wrung from the lips of Claudia Hains, his wife; how his heart froze with despair, and then, with the rebound of fury, how he set forth to avenge the wrong—how he found Annis and executed him—all this Captain Hains relates for the first time. And the trial, conviction, the long weeks in the death cells in Sing Sing and the final pardon by the Governor is told

In justice to himself and for the sake of his children Captain Hains now feels it his duty to take the public into his confidence, to lead them behind the scenes in his domestic life, to show them the forces which worked the ruin of his home—and to let the public judge whether the death of Annis at his hands was justified.

WHEN I bade farewell to Claudia at the depot in New York and began my journey to San Francisco to take command of the army transport ship, plying between that port and the Philippine Islands, my mind was at peace. I had no misgivings. Why should I? Claudia and my dear little children were amply provided for in a comfortable home. The same home we had so happily occupied together for the past year. It was, at most, only an absence for a year, probably something less. Then my new duties would have been discharged. I would return.

I could even picture her waiting to receive me the eager faces of my little ones, and her bright smile. I would take them in my arms again, not in parting, but in a glad return. All would be happiness. I would be well repaid. I could afford to wait. I resolved that the time should pass quickly, if hard work could make it so.

While in San Francisco I heard from Claudia daily. I wrote to her daily in return. She seemed to miss me greatly. Her letters were very kindly, although they were not over warm, but I attributed nothing to this, believing that a daily correspondence could hardly be maintained otherwise, and that she was immersed in the cares and duties of her family. I made the most of my time, for I would not be able to hear from her again, after leaving San Francisco, until the Pacific Ocean had been crossed.

One must not suppose that army life is all the same. From the quiet army post buried in the wilds, to the great military centres where all is pomp and display, or in the business life of a great city, Uncle Sam expects many things from his servants.

Now a soldier, now a business man, now a constructing engineer, electrician or even sailor, his duties are many and complex.

Great ocean going steamers ply between his far off army stations and his centres of supply. They carry troops, women, children, civilians in Government employ, and even marines and naval officers going to some far country.

First cabin passengers, second cabin passengers, steerage passengers, all are included in their accommodations.

These transports are manned and navigated by seamen taken from the merchant marine, but in charge of all is the transport quartermaster. He inspects the troops and ship. He supplies the food, pays the men, receives the cargo. He preserves order among his passengers, and assigns them their staterooms, or their quarters. He superintends the galley and the stewards department, and in foreign ports buys such articles of supplies as may be necessary. He runs a general store on the ship in the shape of a commissariat, where everything, from cigars and cigarettes to candy and ginger pop, may be procured. He has charge of the "slop chest," where clothing may be obtained by the crew. I was indeed a busy man when I took charge of my ship, the United States Army transport General Crook.

For all these things, however, there are assistants provided who by long service have become masters of detail, otherwise it would be an impossible duty for a single officer to perform.

After we had bidden goodby to the quarantine officials and had dropped the pilot in his wildly tossing little boat at Golden Gate, things began to settle down.

Of course there is always the lady who thinks that she should have the best stateroom on the ship all to herself, because she is related to some general of high rank, even though the rest of the passengers are packed like sardines in a box, and although the regulations explicitly state that a woman travelling alone is not entitled to the perquisites of military rank.

Then there is the handsome young wife going out to meet her husband, who finds it very hot and uncomfortable in the room to which she has been assigned, and knowing well how to use her eyes, relies upon her charms to accomplish that in which her sister has failed.

Also the lady of select and blue-blooded pedigree, who, finding her companions bores, and who, therefore, wishing to be alone, would like the exclusive privilege of that part of the ship forbidden entirely to passengers, to say nothing of the jolly person who has decided to "go 'round the world on eighty dollars"—a phrase applied to some who are making a pleasure trip for the pure fun of the thing, and have used their "pull" to obtain a transportation order to which they are not properly entitled. She is a good mixer, however, and the life of her particular set—otherwise she probably would not be travelling at all. All these and many more such difficulties it is the transport quartermaster's duty to adjust.

By the time the Farralone Island are passed, however, it has begun to get rough. Then passengers, one by one, disappear. Except for a group of officers here and there, the decks are left for the laughing little children to romp over, with only some kindly matron, who has been to sea before, to keep them within her protecting sight.

By the time the sea is smooth again, and the seasick ones return, petty differences are forgotten, good fellowship reigns and passengers and crew have settled down to the long and monotonous voyage across the broad Pacific.

I Sail Away from Claudia.

A great loneliness has taken possession of me. The happy families with their laughing children romping about the decks but adds to it. They remind me of those I have left. The vast solitude of the great ocean accords with my mood. I mingle but little with the company and seek recreation in my work.

The beautiful islands of Oahu and of Guam are left behind, with their white coral sand and palm fringed shores, their rugged hills with precipices half hidden by the dense and tropic jungle, and the sunlight striking through the great green cumbers as they rise, then fall, with a mighty crash upon the barrier reefs, to be dashed into white foam and myriads of sparkling spray drops.

Now the forbidding shores of the dangerous San Bernardino Strait rise first to port and then to starboard. Barren and lonesome do they look. Vessels are forbidden to make this passage at night on account of the treacherous and rapid currents. It is late in the afternoon. Will we have time to make it? The skipper, watch in hand, is studying his charts. The tide favors, he decides to drive her through. Suddenly he swings the indicator to full speed ahead, and the good old ship trembles under her throbbing engines as she points for Manila Bay.

The next morning we pass Corregidor, where Dewey fought his famous battle. Now the quarantine launch boards us at Mariveles and by noon we are abreast of the breakwater.

"All ready, sir," comes the reply from forward.

"All gone, sir," hails our first officer from the cat-head, and with a great splash and mighty rattling of chain our voyage is ended.

I have thought much of home during my trip. Claudia shall be well repaid for this lonely time. We had talked little of presents, we had no time at parting, all was rush and hurry to get away as my orders directed.

Now I will scour the country for things to make her heart glad. I will return laden with gifts. I throw myself heart and soul into the task. Manila for penia and jusi and for linen embroideries; such embroideries as one never sees in this country. Pearls as well, old Spanish pieces worked into gold filigree and intricate design. Honolulu for tapa. Japan for silks, embroideries, china, tea sets, tortoise shell, combs and card cases, bronze Buddhas, fans, pongees, silk crepes, shawls, cloisonne and damascene, beautiful silverware—really Japan has no limit.

I will send to China for a mandarin's suit. I become enthusiastic. I will send wherever possible. One of my men has travelled the Pacific from the Arctic Ocean to the Equator, he knows how and where to send. I send to Alaska for furs, to Aden and Port Said for ostrich feathers and to Vladivostock for Russian brass. I am carried away with the idea. I will bring her back everything my purse will allow.

I say I will bring them back, not send them back. I am selfish. I want to watch her open each particular box, each separate package. I want to feast in her joy, to hear each exclamation of delight, as piece by piece I place them before her. I want to feel her arms about my neck. I want her to feel the fulness of my love.

To understand the East one must be a native. To feel the East one must see it. It is a strange feeling, this being upon the other side of the world. You look at your watch and find it midday; your mind runs back to your loved ones; you wonder what they are doing now. You think of a hundred trivial daily duties. Now they are preparing the midday meal, the children are playing in the yard, you see your wife busy about her household tasks, the huckster is making his rounds and is delivering his daily order; then suddenly you remember. It is midnight. The house is dark. The inmates are abed and wrapped in slumber. You can even seem to hear the parlor clock ticking in the silence and you fancy you can listen to the peculiar little "chuck, chuck" it makes preparatory to striking the hour.

Once more you are held by the passing throng, the great, high turbaned Sheiks, with their fierce faces, broad sashes and tight trousers. The scurrying Tagalog in his Lakban hat, his cotton trousers and bare feet. He wears his shirt like a coat with the shirt-tail hanging out. He wears no collar or tie, but if prosperous, he carries an umbrella. The sedate Chino (Chinaman) with his bland smile, his native dress and pigtail. The women, too, stockingless, but with their feet thrust into slippers, bareheaded, with the severe coiffure of a Quaker school girl and the curious bolero and panuella.

Tiny carriages pass rapidly to and fro, drawn by tiny ponies. Each cochero is in cockade and plug hat, frock coat and brass buttons, but in white cotton trousers, and he is bare of foot. He continually cracks his whip and shouts "sigues, sigues," to his patient little ponies.

Now a great caribou (water buffalo) with immense curving horns, comes lumbering down the street. His hide is like that of an elephant—without hair. A little half-naked native boy sits astride his neck and continually prods and belabors him with a sharp pointed stick, uttering shrill and unintelligible cries all the while. The caribou drags an immense and lumbering cart with a load which appears big enough for a steam engine.

No Letters Come from My Wife.

I say to myself: "Oh, if Claudia could but see these strange sights, if little Pete could but ride astride that big buffalo."

Manila is a military city; the largest military post in the world—Fort McKinley—is just outside of the city. The Governor General has his palace in town. All of the headquarters of the many departments necessary to the maintenance of a large military force in the Islands are situated here. On the streets the white man in uniform is the rule, the civilian the exception.

I meet many old-time friends and spend my time with them and hunting presents for Claudia. I get letters from her upon my arrival, but as the mails are a month apart I can not receive many.

And now the ship is unloaded and we are ready for the return voyage to the States. This time we stop at Nagasaki, Claudia and Little Peter Hains.

The Hains Quarters at Fort Hamilton, New York.

Japan, and I spend my time carrying out my idea. I buy what I can and order more. I will stop there again upon my next trip back, I decide. Honolulu once more.

Now San Francisco at last. At each place I receive and send letters to Claudia. Everything seems as it should be. One third of my time is up. Two more trips, and then home, home and Claudia. My presents are piling up. I stow them in trunks, in boxes, in bundles, at the dock. I know the ropes now. Next time I will make a killing.

Soon we are loaded with a new cargo for the army in the Philippines and sail again for Manila. I hurry ashore and inquire for mail. I receive none from Claudia. At first I am uneasy, but we have made a record trip, and I explain it by thinking we have beaten the mails. Mails are uncertain in this part of the world. I have sent letters out here myself and found it months before they were received. I am sent posthaste to Zamboanga and to Jolo. I have no time to think of mails.

This gives me an opportunity to put the finishing touches to my list of presents. I will get some of the famous Moro brass ware. This is not for sale and can only be obtained by barter direct with the natives.

We sail the beautiful Sulu Sea. Under a blazing tropic sun we sail. The sea is as calm as an inland lake. It is dotted with beautiful tropic islands fringed to the very edges with gigantic palms. We sight the beautiful island of Jolo, and soon we see the quaint old Spanish city of that name.

This is the land of the savage Moro, the old Malay pirate. We stand in and tie up to the dock.

Crowds of nearly naked natives come out in their strange catamaran boats and dive for pennies. They are expert swimmers and pearl divers, these Moros. You may throw several coins into the sea at once, but a single Moro lad will dive from his prow and get them all, before they reach the bottom.

In front of us lie the white houses of the quaint old city, surrounded by its embattled walls. At sunset the natives are collected and driven outside. The gates are locked and sentries are posted. Whoe we go ashore we are required to carry pistols to guard against the deadly joromentado who slays in the name of Allah.

Back of the city frowns the summit of sinister old Bud Dajo, with its cup-shaped crater. Born in ages past 'mid volcanic fires, its summit has been watered with fierce Moro blood, when men, women and children fell in one promiscuous carnage in that much-commented-upon battle with our troops.

To the left lies the village of the Datto Jokari. It is built out over the water on bamboo poles, and with its squat houses of swail thatch it looks like a flock of some huge birds.

Captain Hains in Civilian Dress. From a Recent Photograph.

I go ashore to see the commandant. It is necessary to rush our loading and unloading, and I must have extra men.

I hear that some of Jokari's men have killed some Chinos. There is a military investigation. I reach headquarters. The Colonel is haranguing a crowd of Jokari's natives. He speaks through an interpreter. The natives are jostling, craning their necks and curious. Suddenly I notice a native in broad turban and purple jacket. He wears an immense sarong about his waist. He has purple silk trousers, skin-tight to the ankles, with little rows of buttons at the seams. His bare feet are thrust into small black velvet slippers. He is leaning against the wall, his back half turned to the Colonel; his arms are folded, his head slightly raised, while his eyes seek the window through which he gazes over the heads of his followers. He is small and wiry, almost tiny, yet there is something commanding in nce more we return to Manila, and still no letters from dia. I begin to fret and feel worried. Still, why should I ow too well the uncertainty of communication. I will soon now at any rate, for we are rushing troops ashore and aboard as fast as it can be done.

At last we are off. We begin our second return voyage to ttes. Nagasaki and Honolulu are left behind. We pass rralones close on our port hand, but dim and indistinct mist of a driving gale. We are hove to all night.

I am mentally fatigued, the worry has [illegible] me tired. I will take a walk in the cool air; it will clear my thoughts. I rise and take my hat. Again my gaze rests [illegible] that unopened letter. What peculiar import does it contain? Idly I pick it up, nervously I break the seal.

It is from my brother, Thornton Hains. He does not often write. His letters are always short, epigrammatic, laconic. I have received less than half a dozen during all my entire absence. They are mostly about photographs of my travels and material for stories. I have no time for such stuff now. Impatiently I read, then I stand amazed.

The letter is short, cold, incisive, appalling in its lack of statement. Claudia has been to the mountains and left myself alone and uncared for with the colored servants of the house. He advises my immediate return.

I am stunned. There is nothing in that letter to even telegraph for details. It is as though the ground has been cut from under me. It is not, in general character, unlike his other letters, and yet—what?

I Feel the Shadow of Coming Tragedy.

I feel that an appalling catastrophe hangs over me. Her last letters?—and his? What does it all mean? I will go mad this infernal room is suffocating. I rush from the room and gain the street.

I walk, walk, walk; I almost run. Heaven knows how far or where I walk. My one thought is to keep in motion; inaction is deadly. I must go, must keep on moving. I lose track of time. I lose all sense, except of motion—ever motion. I see the street lamps as they glimmer dimly through the fog. They cast long, slanting rays into the shadows. I close my eyes half shut; the rays deepen and lengthen out. I open them again; they shorten. I look at my watch. It is night.

How long have I been, and where? It was bright day light when I left the ship. I am calm now, only my mind refuses to think; somehow I just cannot think. I try. The effort is beyond me. It is too great.

I retrace my steps. I reach the dock. I begin to get myself together. I begin to wonder how I will appear. I must show nothing; I bend all my energies to this one end. I will control myself. No one shall know, no one shall suspect. I am getting control once more. Ah! now I have the upper hand. I am becoming interested in the game. I will win. I feel, I know I will win. I begin to feel a pride in the fact. They will see me, Peter Hains, affable and unconcerned. They will see, and never suspect the burning fires within me.

I board the ship. I scan the different faces to see if they do suspect the fears that are gnawing my heart. No; everything is as usual; they show no surprise.

Later the ship's surgeon drops in upon me. Now is the crucial test. I talk with him for an hour. I play with him as with a toy. I turn the conversation into my own desired channels. He tells me of a remarkable case of a young bride who, while yet loving her husband, proved faithless to him. I express idle amazement, almost incredulity.

Little does he suspect the thoughts surging through my brain. I have fought a fearful fight and I have won. I am once more under perfect control. I even feel a pride in my victory.

As I write I wonder if this officer will ever read these words. If he does he will surely recall that night. He will recall and marvel.

Now he has gone. I am alone once more. The strain has been terrific. Once more I have a frantic desire for action. It is late and I must not leave the ship. The deck watch will see me and think it strange.

"I Will Save You from Yourself, Claudia!"

I pace the room. I cannot keep this up forever. I am weary; weary with an unutterable weariness. I must have rest. I must collect my thoughts into some kind of action.

I undress. I throw myself upon the bunk; then I get up and extinguish the lights. This is better. I can think better now; the darkness is soothing.

All at once it comes to me in a flash. I must go to Claudia instantly; I must save her.

What care I about leave? Leave or no leave, I will go anyway. At all costs, at all hazards will I go. Oh, fool that I am to waste my precious time. Why have I not gone sooner? I jump up and look at my watch. It is three o'clock in the morning. I have wasted precious hours.

To go without leave means court-martial and dismissal from the army. Therefore I will see my commanding officer and tell him [illegible] of my determination. If he lets me go [illegible] good. If he [illegible] well, I shall go anyway.

Oh, the horror of the inaction. Now I am determined upon my course. Oh, the long, long hours until daybreak. It seems days, months, as I toss upon my bunk.

Day at last. I get up and dress. And now again to hide my feelings. Although I have not slept the rest has done me good. I am more like myself again. Again it seems that none suspects.

It is Sunday. I cannot see the Colonel at his office. I go to his home. He is out. Bad luck! Where is he? I ask. The startled servant does not know. He may be at his office. Fool again that I am. I should have thought of that and have gone there first. I rush to his office. Ah! I have him at last. Thank heavens, he is still there. I am ushered into his presence. He seems surprised. I waste no time in preliminaries.

"Colonel, it is a matter of grave importance that I go to Fort Hamilton, New York City, at once," I say.

"I wish to add, that although I am in great trouble, I have done nothing which affects my honor as an officer and a gentleman, and there are no money matters involved. I wish a leave of absence at once, but I must frankly tell you, that leave or no leave, that with or without your permission, I shall go anyway. It is a personal matter that takes me, but beyond this I wish to say nothing further."

He looks at me in amazement.

"I have no power to grant you leave," he says. Then he gazes a moment at me and adds: "But if it is as important as you say, I will give you permission to start, and will telegraph Washington, recommending that leave be granted you."

I bow my grateful acknowledgements. He is a kind-hearted man this Colonel, perhaps he reads the truth in my face.

"When do you wish to start?" he questions.

"Immediately," I answer.

We look at our watches. I have missed the morning train. "You cannot catch a train now before to-night. You have thousands of dollars in your safe. You must turn over the combination and the funds before you go. I [illegible] detail [illegible] to take you over. Go find him and do it at once."

Again I thank him and depart.

Now that I am really going, a great wave of doubt sweeps over me. Can I think I have done anything more than some foolish, unconventional act? I will prove my faith. I hastily get my trunk. I stuff it with presents from the East—laces, dresses, rumbo dollars, silverware and jewelry. They pack easily.

Ah, Claudia, Claudia, I will save you from yourself! In the face of all this I will still show you my trust and my great love.

Those bitter days of doubt and fear! Those dreary days of dust and travel! The nights are worst. I cannot sleep. They call this train the China and Japan fast mail. It is a snail's pace—a funeral march. We creep through the great Utah desert. I see strange shapes in the land of desolation. Great distorted projections that start up from the level desert floor. They are grotesque. So are my thoughts as we crawl wearily along.

I go over the letters again, and then once more. I am too tired to think. There must be some mistake. It is all one horrible mistake. It will all be satisfactorily explained when I arrive.

To Prove My Trust

Suppose we are wrecked before we get there? I may be killed with this wicked suspicion in my heart, and Claudia innocent!

What would she think? I take pencil and paper and write. I tell her if anything befall me before I get to her I want her to know I trusted her to the last. I loved her and came to save. I scorn to suspect.

This paper I put carefully into my inner pocket.

Now if anything befall, she will know—I showed it to her, this paper, when I returned, to prove my trust.

Will we ever arrive? Or does this journey of the damned last through all eternity? Oh, if I could only sleep! Those long hours of the night. Nothing to do but lie in my section and think, think, think. Will I ever sleep? Will this ghastly journey ever end?

Chicago—We change cars. I take the first train out. Now we will travel fast. I am near my journey's end. Somehow I begin to feel at peace. A few more hours and all will be right; all will be explained.

New York—I recall the last time.—the time I kissed her good-by. How long ago it

Now from days it has become minutes. The subway to the bridge, the elevated, the surface car. I count each familiar block, each local, familiar landmark—the army post at last I alight and walk rapidly the last remaining block. What if Claudia is not there! I suddenly remember I have not telegraphed.

"What Brings You Here?" She Asked.

I reach the main gate, grip in hand. Automatically I straighten to salute when the sentry presents arms. He slouches at his post. He does not notice me. I recollect that I am in civilian garb. I know most of the men by sight, but he is a stranger to me—a new recruit. He does not know me. I pass inside. I note the long row of quarters; mine is well down the line, I can hardly see it from where I am. All is bright sunshine, and there is a strange quiet over the place. It seems asleep or deserted.

Ah, there is a figure of a woman at the far end of the walk. It has a familiar appearance.

Yes, it is Claudia, my Claudia. The figure moves forward stops as if startled, then hesitates. I drop my grip and run to meet her. Ah, she recognizes me now. She stands and awaits my approach. I rush forward to clasp her in my arms—

Lost is all suspicion, now—for the moment I see but the woman I love.

"Claudia, Claudia!" I exclaim. Her manner indicates surprise, yet there is nothing in her face which does not altogether indicate surprise. Is it dread?

The old unfamiliar chill comes over me as I reach to clasp her in my arms.

"Peter, Peter," she exclaims, "What is it? What brings you here?"

"Come into the house," I reply. "I will tell you all. 'Tis my brother's letter."

Condensed from His Article, "The Story of Jonah in the Light of the Higher Criticism," in "The Bible Champion."

THE story of Jonah is not only discredited, but is regarded by some [illegible] of child[illegible] and is labelled [illegible] "The Barlow Pa[illegible]" And one may think [illegible] from the report made of it, [illegible] vulnerable narrative [illegible]

[illegible]

Adopting this method, [illegible] more important facts, or what are said to be facts, and then ascertain what parts of the narrative are credible, and what, if any, are to be ruled against. The following matters are found in the record.

[illegible] briefly and faultlessly stated [illegible] ed attempt no pharaphrase, but [illegible] story, up to the point of [illegible] casting into the sea, precisely as [illegible] the record, ending:

[illegible] the Lord had prepared a great [illegible] up Jonah. And Jonah was [illegible] of the fish three days and [illegible] (Chap. 1. 4.17).

[illegible] followed by what seems [illegible] probable statement of [illegible] his consciousness [illegible] r while in that loath[illegible] t. It is also said that the Lord heard his prayer, and that on the third day Jonah was cast by the whale upon the land. It is still further recorded that Jonah then went to Nineveh and delivered his message; that the people repented.

Now, the radical skeptic, without giving the subject careful study, sums up the case in a single dogmatic assertion, which is this: I do not believe one word of this story. A dogmatic reply, in kind, or a cynical rebuke of some sort, will get nowhere [illegible]

[illegible] to the realm of the mythical, there is no reason why these other prophets, and this King, or, indeed, no reason why the Greek and Roman classical writers of the same period, and even those who flourished later, should not also be consigned to the realms of myth. Indeed, one can present just as strong reasons in support of the statement that Virgil, Dante and Shakespeare were unhistorical as that Jonah, the son of Amittai, was such.

Early in th[illegible] century the assertion [illegible] only that there never [illegible] city as Nineveh but [illegible] city was questioned. There were critics who did not therefore hesitate to affirm that Nineveh, as well as Jonah, was a myth.

But in 1841, under the accumulations of centuries, Nineveh was discovered and found to have had the extent and magnificence as ascribed to it in the book of Jonah. The excavations made by Botta, Layard, Rassam, Loftus, George Smith and Rawlinson traced the walls made by Sennacherib and repaired by Assurbanipal and discovered inscriptions which completely upset the views held by earlier critics.

The facts are these: Nineveh, supposed to have been founded by a great-grandson of Noah (Gen. x 11) two thousand years before Christ, was, during the reign of Sennacherib, the capital of the Assyrian Empire. It appears to have been in its greatest glory when Jonah (800 B. C.) prophesied against it. It was standing several years later, when Nahum uttered his prediction concerning the downfall of the Assyrian Empire. Nineveh, its capital, was besieged for two years by the combined forces of the Medes and Babylonians, and by them was captured 606 B. C., which was two hundred years after the prophecy of Jonah.

Excavations show that it was then devastated by conflagrations, which destroyed everything except its stone and brick. Its walls were thrown down, and, according to prophecy, it was made uninhabitable (Nahum iii. 17; Zeph. ii 13 15).

Jonah was commanded to denounce the [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] sent to [illegible] to Ahab, of Seraiah, when sent by Jeremiah to Babylon.

There were many reasons why Jonah hesitated to go to Nineveh. To him, as to other Israelites, the people of that heathenish and wicked city, though civilized, were repulsive. And quite likely, too, the prophet had forebodings that his mission might be attended with disappointment and even [illegible] conduct of [illegible] God has [illegible] pleasant duty. And as is well known, many a runaway since the days of Jonah has taken to the sea as a way of escape.

And the critic, if familiar with the nausea incident to a pitching and rolling ship, and if also disturbed by a troubled conscience, will see no difficulty unless determined to do so in the apparent willingness of Jonah to be thrown overboard. He was from the inland, among the hills of Gath-hepher, and was consequently unaccustomed to sea voyages.

Nor is there anything, incredible in what is said to have followed—that a great fish (dahg gathol) was near the ship and seized Jonah the moment he struck the water. Every seafaring man knows that at sea sharks follow ships for days, sometimes for weeks, and if an unfortunate man falls overboard he is often quickly seized and devoured.

There are two or three other matters that the destructive critic is continually harping upon that may at this point be considered, one of which, rather coarsely put, is that God is not a being who would go into the business of creating whales to swallow men.

In the first place the Hebrew words translated in the Common Version, "prepared a great fish," do not mean that God created a fish for the specific purpose of swallowing Jonah, but rather that God allotted or appointed a great fish for that purpose, or, in the Christian speech, the meaning is that, by the providence of God, a great fish, already created, was brought to the side of the ship, or happened to be there, at the moment Jonah was thrown overboard, and, under the circumstances, did what was perfectly natural for such a fish to do, swallowed Jonah.

The unbelieving critic has also asserted that the story of Jonah is incredible—because the throat of a whale is not large enough to swallow a man. But the highest critism in its zoological studies has put an end, some time since, to this objection that for centuries had been kept on parade.

The words "dahg gathol," translated into both the Septuagint and the New Testament by the Greek word katos, and into the Latin of the Vulgate by the words piscem grandem, mean simply a great fish or sea monster. The word whale, therefore, is the translator's word, while the words dahg gathol and katos are those used by the Bible writers.

So far, therefore, as the Hebrew and Greek words are concerned, the highest criticism makes it perfectly clear that the fish that swallowed Jonah may have been a whale, a shark, a sea serpent, a sea lion or any other large monster of the deep. And even if the skeptic insists that in this discussion the word "whale" should be used, still one need not suffer embarrassment, for, while it is true that the right whale has a throat of small size, the sperm whale has a throat sufficiently large to swallow a man without the least difficulty.

There is not a shipmaster or a sailor who has been on a whaling voyage who will question the following statement made by one of the crew of a New Bedford (Mass.) whale ship, that he, though a man of large build, weighing one hundred and seventy pounds, frequently had passed through the mouth and throat of a dead sperm whale. He says he did this after the head of the whale had been cut off from the body, and when the jaws and smallest part of the throat had been taken out.

Then he [illegible] "Although a sperm whale is large, a bowhead whale is much larger, with a throat not only capable of swallowing a well-built man, but in my judgment a good sized horse or cow."

M. P. Courbet, in the Cosmos (Paris March 7, 1895), writing concerning the Monaca, after giving an account of a monster sperm whale captured near the Azores, says: "The discoveries of the Prince of Monaca were such as to relieve us of all difficulty in believing the Bible story that a whale could swallow Jonah."

In an article contributed to the Academy of Sciences, M. Joubin states that "a sperm whale easily can swallow animals taller and heavier than a man; . . . these animals, when swallowed, can keep alive for some time in the cetacean's stomach and [illegible] cast up by it at the moment of its death."

But it has been pointed out of late that the right whale need not be excluded from sea monsters that could have swallowed Jonah. Professor Ray Matthews, in a report of the Japanese Fisheries, expresses the opinion that it was neither a sperm nor a bow-headed whale that swallowed Jonah, each of which has a throat large enough to do it, but was a right whale and that Jonah was not taken into the food-stomach, but into the air chamber of the whale, which was large and commodious enough to serve as a refuge.

We quote the following from the editorial notes of The Bible Student and Teacher (October, February, 1911, '12):

"A large whale may weigh as much as eight hundred men, and it requires as much fresh air as eight hundred men respire, and the equivalent of the respirations of eight hundred men for twenty minutes, that is, for four hundred respirations of the men, are drawn in at one breath, through the whale's capacious mouth into its large air chamber. Its mouth can give place for ten men standing upright; and as it skims along the sea it scoops in its food of jelly fishes and small crustaceans and other surface animalcules, which quickly enter its stomach; but a larger object, Jonah's body, for instance, would pass into the air chamber.

"Here Jonah might be wide awake, able to meditate on the situation and to pray to God and to sleep over night. But though not very inconvenient for Jonah, the whale itself would feel discomfort and be likely to seek relief by coughing up the prophet on dry land."

Another adverse criticism on the Jonah narrative is that no large sea monsters frequent the waters of the Mediterranean. But, as a matter of fact, no less authority than Cuvier calls attention to the Rorqual Mediterraniensis, a large species of whale indigenous to the Mediterranean Sea.

And it is well known to those familiar with these subjects that the waters through which a vessel sailing from Joppa to any Spanish port would pass were frequented in early times by a species of shark called the sea dog, canis carcharias, whose normal length at maturity, according to modern works on zoology, is thirty feet.

The noted French naturalist, Lacepede, states that these Mediteranean sea dogs can swallow animals much larger than a man without mutilating them. In his "Histoire Des Poissons" is this statement: "Sea dogs have a lower jaw of nearly six feet in its semi-circular extent, which enables us to understand how they can swallow entire animals as large or larger than ourselves."

And it is a well-known fact that the voracity of sea dogs, and, indeed, that of many of the shark family, is such that they never chew their food, but swallow everything they can without chewing. . . .

This, then, in brief, is the challenge of the skeptic: The retaining of one's consciousness for the length of time alleged, and under such conditions as are alleged, is incredible and impossible, and there is no power or agency on earth that could have restored "a partly digested man" to consciousness.

In this opinion of the rationalistic skeptic let us say that we fully concur, and confess that we know of no agency on earth that could have saved the disobedient prophet from death in the FOOD-STOMACH of a whale, provided he were there three days and nights . . .

This, then, is the evangelical confession of faith: We believe the Bible narratives and miracles because on scientific grounds they are possible; because they are supported by circumstantial, monumental and other indisputable proofs, and because there were purposes of sufficient magnitude to justify divine interposition.

We believe that the jaws of the sea monster opened and closed upon the disobedient prophet, but God interposed and delivered him in order that the more faithfully he might declare the divine message; that the people of Nineveh might listen more atentively and obediently to what he had to say; that Jonah's deliverance might be a prophetic sign of Christ's resurrection, and that the deliverance [illegible] a prop[illegible] extending through the ages, that God can keep his children in safety, though dead, until the morning of the resurrection.

All the ultra-violet rays shorter than 3700 are harmful. Curiously enough, the resistence of the glass against the inimical light is less dependant upon its color than upon the metals used.

As an example, copper and uranium oxide give a strong yellow glass, but such a glass is far less impervious to the infra-red rays than a mixture of nickel and praseodymium which gives an almost colorless glass.

Other metals used are cerium, chromium, cobalt, iron and maganese.

Make Your Heating System Give You the Right Climate

ONE of the great dangers in Winter lies in the habit of overheating our dwellings and public buildings. According to Dr. J. M. Eager, of the United States Public Health Service, high temperatures are [illegible] and reduce our resistance to disease.

Temperately cool weather is the ideal sort for maintaining health. Modern heating and ventilating systems have made it possible to regulate atmospheric conditions within doors so as to have a choice of climate during the [illegible] hours spent inside the house. To benefit by these heating facilities one must first establish a standard of good climate and try to copy it indoors. The weather imitated should be the agreeable exhilarating weather of mid-Autumn.

Temperature, however, is not everything. The proper degree of humidity and a constant [illegible] and some movement of the air are factors not to be neglected. The temperature of [illegible] apartments, places of business, churches, schools, theatres, railroad coaches and other public and private places of sojourn should never be allowed to rise above 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

A temperature higher than this in a schoolroom is worse than illiteracy. Long hours spent in such overheated atmosphere render children unable to stand exposure to colds and catarrhal affections.

The elderly and sick should be protected against unfavorable temperatures. Their necessities rather than their preferences should be considered in this matter, thus avoiding damage by indulgence.

Health is affected by indoor as well as outdoor conditions. Certain states of the air stimulate, others depress the system. Moderate temperatures, slightly inclined to coolness, promote mental and bodily activity and increased resistance to infectious diseases. High temperatures induce bodily lassitude and mental dullness with corresponding depression of health and resultant loss of appe[illegible]

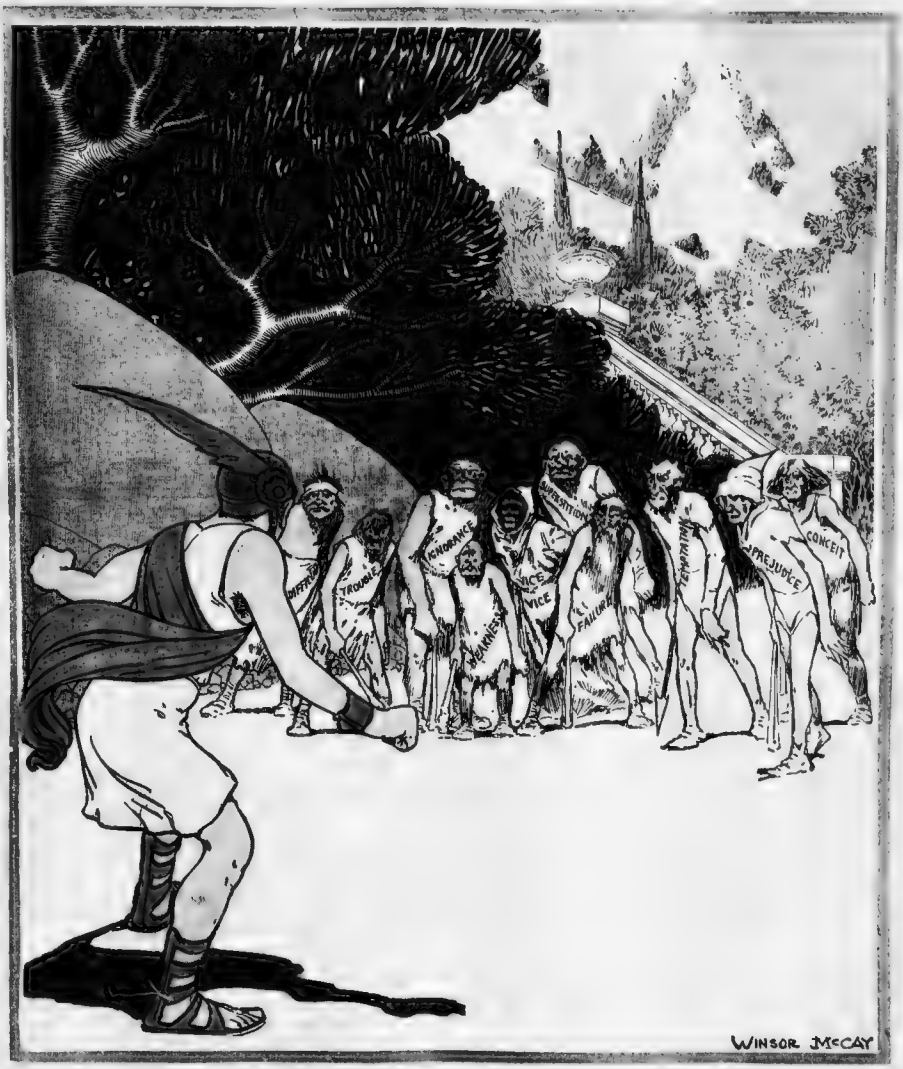
YOU MUST RUN THE GAUNTLET

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

Before You Can Begin the Big Fight That Will Win or Lose Success for You You Must Fight Many Smaller Battles, Battles That Will Give You Strength and Experience for the Real and Inevitable Struggle. The First and Most Important Engagements Will Be with the Enemies That Lie in Your Own Self. When You Have Conquered Them You Can Go Forth Reasonably Assured That You Will Accomplish Any Worthy Object to Which You May Aspire



BEFORE many days have passed, even over newly born heads, life develops into a long, hard struggle The child, who is spared the very earliest battle for existence by the mother instinct or love that protects him, is lucky indeed if he does not have to begin to battle before he reaches his teens.

If he manages without effort of his own to get a common school education he is lucky. If he gets a college education, and the higher education that teaches him what to do with a college education, he is still more fortunate.

For a youth so equipped to fail is a disgrace. He begins the world possessed of a training that other boys spend years to gain. He has had access to the greatest minds of this time and of all times. For him Shakespeare wrote, Voltaire thought, Cromwell and Washington fought. All the knowledge of the past is not only available to him, but he is taken by the hand and led through the libraries where the great have left the fruit of their labors, as granaries are stored with grain after the fields that produced it have long withered.

Let such a boy or such a girl attend to what is taught him, follow the course that is laid down for him, and he begins the world with a tremendous advantage. For him some of the figures in this array pictured in the cartoon on this page have already been conquered.

Yet until he has had many struggles he will still be all unprepared for the real fight that lies between him and success.

It is not the purpose of this editorial to engage in any discussion as to the benefits or lack of benefits of a college education. Whether the boy "brought up by hand" has a better chance at the highest rounds of the ladder than the boy who fights his own way will always be subject to argument. There can be no doubt that he gains the intermediate rounds quicker, unless he lets college spoil him. But no boy and no girl should aim at anything but the highest. And it is the purpose of this article to point out the difficulties that can and must be overcome before any high ambition can be achieved.

Wherever you see men or women beginning the fight for life—and the fight for success is little else than a fight for life—you see them running such a gauntlet as is shown in this illustration.

Without that fight, which is a matter not of moments, but of years, there can be no real beginning at anything worth while.

Mr. Longfellow has told us that "lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime," which is true. But in his short and rather optimistic poem he neglects to tell us that only by the most determined and unremitting struggle can we "leave behind us footprints on the sands of time."

Take a look through the pages of history at some of the great men who succeeded and you will find out just how much success meant to them of endeavor and of sacrifice.

Even in instances where transcendent genius seemed to mark men for fame early in youth, there is no case where fame was achieved without effort.

John Keats, one of the most gifted of all the English poets, a man who put thought into more beautiful language than any other Englishman save Shakespeare and Shelley, was born a poet, gifted naturally with great facility of expression and a deep understanding of the beauty of the world around him.

Yet it was only by the most untiring effort that he learned to write even readable poetry.

His early rhymes were mere doggerel, and none but keen students of poetry could discern any promise in them.

Keats, however, knew that he was a poet. Day after day he went into the fields with his pencil and pad, writing and rewriting, changing, comparing, rearranging, till at the age of twenty he had written verses that will last as long as the English language.

Through his short lifetime—he died when he was twenty-three—he was mocked and jeered at by the reviewers, and he died without really knowing that he would some day be regarded as one of the greatest of English writers.

He always believed that he would be, however—always hoped and trusted that he would be. And, conquering many weaknesses, among them a natural tendency to indolence and procrastination—two of the worst vices of all—he taught himself to write.

Through a mortal illness from consumption the young poet—he was only a boy when he died—fought on

Because of that fight he left work which will delight readers of English as long as that language survives on this earth. He taught men of all ages after him to see new beauties in the world around them. And he did more than that. He gave them words to express their emotions, of joy and sorrow and love and hope—which is the mission of all poets and of all men who write great literature.

In our own country we have an example of great and conspicuous success by a man utterly lacking in any great gifts of expression—Benjamin Franklin. A printer's devil, an errand boy about Philadelphia, often beaten by his brother for misconduct, constantly poor, yet full of the desire to enjoy life to the full, this great American literally drove himself to success.

Early in life he discovered by observation that the boys about him were not getting anywhere. He saw that idleness, which he loved as well as any of them, resulted in permanent poverty. He knew enough about poverty not to want it as a life companion.

He read the lives of great men in England and France, and made up his mind that he, too, would be a great man.

Learning his own trade thoroughly gave him an interest in other trades, and he soon became an enthusiastic student of science.

The problems of colonial government interested him. He developed a sense of justice, which threw him strongly against the oppression of King George III., and through the Revolution and in the days that followed it he did as much as any one man to bring about the independence upon which this Government was founded.

Jefferson's immortal Declaration of Independence sounded the note of freedom that inspired men to endure the seven years cruel struggle for independence. Washington's patience and courage and unselfishness, together with his great talent for leadership, carried the war through its most difficult years. But Franklin's diplomacy and statesmanship and his ability to impress an alien people with the sense of justice so strong within him brought out the aid of France, lacking which the outcome of the great struggle would have been problematical.

This man was untaught save by himself—yet he was splendidly educated. He was without special talents save a magnificent common sense—yet he became one of the greatest men of his time, and by some historians is regarded as the greatest of them all.

Franklin was not temperamentally the staid, sober, plodding youth of the story books. He was a fun-loving, mischievous lad, who liked to fight and play and join in all the pursuits that were common to the boys of the time. But he knew that he must overcome the tendency within himself to idleness and frivolity if he was going to be great, and great he determined to be.

To-day there is no great war for independence to inspire men to great deeds, but there is the same old war for freedom that began with the birth of the first nation on this planet and will continue till long after your great-grandchildren's great grandchildren have faded into a misty past.

There is a place in that fight for every boy and every girl who lives to-day. It will be a great and glorious struggle, a struggle against oppression, poverty, cruelty, vice and all the ills that have transformed this beautiful earth into what Mr. Henley called "a place of wrath and tears."

Among those who read this editorial are many who will take an important part in the battle that is to come—that goes on now and has gone on continuously since this nation gained its independence from a royal oppressor.

There can be nothing more worth while than to serve your fellow men, but you cannot serve them without strength and wisdom and experience and independence.

Learn, when you begin your fight, to conquer your own enemies.

Taken one by one, each enemy, whether it spring from your own self or from the faults of the world around you, can be overcome. And with every victory will come a courage and an experience and a confidence which will enable you to make shorter work of the next opponent, and which will equip you finally for the great battle that is to follow when you go out into the world after a real and lasting success.

Why Churches Should Be Advertised Like a Business

By the Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner,
Pastor Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, N. Y.

WHEN I was appointed pastor of Grace Church [illegible] strongest churches in Methodism and failed to secure [illegible] methods [illegible] other [illegible] three years, I [illegible] strong p[illegible] tails of the past carried out ex[illegible] modern [illegible] it brought [illegible] church, and [illegible] never a Sunday available.

Three years [illegible] standing on the part [illegible] men who compose [illegible] either cause [illegible] on as past [illegible] Denver [illegible] Graduate [illegible] of publicity in the [illegible] to better evidences of the gratifying [illegible] advertising has brought us than [illegible] it we are constantly in danger of welcoming [illegible] Sunday evening services a larger number of persons than the rules of the Fire Department allow for an edifice of it[illegible]

The [illegible] bank which would advertise caused [illegible] about its solidity. Now none can do business without it, and people are afraid [illegible] that does not publish facts proving its solidity. John Cotton Dana, librarian at Newark, has advertised the facilities of his institution, and in this way has greatly increased the number of readers using it. Grape juice and other non-intoxicating beverages widely advertised are greatly helping forward the cause of total abstinence. The National Anti-Tuberculosis Society in 1912 raised $19,000,000 as a result of their publicity campaign—an increase of 29 per cent over their income for 1911.

If all these things—which add to the happiness, liberty, health and usefulness of the population increase their power by publicity what reason is there that the church may not do the same? We are to publish the gospel—the gospel is to make men happy. Everything that increases man's happiness in a genuine way aids in carrying out the purpose of the gospel.

If the gospel is requisite to make people happy, we must certainly counsel them to read that and so we compel them to receive the boon of putting their names in [illegible] thanks of reading good books, of drinking [illegible] and of helping to build [illegible] needy.

Let us consider some objection, frequently made to church advertising. "It [illegible] can be too common [illegible]" some one says I answer by saying that I believe it [illegible] a thing when the gospel is carried into every level of the community, the lowest as well as the highest. Another says that "It takes away the church's dignity." The church is sacred only when it works on the souls of people, as yeast is good only when it is working. Another says that "advertising [illegible] church by putting it on the same basis as commercial institutions." We ought, rather, to say that when we bring religion [illegible] commercial institutions [illegible] to spiritualize [illegible]

Some one suggests that [illegible] is the only institution [illegible] that people want [illegible] where to come. The Southern Pacific Railroad is the only railroad running along the coast; yet it advertises persistently, and uses space to get the people into the desire for traveling so that they will use the line. People will not come to the church unless we [illegible] that they need the things the church has to offer.

Some may complain of the cost of advertising a church. There are a few small souls who try to figure out how much it costs to save a man. When the year is done there have been only a certain net number added to the membership, and they distribute all the expenses among them. So we forget that it costs money to keep people saved, and that every person in the church has a good influence on people who are outside of the church? Advertising is not bring in literal cash, but it widens the church's influence, sets hundreds to thinking and restrains many who would go deeper into sin, and whom we would otherwise never know about.

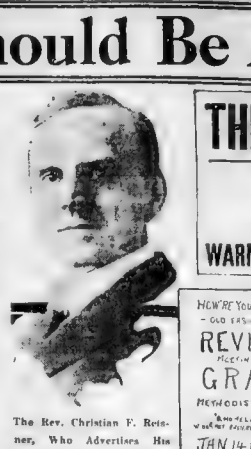
What a fine thing it would be if a company of Christian men could fill a page in a daily [illegible] per[illegible] and use this space to testify to the friendship of Jesus and the happy results of communionship with him and obedience to his directions. Such testimony would do more good than sermons by a score of preachers in pulpits that run along as they have been doing for the past centuries.

It is sadly true that every church must hesitate over the question of expense which advertising brings. The ordinary church officials will say, "Let us see if they cannot get it [illegible] out." That is usually wise, for church debts often hamper advancement. Sometimes, however, they are a blessing, for they whip a church up to the highest activity. But when both ends are meeting only by stretching to the wind few things will be undertaken. Publicity concerning the economical use of the money contributed will do a church's finances much good. If a compact statement of the wide usefulness insured by the few dollars contributed to the church could be placed [illegible] before the eyes of intelligent humanity more money would come into the treasury of the church.

Every church is constantly putting heart into discouraged people and thus saving them from becoming burdens on the community by arousing them to self-help. The church goes into sorrow-stricken places and turns the affliction into a feeder of character that, builds instead of destroying citizenship. The minister is called when homes are about to be rent by dissension. Again and again the church cheats the divorce courts by bringing both sides of the house to compromise and to clean up the bad thing that caused the trouble. Scores of homes would be utterly wrecked if it were not for the religion that the church brings in and for the arbitration work of the clergymen or of trusted Christian friends.

The church teaches the children religion and [illegible] the basis for character when parents [illegible] its neglect it. It stands for moral laws [illegible] ll body it holds out the goal of a [illegible]ter day, never permitting men to stand still [illegible]disfaction. It defends the weak and warns [illegible]rong concerning a judgment when use of [illegible] t must be accounted for [illegible]ople have forgotten these facts, and public [illegible] methods should be employed to remind [illegible]h of them, so that they will support the [illegible] only and certainly. Human interest [illegible] of the good churches are doing should [illegible] pushed forward prominently in the pulpit, [illegible] on the newspapers and by other forms of publicity, and thus money will be secured more easily for larger usefulness by the church.

A Presbyterian church at Richmond Hill, Long Island, found itself facing a deficit and [illegible]ased space in three local papers to describe [illegible] its dilemma. It gave a detailed statement of income and expenditure and urged the community to come out on the following Sunday morning prepared to contribute by cash or pledges. The first Sunday brought in $702.25 of the $1,000 asked, and the remainder was soon received. This frank advertising of a situation is certain to tell.



The Rev. Christian F. Reisner, Who Advertises His Church Like a Business, and Believes That Every Minister Should Do the Same.

Two Striking Church Advertisements Which Helped Fill Empty Pews, and a Sample of Dr. Reisner's Advertising Copy.

It might be feasible for localities to expend a little money in the effort to draw in more to be used for regular religious publicity. The experiment would not cost much, and it would be almost certain to catch the eye of some to whom it would appeal. A central committee could be formed by all the churches which would announce that if funds were sent in a campaign would be inaugurated to force home the need and the value of the church as a whole.

The minister who advertises will in this day at least, be lifted to prominence, and woe be unto him if he does not walk circumspectly. If he is to stand the strain of eye scrutiny and gossip-searching, together with the extra work of publicity and wider opportunity it brings, then he must be clean and consistent in life, restful and confident in faith, and sincere and noble in ideals. Nothing will expose a sham or wear down a shoddy thing more quickly than publicity.

The dread of being called a sensationalist is what prevents many ministers from advertising their churches. A pastor located in a small New York State town came to the writer and described the location of his church, emphasizing the fact that few of the community attended, and asked, "What can I do to get an audience?" He was answered concretively, "Prepare an attractive concert program by the children of your Sunday school." His eyes brightened hopefully as he admitted the advantages of such a plan. But when the further words came—— "and advertise it." he drew back with horror. "Why, then, I will be called a sensationalist." Poor man! that giant drove him out of the promised land.

We must not be afraid of the term sensationalist. The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D. D., says: "A sensationalist is one who creates a sensation. It may be either a good one or a bad one."

The Rev. Sydney Herbert Cox describes him as "one who tells the truth strikingly, as did Jesus Christ."

The minister who is worth the name of "preacher" is thereby entitled to the term "sensational." He must be strong enough to bear the wrong interpretation and at the same time gladly enforce the right interpretation.

The whole question of sensationalism hinges on the sincerity and high motive of the minister. When he is merely devoted to the purpose of having men and women introduced to the Christ as a Saviour, he may use any method that will not defeat that end.

The minister who advertises in the right way will cultivate his personality to the highest possibility. He will accumulate all the magnetism, knowledge, humanity and heart power within his reach. He will then direct them to the end of bringing results for the kingdom in whose service he is enlisted. He will be so engrossed at this task and so devoted to his ideal of service that he will neither seek for personal aggrandizement nor strive for cleap notoriety. He will avoid sunborn egotism. Neither will he be moved by things that are unfounded and that would otherwise sour his heart's love and embitter his soul.

If careful examination convinces him that his motive is high, he may without any hesitation employ every bit of possible publicity, even though it pushes his own name forward, as long as in the end it advances the kingdom and the church which he serves.

A minister who advertises will, of course, be criticized, but that gives good publicity if he is true-hearted. He is a poor herald if he is not. Jesus predicted it when he said, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake."

If business institutions are able by advertising to create a demand for useful commodities, surely the church which brings about "godliness," "profitable to all things," has a right to use the same methods. The minister should be allowed to use any legitimate plan, place, or person that helps to reach the goal.

But all publicity work is worthless unless the people receive satisfying goods when they come to church in response to the advertising. The church must keep the Master's feast spread. It is too often true that the "dusting" preacher utterly neglects his study. One well-known church builder, who could paint and paper parsonages and who had a remarkably bright brain, did not have enough books to fill a bushel basket.

Church advertising must be honest. It must draw people to a worthful service. The sermon dare not be empty. It can be rich with facts and humanly toned illustrations. Newspapers and one's own daily experiences will give incidents that will open eyes and hearts for the planting of good seed. The sermon must, of course, have thought in it. There must be life in its delivery and heart power enough to make it thrilling. Nothing but the best preparation will suffice.

The advertising attraction ought to be unusual and worth while. Dr. Reisner's church had Mr. Hinshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, one Sunday night, and the next Sunday night Hans Wessell, one of the greatest 'cellists in the country. These and all their services after they learned the purpose of the "Happy Sunday Evening."

Show in your advertising as far as possible the things the church will actually give. Harry W. Stone tells of a Y. M. C. A. secretary with a small reading room, who secured two billboards and pasted on them the front page of every daily paper and every magazine in his reading room. That looked large. It immediately doubled the attendance.

A church's advertising must be persistent. It is not sufficient to do it spasmodically. The church must be cordial when folks come. This friendliness should express itself by future and further attention. Take names at the door for personal contact later. Canvass the audience for additional names; otherwise your publicity will have small effect and will fall flat.

In short, every church should provide the best possible services, make its merits known by advertising in every dignified way, and close the transaction only when the church is filled at every service.

At Last an Important Discovery in Cancer Research Which Promises Results

A [illegible] step has been made in [illegible] against cancer, that [illegible] humanity.

A specific agent causing cancer in chickens has been discovered. It was discovered by Dr. Peyton Rous and Dr. James B. Murphy, the noted scientists of the Rockefeller Institute in New York. They do not as yet call it a germ, because they do not know enough about it to [illegible] that is the correct term.

This discovery is the latest and most important fact in the world-wide research into the nature of cancer that is [illegible] summed by Professor Leo Loeb in an article in the current Popular Science Monthly. Loeb is attached to the Barnard Skin and Cancer Hospital, St. Louis, and is a pupil of Professor Jacques Loeb, of the Rockefeller Institute. Leo Loeb carries his discussion of the subject up to the work of Rous and Murphy.

The agent of cancer now discovered [illegible] remains virulent after being [illegible] through a filter that will exclude [illegible] bacteria, and after being dried, frozen and preserved in glycerine.

This is an important step toward [illegible] the disease, because it furnishes [illegible] cause that can be experimented upon in the laboratory with a view to prevention and cure. In the preparation of all [illegible] vaccines that are now so successful [illegible] curing other diseases, the discovery of a specific germ or agent was always a [illegible] step.

Hitherto it was quite uncertain whether there was any germ-like agent in cancer, whether of men or animals. All that was known positively was that there was always an abnormal growth of cells in the disease. Many scientists argued that there was a specific germ or agent causing this condition, but the majority argued that the mere overgrowth of the cells was the disease. Proof of either argument was lacking.

Drs. Rous and Murphy report their experiments in the current number of the American Journal of Experimental Medicine. They summarize their discovery in the following words:

"A causative agent has been separated from three chicken tumors of very different sort, namely a spindle-celled sarcoma, a cartilage-chondrosarcoma, and spindle-celled sarcoma peculiarly fissured by blood sinuses. This was accomplished after the tumors had been transplanted repeatedly and their malignancy enhanced. Each of the tumor-producing agents is a distinct entity in that it gives rise only to growths of the precise kind from which it has been derived. All pass through Berkefeld cylinders impermeable at the same test to small bacteria, and two of the three retain their activity in tumor tissue that has been dried and pulverized. All are strikingly dependent for their action on derangement of the tissue with which they are brought in contact. The general findings strongly suggest that the agents are of about the same size and of the same natural class."

Another interesting discovery made by the investigators was that an irritating substance mixed with the causative agent greatly increased the rapidity of the cancer growth and the virulence of the disease. The infective material was mixed with the powdered diatomaceous earth which the Germans call "Kieselguhr."

When the healing process began, in the formation of "resective tissue," the filtered material from cancerous chickens sloughed off the Kieselguhr and began to build up cancer cells with great rapidity. It was like sowing seed in freshly harrowed ground. In describing one experiment to show the effects of the irritant substance, the experimentalists write:

"Portions of a tumor extract prepared as usual and with the usual bacterial control, were passed through a Berkefeld filter. The tumor [illegible] came from one of the fowls of filtration experiment two. Filtrates A and B were injected separately in amounts of ten cubic centimetres into the leg muscles of three normal fowls. Filtrate C, with and without an admixture of Kieselguhr, was injected into the pectoral regions of the same fowls. Nineteen days later one had developed a tumor nodule of 13 centimetres in diameter at the spot where 5 centimetres of filtrate C with Kieselguhr had been injected. The nodule rapidly developed to a fifteen mass, which led to the death of the fowl after six weeks in all.

"At this time a nodule had just appeared in the other pectoral region, where 10 cubic centimetres of filtrate C, without admixture, had been put. At autopsy another small discrete nodule was found in the left leg as the result of 10 cubic centimetres of filtrate A, without Kieselguhr. The other two fowls remained healthy."

The observation about the irritating effect of Kieselguhr has an interesting bearing on human cancer. It is well known that cancer commonly appears in parts of the body that are subjected to much irritation or injury. From this discovery it seems that the cancer has not be due to the irritation, as is usually supposed. The irritation of Kieselguhr increases the virulence of the causative agent. One experiment showing how the cancer germ and desiccation and freezing is recorded as follows:

"Fowl 349, carrying a large growth engendered by a filtrate (filtrate experiment 2) was killed at the outset, which consisted of cartilaginous and precartilaginous sarcomatous tissue. Residual fine and placed in a cold chamber at several degrees below freezing for a week. Then pieces of forty-eight hours it gradually froze solid. While still frozen it was put in a cold desiccator over sulphuric acid and one-fourth exhausted until the manometer showed a pressure of less than one millimetre of mercury. The desiccator was then placed immediately on an ice chest. At the end of three days the material was taken out and ground

"It had the form of a light, brittle cake of nearly the bulk of the fresh tissue, was coarsely in texture and ground with great difficulty. Twenty-four hours after grinding two grammes of the powder were taken up in 25 centimetres of sterile water, and of the thick fluid five cubic centimetres were injected into the left breast of each of five normal fowls. Within a month one of these had a rapidly measuring four by nine centimetres (an inch to two and a half inches). The tumor consisted of a spindle-celled sarcomatous tissue undergoing cartilaginous transformation in the way characteristic of Chicken Tumor VII."

In his article in the Popular Science Monthly Professor Leo Loeb says that the results obtained by Rous and Murphy furnish an answer to one of the greatest problems that have puzzled cancer investigators.

Professor Loeb first explains the abnormal cell-growth which is characteristic of cancer. All organisms, plants, as well as animals, are composed of small units—the so-called cells in which a nucleus is surrounded by protoplasm and certain special structures. Each part of the animal body is formed by aggregations of different kinds of cells. The skin and the cavities within the body as well as the glands are composed of epithelial cells; the bones and muscles are produced by special bone and muscle cells. Uniting the various special structures and cell-layers in the body, we find the so-called connective tissue consisting of special cells (connective tissue cells) and their product, the connective tissue fibres.

In the normal adult organism some kinds of cells are entirely or almost at a standstill as far as their growth (increase in number and size of cells) is concerned, while other kinds of cells are continually propagating. However, even the most rapidly growing cell an old one is cast off, no actual increase in the number of cells takes place during adult life under normal conditions. If, however, a small part of the body, the skin, for instance, is removed the neighboring cells begin to proliferate and soon fill out the defect. We call this kind of growth regenerative.

In the normal adult organism a definite equilibrium exists between the different kinds of cell aggregations which we call tissues. Each kind of cell respects the territory of the neighboring cells. Not rarely it happens, however, that suddenly in a young or adult organism cells in a certain part of the body begin to proliferate in an unusual manner; they multiply more or less rapidly. This growth cannot be called regeneration, because there was no primary defect to be filled out, and if there had been such a defect the growth does not limit itself to wound healing. This multiplication of cells leads to a definite swelling in a certain part of the body. We call it a tumor.

The aggregation of newly formed cells may form a well-defined mass, which simply pushes aside the neighboring parts of the body after some time the growth may entirely cease, or it proceeds usually slowly. In this case we speak of a "benign" tumor. In many other cases, however, the newly formed cells not only multiply, but they also invade the neighboring tissues either as isolated cells or in clusters of cells. Each cell which penetrates the neighboring territory becomes again the centre for the formation of a new tumor, in asmuch as it has the power for indefinite propagation. This tumor we call a malignant growth or a cancer.

According to the kind of cells which form the cancer and according to the proliferative and infiltrative energy of the cells composing the growth, we distinguish many varieties of cancer. Roughly we may, however, classify the various cancers as those derived from epithelial tissue (for instance, of the skin, stomach, uterus, the various glands), which we call carcinomata, and those derived from proliferating connective tissue cells. These connective tissue cancers are called sarcomata.

The growth of a cancer exerts influences on the organism as a whole by causing pressure on neighboring organs it often interferes with important functions of the digestive, respiratory, excretory organs, and [illegible] a serious disturbances of metabolism. It often breaks through the epithelial membranes of the skin or of the inner cavities of the body; under those conditions parts of the tumor die, break down and are cast off; an ulcerative surface is thus produced which serves as a place where certain bacteria find a favorable culture medium; putrefaction takes place and the absorption of the putrid material further weakens the organism.

It is furthermore very probable that the living tumor cells give off certain substances which differ from the substances produced in the normal organism, but whether these latter substances exert a toxic (poisonous) influence on the organism it is impossible to state at this present time.

Cancer among men is found in all countries where a close search for it has been instituted. The frequency with which it occurs differs, however, very much among people living under the ordinary conditions of present civilization in Europe and America and among races or nations living under more primitive conditions, especially in Africa and Asia.

If we consider first the former category we find that approximately 3 1-5 per cent of all human beings die from cancer.

Approximately 75,000 people die from cancer in one year in the United States, and about half a million in the civilized world (F. L. Hoffman). If we consider only persons over forty-five years old, considerably more people in the registered area of the United States die from cancer than from tuberculosis. Between the age of forty-five and sixty years almost 7 per cent of the male and 16 per cent of the female population die in this country from cancer.

If we compare the death rate from cancer in the last forty or fifty years, we notice a universal increase in all civilized countries.

Professor Loeb then takes up the question whether a microbe may be a cause of cancer in addition to the other conditions mentioned. We know, indeed, that to a certain extent, micro-organisms call forth cell proliferation (abnormal growth). Thus the tubercle bacillus may cause a limited growth of connective tissue, and as especially Borrel has pointed out, the organisms causing smallpox and vaccinia may even produce a slight proliferation of the infected epithelium, but in all these cases the proliferation soon ceases and toxic substances produced by bacteria lead usually soon to the death of a great part of the newly-formed cells.

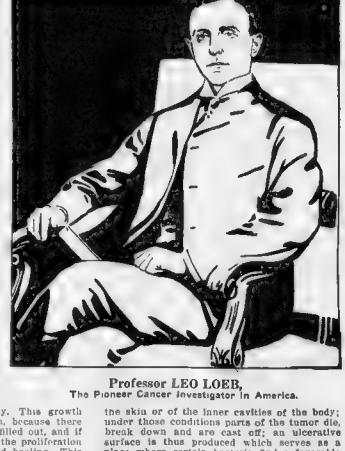
Based on such considerations many attempts have been made to prove the constant presence of certain parasitic micro-organisms in human cancer. Under the microscope it is possible to recognize in cancer cells certain inclusions which are usually absent in normal tissues, and a number of investigators claimed such included bodies definitely as protozoa (among others, Thoma, Sjoebring, Leyden, Gaylord and Eisen). Even the life cycle of these protozoa was apparently determined by some of these authors.

It could, however, be shown that similar cell inclusions may occasionally occur and did in all probability therefore not represent protozoa. Also bacteria (Doyon), mucor (Schmidt), chytridiacise (Behla) and other micro-organisms were held responsible, which clusters (Sanfelice, Leopold) believed yeast-like organisms to be frequently demonstrable in human cancer; they cultivated some yeasts in culture media and by injecting the organisms into animals believed they had reproduced the disease.

Careful studies by many investigators, however, could not confirm these interpretations. In the case of yeasts it has, for instance, been shown that although they occasionally occur in cancers, they are on the whole rare and do not reproduce the disease if injected into animals (Busse, Nichols, Loeb, Moore and Fleisher). They act in the body in a similar manner as inert foreign bodies, and we found a yeast which we isolated from a sarcoma to lead, after intravenous injections, to the death of the animal through embolisms of the kidney tubules, without ever producing cancer.

These persistent claims of the discovery of a micro-organism as the cause of cancer which could in no case be substantiated, led in the case of many pathologists, especially of those mainly interested in the careful study of the cancer tissues, to a reaction, which induced them to deny the possible importance of micro-organisms in the causation of cancer. Some went so far as to hold that while the factors already established as sufficient to explain the origin of cancer.

"On the other hand," concludes Professor Loeb, "a number of experimental investigators, without being able to accept as valid any of the claims as to the discovery of a micro-organism as the cause of cancer, have always pointed out the possibility that micro-organisms might at least in a certain number, perhaps even in a majority of cases, be concerned in the production of cancer, and tried to find new experimental means to approach these problems. Accordingly, on various occasions we pointed out the possibility that ultra-microscopic, perhaps intracellular, micro-organisms might induce body cells, under certain conditions, to proliferate in such a manner that cancer resulted. However, in no case of human cancer has the causative significance of a micro-organism so far been proven. In a certain kind of animal cancer, however, this proof has recently been supplied by Peyton Rous, the distinguished experimentalist at Rockefeller Institute."



Professor LEO LOEB,
The Pioneer Cancer Investigator in America.

There are certain occupations in which a direct connection exists between the character of the work and development of cancer. For instance, in Roentgen ray technicians, especially in those who began their work in the first years following the discovery of the rays, when the dangers connected with this occupation and the various precautions used at the present time were as yet unknown, gradually, often after many years of work, a painful condition of the skin arose, mainly on the hands and arms which were exposed to the rays. It became thickened, cracked, ulcers formed. The epithelium grew further down into the deeper tissues and slowly a carcinoma developed, which later made metastases spread. Approximately seventy cases are known where cancer thus developed, and in some cases it developed a considerable time after the exposure to the Roentgen rays had ceased.

Chimney sweeps develop relatively frequently cancer of the skin. The cause of this cancer is the irritation produced by soot. Those who are employed in the distillation of tar—especially of tar work rather than those manufacturing of grease and briquettes, are liable to develop cancer of the skin. Certain organic substances contained in tar and pitch cause the development of warts on the skin, which later break down and become transformed into cancers.

In men employed in the manufacturing of aniline dyes, and certain other benzol derivatives, wart-like excrescences of the skin may appear, but especially interesting is the frequent appearance of cancers of the bladder in such cases. Etch of the affected men had been in the dye works for twenty years or more. Usually substances excreted through the kidneys exert in such cases an irritating action on the epithelium of the bladder.

We see then that under the influence of a considerable variety of causes cancer can develop in the human body, and that in many cases cancer is preceded by the formation of warty excrescences, and in other cases by long continued irritation, which in itself seems to be able to lead to the formation of cancer.

Long continued irritation is not always necessary, but in certain cases one single traumatism may undoubtedly cause the development of cancer. While, however, long continued irritation frequently leads to the formation of carcinoma, one single traumatism causes more frequently the development of sarcoma. Thus, cases are known in which two months after a blow in the eye a sarcoma began to grow at the place of injury; in a child sixteen months old a sarcoma of the ciliary body developed after a fall on the elbow; a sarcoma of the arm followed a stab wound at the site of injury. There are also cases on record in which a bone sarcoma developed after a fracture of the bone, and after an extraction of a tooth the development of a cancer has been observed in the jaw. Also carcinomata set in the jaw originated subsequent to an extraction of a tooth.

Heredity is undoubtedly a factor in those cancers which develop occasionally in cases of pigmented nevi. We know that here the conditions preceding cancer are hereditary, and therefore cancer itself is indirectly hereditary. We furthermore know that a certain class of cancers originates on the basis of embryonic malformations, and inasmuch as these are under certain—as yet not well defined—conditions hereditary, we may assume that certain cancers belonging to this class are also hereditary.

If Irish Do Not Remain at Home Hebrew Race May Take Their Place

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

DURING last year 30,967 young women and young men emigrated from Ireland. Of these, 21,758 came to the United States, 6,673 went to Canada; 1,349 made the long voyage to Australia; 38 took up residence in different parts of Continental Europe, and 1,149 settled in England, Scotland and Wales.

C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Most of those emigrants, all of those who came to America, were in the full sturdiness and bloom of youth. More than one-fourth of their number had their passages paid in advance by relatives or friends to the United States.

This emigration is now a sore problem with the leaders of the Irish people. Not only the political leaders, but the pastors of the people and the national press, are unceasingly urging upon the youth of the country to stay in their own land, to help build it up under the new conditions that are coming and to devote their talents and their labor to the development of Ireland's long-dormant resources.

There was every reason and excuse for the emigration of the past. Landlordism and bad, alien government had made of Ireland a land without hope, destitute of any attractiveness whatever for the energetic, the youthful and the ambitious, as soon as they arrived at "the parting of the ways," and they were faced by the problem of their future. Future there was none for them in Ireland, and so there was nothing but the emigrant ship which bore them to every point of civilized settlement on the face of the globe.

Those days of gloom have passed. Landlordism is dead, bad, alien government is dying. In the place of both of them has already come a spirit of independence and of progress which animates every boy and girl brought up in Ireland and inspires them to added loyalty and devotion to the prosperity of their own land.

Riding one day on a fast express over the London & Northwestern Railroad from London up to Liverpool I had as my traveling companion Mr. Richard McGhee, M. P., who sits as home rule member for Mid-Tyrone in Ulster.

Mr. McGhee has given long study to the emigration problem and no man can be more interesting in his treatment of it in all its phases. His opinions are very strong. He formed them, not by looking at the perplexity from its home angle alone, but from studying its aspects abroad, particularly in the United States, which he has visited twice, traveling extensively during each stay. He declared to me emphatically that it is nothing short of criminal to be inducing young men and women to come away from Ireland now in view of the opportunities which are within their reach in their native land.

"Look at what a loss their going away means to Ireland, from a money standpoint alone," said Mr McGhee.

"Take any young man who emigrates today. He is healthy and strong and active, or he would not be eligible for entry at the American ports. He is educated and to a greater or less degree fitted to start right in at his life work. His bringing up, his training, his education, have cost his own country at least $3,000, allowing the very low annual expenditure to have been at least $150 a year

"Yet when he arrives at the age when he finds himself able to repay some of this outlay by becoming a producer of wealth in the country of his birth, he gets a prepaid ticket for America, and off he goes for the rest of his life. The percentage of returns is very small, and the country to which he goes gains a fully equipped citizen and producer of wealth without a cent of expense to her.

"Ireland is in sad need of her population now. It is safe to say that in twenty years she will be finding comfortable homes within her own territory for twice her present population. If the young and marriageable do not stay at home, this needed increase must come from other sources. The Hebrew people are settling in Irish cities today in far greater number than might be imagined

"The city of Cork has now two synagogues and one Jewish school. Much of the choicest real estate of the city is being acquired by Hebrews. Twenty years ago people of that ancient race were as scarce in Ireland as Mohammedans are today in Boston. Hebrews are not given to settling and existing in a country which has no future. Those who send prepaid tickets to Ireland as an inducement for their young relatives or friends to emigrate should bestow serious reflection on their action. There is no use talking or dreaming about an Irish-Ireland if the young and the energetic do not stay with her to help her work out her destiny."

Five and twenty years ago the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain broke away from his great leader, Mr. Gladstone, refusing to follow him in his policy of home rule for Ireland. From the day of that desertion down to this, Mr. Chamberlain's political career has been one prolonged procession of life's bitter ironies. Starting with the brightest of prospects to be Prime Minister after Gladstone's passing, he made one false step, when his evil genius prompted him to leave Gladstone's side and oppose and defeat home rule.

The position he abandoned by that move has never come his way since

Ever since the fateful night when, during the debate on Gladstone's first home rule bill, Mr. Chamberlain crossed the floor with his band of followers and sat among the Tories, his career has been marked by the strongest fatalism.

The Boer War, for which he was primarily responsible, brought mourning into a million British homes and dire disaster to England's military prestige. He took up tariff reform and used it as a battle cry only to see it go down in crushing defeat.

Starting out as a propagandist against the privileged Tory rich, denouncing them as a class, "who toil not, neither do they spin," he ended by accepting office as a member of a Tory cabinet.

Had he stayed with Gladstone he would now be where Asquith is. Instead, he took the line of least resistance. He became a Tory, not so much because he believed in Toryism, but because he thought it offered him a shorter road to power. Now he is in retirement and broken in health. His career is retrospect and it must be clouded heavily with regret over what might have been. And more's the pity, for up to the hour of the "great betrayal," Mr Chamberlain gave promise of rich possession of those gifts which go to make the statesman.

"Drian," in Harper's BAZAR

"LES PARISIENNES."

This is the third of a series of exquisite etchings by "Drian" of Paris, illustrating the daily life of the fashionable Parisienne. Drian is probably the most sought after artist in France today, because of his marvellous "smartness" of line and grasp of last-minute modernity. His "Parisienne" pictures are appearing in Harper's BAZAR in this country.

Drian describes his picture, which is reprinted from the January number of Harper's BAZAR, thus:

THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR
An Entrancing Tale of Love and Mystery
BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN

"Yet they sometimes give you a valuable clew."

Mr. Gryce looked as if he would like to disclaim this, but he was a judicious soul, and merely gave a twist to the vase which I thought would cost me that small article of vertu.

"Shall we humor Miss Butterworth?" asked the inspector.

"We will do better," answered Mr. Gryce, setting the vase down with a precision that made me jump; for I am a worshipper of bric-a-brac, and prize the few articles I own, possibly beyond their real value. "We will treat her as a coadjutor, which, by the way, she says she is not, and by the trust we place in her, secure that discretionary use of our confidence which she shows with so much spirit in regard to her own."

"Begin, then," said I.

"I will," said he, "but first allow me to acknowledge that you are the person who first put us on the track of Franklin Van Burnam."

CHAPTER XXX.

The Matter as Stated by Mr. Gryce.

I HAD exhausted my wonder, so I accepted this statement with no more display of surprise than a grim smile.

"When you failed to identify Howard Van Burnam as the man who accompanied his wife into the adjacent house, I realized that I must look elsewhere for the murderer of Louise Van Burnam. You see I had more confidence in the excellence of your memory than you had yourself, so much indeed that I gave you more than one chance to exercise it, having, by certain little methods I sometimes employ, induced different moods in Mr. Van Burnam at the time of his several visits, so that his bearing might vary, and you have every opportunity to recognize him for the man you had seen on that fatal night."

"Then it was he you brought here each time?" I broke in.

"It was he"

"Well!" I ejaculated

"The superintendent and some others whom I need not mention"—here Mr. Gryce took up another small object from the table—"believed implicitly in his guilt; conjugal murder is so common and the causes which lead to it so frequently puerile. Therefore I had to work alone. But this did not cause me any concern. Your doubts emphasized mine, and when you confided to me that you had seen a figure similar to the one we were trying to identify enter the adjoining house on the evening of the funeral, I made immediate inquiries and discovered that the gentleman who had entered the house right after the four persons described by you was Franklin Van Burnam. This gave me a definite clew, and this is why I say that it was you who gave me my first start in this matter."

"Humph!" thought I to myself, as with a sudden shock I remembered that one of the words which had fallen from Miss Oliver's lips during her delirium had been this very name of Franklin.

"I had had my doubts of this gentleman before," continued the detective, warming gradually with his subject. "A man of my experience doubts every one in a case of this kind, and I had formed at odd times a sort of side theory, so to speak, into which some little matters which came up during the inquest seemed to fit with more or less nicety; but I had no real justification for suspicion till the event of which I speak. That you had evidently formed the same theory as myself and were bound to enter into the lists with me, put me on my mettle, madam, and with your knowledge or without it, the struggle between us began."

"So your disdain of me," I here put in with a triumphant air I could not subdue, "was only simulated? I shall know what to think of you hereafter. But don't stop, go on, this is all deeply interesting to me"

"I can understand that. To proceed, then; my first duty, of course, was to watch you. You had reasons of your own for suspecting this man, so by watching you I hoped to surprise them."

"Good!" I cried, unable to entirely conceal the astonishment and grim amusement into which his continued misconception of the trend of my suspicions threw me

"But you led us a chase, madam I must acknowledge that you led us a chase. Your being an amateur led me to anticipate your using an amateur's methods but you showed skill, madam, and the man I sent to keep watch over Mr Boppert, against your looked fo[r] visit there, was foiled by the very simple strategy you used in meeting her at a neighboring shop"

"Good!" I again cried, in my relief that the discovery made at that meeting had not been shared by him.

"We had sounded Mrs Boppert ourselves, but she had seemed a very hopeless job, and I do not yet see how you got any water out of that stone—if you did"

"No?" I retorted ambiguously, enjoying the inspector's delight in this scene as much as I did my own secret thoughts and the pr[illegible] of the surprise I was holding in store for them

"But your interference with the clock and the discovery you [made] that it had been going at the time the shelves fell, was not un[known] to us, and we have made use [of it], good use as you will hereafter [see]."

"So those girls could not keep a secret after all," I muttered. I waited with some anxiety to hear him mention the pin cushion, but he did not, greatly to my relief.

"Don't blame the girls!" [he put] in (his ears evidently are as sharp as mine); "the inquiries [made] proceeded from Franklin, it was only natural for me to suspect that he was trying to mislead us by some hocus-pocus story. So I visited the girls. That I had difficulty in getting to the root of the matter is to their credit, [Miss But]terworth, seeing that you had made them promise secrecy."

"You are right," I nodded, and forgave them on the spot. I could not withstand Mr Gryce's eloquence—and it affected me at times—how could I expect those girls to. Besides, they had not revealed the more important matter I had confided to them, and in consideration of this I was ready to pardon them most anything

"That the clock was going at the time the shelves fell, and that I should be the one to draw our attention to it would seem to the superficial mind proof positive that he was innocent of the deed with which it was so closely associated," the detective proceeded. "But to one skilled in the subterfuges of criminals, this seemingly conclusive fact in his favor was capable of an explanation so in keeping with the subtlety shown in every other feature of this remarkable crime, that I began to regard it as a point against him rather than in his favor. Of which more hereafter

"Not allowing myself to be deterred, then, by this momentary setback, and rejoicing in an affair considered as settled by my superiors, I proceeded to establish Franklin Van Burnam's connection with the crime which had been laid with so much apparent reason at his brother's door

"The first fact to be settled was, of course, whether your identification of him as the gentleman who accompanied his victim into Mr Van Burnam's house could be corroborated by any of the many persons who had seen the so-called Mr James Pope at the Hotel D[illegible]

[illegible] of the witnesses who [illegible] inquest had presumed [illegible] In either of these [illegible] haughty gentlemen the [illegible] person just mentioned, [illegible] open attempt on [illegible] bring about an identi[fication] would result disastrously [illegible] employ [a s]trategy like my [illegible] Miss Butterworth" [illegible] overpowering in its [illegible] "and rightly con[cluding] that for a person to be satisfactorily identified [illegible] either, he must be seen under the same circumstances and in nearly the same place, I sought out Franklin Van Burnam, and with specious promises of some great benefit to be done his brother, induced him to accompany me to the Hotel D[illegible]

Whether [illegible] plans and [illegible] a brave front and an assumption of candor would best serve him in this unexpected dilemma, or whether he felt so entrenched behind the precautions he had taken as not to fear discovery under any circumstances, he made but one demur before preparing to accompany me. This demur was significant, however, for it was occasioned by my advice to change his dress for one less conspicuously fashionable, or to hide it under an ulster or mackintosh. And as a proof of his [h]ardihood — remember, madam, that his connection with this crime [h]as been established — he actually did put on the ulster, though he must have known what a difference it would make in his appearance.

The result was all I could [desi]re. As we entered the hotel I saw a certain hackman start [and] lean forward to look after [illegible] [illegible] and Mr. Pope [illegible] hotel [illegible] porter the [illegible] was [illegible] into [illegible]

But [illegible] the [illegible] at [illegible] Mr Van Burnam [illegible] to the spot [illegible] Mr Pope [illegible] stood while [illegible] wife was inscribing [illegible] in the register and [illegible] to remain in the back [illegible] I had a few words at [illegible] and in his brother's interests of course, I succeeded in so [illegible] directly Mr Henshaw's attention toward him. The start which he gave and the exclamation [he] uttered were unequivocal 'Why, there's the man now!' he cried, happily in a whisper 'Anxious look, drooping head, brown mustache, everything but the duster' 'Bah!' said I; 'that's Mr. Franklin Van Burnam your are looking at! What are you thinking of?' 'Can't help it,' said he; 'I saw both of the brothers at the inquest, and saw nothing in them then to remind me of our late mys[terious] [illegible] But as he stands [illegible] is a lot more like [illegible] Pope than the other one is, [illegible] forget it.' I shrugged [illegible] told him he was a [illegible] fools had better keep [illegible] themselves, and [illegible] with my man, outward[ly] [illegible] but inwardly in most [illegible] for pursuing an [illegible]

Whether this man possessed [a] motive for [a] crime so seemingly out of accordance with [his] life and disposition was, of course, [the] next point to settle His co[nduct at] the inquest certainly [sh]owed no [illegible] animosity toward his brother's wife, nor was there on the surface of affairs any token of the mortal [illegible] alone could account for a crime at once so deliberate and so brutal But we detectives plunge below the surface, and after settling the question of Franklin's identity with the so-called Mr Pope of the Hotel D[illegible] I left New York and its interests among which I reckoned your efforts at detective work, Miss Butterworth—to a young man in my office, who, I am afraid, did not quite understand the persistence of your character; for he had nothing to tell me concerning you on my return, save that you had been cultivating Miss Althorpe, which, of course, was such a natural thing for you to do, I wonder he thought it necessary to mention it

Detective Burns in HEARST'S MAGAZINE

IN the January number of Hearst's Magazine appears what is indeed a brand new type of detective story. It is written by William J. Burns, the world-famous detective, in collaboration with George Jean Nathan, and is one of a most important series to be published in Hearst's Magazine. It is a picture of how a real detective works in "landing" a real criminal. You will find here no tracing of crimes by cigar ashes, no laborious and involved passages of "deduction," no long-shot guesses which you are asked to take on faith. But, rather, this is a narration of how one acute mind matched its masterful qualities against another nearly as keen in a battle to land a notorious and self-sufficient criminal leader behind prison bars.

This story is based on an actual experience ... and it details ... facts in one of ... the second in our series ... stories built around the exploits of this leader among ... living crime hunters.

By WILLIAM J. BURNS.

(The Most Famous Living Detective.)

The Next Moment the Gentleman Shot Through the Door in Pursuit of Mr. Murphy, Yelling at the Top of His Voice: Stop Him! Stop Thief! That Man's Got My Wallet! Police! Police!"

One of the Interesting Illustrations for Detective Burns' Story in January HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

MR. WILLIAM PETER MURPHY achieved the sobriquet "Rink" by virtue of a regular and devoted Saturday night indulgence in the species of forearm calisthenics that are a concomitant of the famous indoor sport known vernacularly as "going on a bat," sentimentally as "coming through the rye" and literally as "becoming grievously intoxicated."

When Rink was under the influence, his brain was in the custom of becoming as acute as Bernard Shaw's brain is in the custom of becoming under the influence of spinach, onions and the co-ordinate articles of that august person's vegetarian faith.

It was well known to the select company of gentlemen of which Rink was leader that all of the brilliant coups that had earned Rink the reputation of being the cleverest safe-craker and bank thief in America had witnessed their deft birth, their almost uncanny planning, in Rink's brain when Rink's brain was mellow from the caresses of rum. In view of which, it may seem distressingly unpromising to chronicle the news that at the particular time in which Rink enters the area of our story, said Rink was "on the waterwagon."

What caused Rink temporarily to forswear alcohol at this particular juncture is not given to us to explain. Nevertheless, when the Chief, sitting at his desk in New York entrenched behind the smoke-belching breastwork of a perfecto, got sudden wind of the fact that Rink was simultaneously not drinking and in Toledo, Ohio, the Chief did not even hesitate for a toothbrush on his way to the train.

But how to get Rink into jail?

The Chief realized that the simplest thing in the world would be to frame up a job on Rink and put him in jail, but the Chief realized simultaneously that to sequester Rink thus artificially, thus obviously, thus amateurishly, would only put Rink and his gang doubly on their guard against the Chief. This would never do. Rink had to be weaned into jail naturally, that is, in a way that would convince Rink there was no strategy or influencing hand behind it. Rink, in other words, had to be put behind bars in a way that would impress Rink as being purely in due course of law. There must be no odor of "frame up." And hence the Chief, still reading his novel, brought himself to the conclusion that he (the Chief) would have to devise a crime that would appeal to Rink so poignantly, so greatly, and would have to suggest this crime to Rink so deftly that Rink would just have to commit it. This, then, is what passed in the detective's mind as framing up a job not on Rink, but for him.

When the Chief stepped up to the desk of the hotel to register something caused him involuntarily to glance to his left. He seemed to feel someone's eyes upon him. He turned, and there, smiling at him with much insouciance, was—Rink.

"Hello, Chief," said Rink, still smiling; "what are you doing in Toledo?"

"Who is he?" bravely inquired Rink.

"You," replied the Chief, graciously.

"Me?" exclaimed Rink with an elegant sumblance of surprise and shock; "what have I done?"

When Rink "accidentally" happened to meet the Chief the next morning in the barber shop of the hotel, the Chief, upon being facially renovated by the barber, approached Rink, engaged in a brief conversation with him over the highly relevant subject of Middle-West baseball, and bidding him a Celtic au 'voir, pressed a cigar upon him. Rnik expressed his gratitude, placed the cigar in his pocket and assured the Chief that he would smoke it after his luncheon with great relish. Several hours later, after Rink had lunched to his full satisfaction with a couple of his close comrades, he drew out the cigar with a flourish, related to his admiring brethren how he had come by it, and, biting off the end, lit it.

A minute later, after Rink had indulged in a particularly lusty puff—Bang! Bang!!—the cigar exploded.

"Well," exclaimed Rink with a grin, once he had regained his composure, "he played a trick on me. But I'll get even with him."

A day passed, and Rink and the Chief did not come into contact. The day after that, however, Rink manoeuvred things so craftily that he "accidentally" ran across the Chief in the hotel lobby. (The Chief, incidentally, had been waiting in the lobby the whole day before and up till this moment on this day for Rink to run across him "accidentally.")

"Pretty good joke you worked on me, Chief," remarked Rink.

"Joke?" said the detective, arching his eyebrwos; "what kind of a joke?"

"Go on—quit kidding—the loaded cigar."

"Loaded!" exclaimed the Chief with a loud laugh. "Get out! You're ...."

"No," ... Rink. "You knew darned well it was loaded."

"I did nothing of the kind," ... the detective; "that ... was given me ... It was too ... for my taste, so I thought I'd let you tackle it."

Rink was doubtful at first, but the evident sincerity of the detective finally convinced him.

"Here," said the Chief, "take this cigar. I bought this one, and it'll make up to you for the other one. You needn't be afraid of this one exploding."

Rink took the cigar. An hour later when he tried to light it he discovered that the Chief had told the truth. It did not explode. It was hollow—and in it was a lead pencil!

Rink was now determined to play a ... on the Chief and play it without another day's delay. He hied himself, accordingly, to one of the numerous little novelty stores where the detective had evidently been making his purchases of "parlor tricks" and laid in a stock of loaded cigarettes, cigars made of rubber, boutonnieres with concealed squirt-guns and similar so-called pocket-jokers. Then he proceeded to look up the Chief.

The Chief, however, so they told Rink at the hotel, had left suddenly for Chicago in response to a ... But as the next day passed and the day after that and the detective was not to be seen around the hotel or anywhere else, Rink began to believe that the Chief actually had left to field of Toledo open to him. What distressed Rink especially, however, was the fact that he had a pocket full of jokers and not a chance to get even with the Chief. As an alternative, therefore, he made up his mind that, rather than waste the jokers, he would have some fun with them with his comrades. And, that night, while hoaxing Maxy Frumm, one of his cronies, with a rubber cigar in the backroom of a downtown saloon, Rink suddenly let the smile of boyish pranksomeness flit from his face, suddenly brought his fist down on the table, gruffly told the waiter who came up on the trot in response to the rap to go to, and, leaning over the table close to his friend Maxy's ear, outlined to him what had just occurred to him as a superbly cunning way to reap in some excruciatingly easy money. Maxy smiled broadly as Rink finished his chronicle. "It's sure and it's safe," nodded that worthy. "Sure it is," returned Rink; "it's one of the best little ideas yours truly ever thought out!"

Rink was not entirely accurate. It was one of the best little ideas his truly, the Chief, had ever thought out.

The full story from which the foregoing excerpts were taken will be found in full in the January number of HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

ONE WEEK MORE

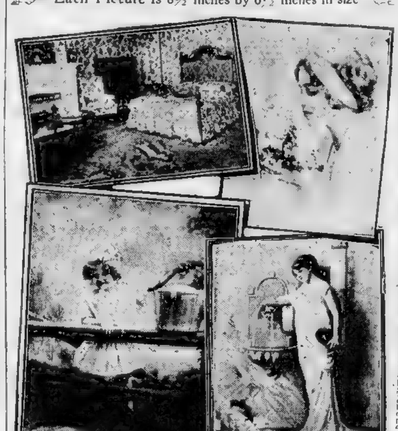
AND THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S WATER COLORING COMPETITION

WILL END

Any girl or boy who has not yet started to color the exquisite pictures which have been offered from week to week CAN BEGIN RIGHT NOW. Today's set is the 11th. There will be 12 sets in all. Just clip the coupon NOW and get the first 11 sets. You need not color them all—only one picture—any one you choose from each set, then after the 12th set is offered send in your 12 colored pictures to the American as directed in the rules printed below. Ten days to two weeks will be allowed after the 12 sets have been distributed in which to prepare and send in colored pictures. You will find it the most interesting work you have ever tried, and besides the fun of coloring the pictures you may share in the $2,000 Educational Fund, which will be given as awards of merit for the best hand coloring work. And last, but not by any means least, if you are among the prize winners, it will bring great honor not only to yourself but to your school and teacher. Get the first 11 sets today and GO IN AND WIN.

HERE ARE THIS WEEK'S PICTURE SUBJECTS

Each Picture is 8½ inches by 6½ inches in size



How to Color This Week's Pictures

If You Are a Beginner, Follow These Suggestions.

"Bedroom" Interior. Color carpet a rich red, wall and furniture coverings the same shade of bluish green, all furniture brown picked with yellow in high lights. Yellow and brown on fur rugs, then with a pale shade of green go over vine design shown on wall paper and furniture covering, leaving the flower portion of the vine blank. When finished fill in flowers pink in walls, and a light orange and pink on furniture covering. Clear orange on chandelier, andiron photograph frames, etc. A gray wash over marble portion of mantlepiece; brownish yellow back of fireplace. Do not forget to apply a brown wash to the caned portion of bedstead.

"Little Dairy Maid." Color tree trunk, bars and earth with brown. Foliage green, sky blue. Flesh for face and hands, pink for cheeks, lips and dress. Mix brown and yellow to secure the red for hair. Bright blue on milk pail. Little touches of yellow running into the green of the foliage at the edges will improve the picture.

"Girl with Flowers." Pale green on hair ribbon and dress drapery, a second coat of same where shadows are shown. A darker green for flower foliage, flesh for face and hands, pink for cheeks, red for lips and beads. Mix brown and yellow for hair; the faintest sort of orange background back of face, hair and flowers. Color centre of each flower pink, which before it has a chance to dry mix with purple, carrying the purple from the centre in a faint wash to the edges of the petals. If done properly the result will be a lavender or lilac flower with a pink centre.

"Girl with Doves." Do not be tempted to use too much color on this exquisite picture. Mix blue and brown till they make a faint bluish gray, with this color entire background, then with blue only in spots and faint brown only in others give a mottled effect to the marble, being guided in this by the varying strengths of the shadows in the original print. Color vase standing on floor deep blue; rose on floor pink with green foliage. Then a faint purple wash on dress; yellow on dish in girl's hands and on ribbon in hair. Faint pink for cheeks and lips; flesh on face and hands. A deeper blue in dark portion of tiles, faint blue wash over white of doves; a grayish blue on darker portion of doves.

Each Set Consists of

1 Complete Set of Paints in 8 Colors

1 Imported Camel's Hair Brush

Next Sunday's Set Will Be the Last of the Series

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USING COLORS

First cut off a strip of each of the colors as large as this, placing each strip in a saucer. Put one-half tablespoonful of soapy water in each saucer. This will give you enough of each color to paint several pictures. Always try your color on a piece of blank paper before using on picture. Be very careful at no time to wet the brush with the mouth, as the colors are injurious.

Unless you have a separate brush for each color, be careful to wash out the brush in clean water before using a fresh color. In painting it is best to begin at the top or on one side of the picture and work down or across, and it is best to cover the large surfaces first, and then carry out the details of the picture later.

If the color when dry is not dark enough your may paint over again with the same color, and it is well to have a piece of blotter at hand so that if any mistake is made or a color is used in the wrong place, it can be absorbed by the use of the blotter. To secure delicate tints in portions such as sky, etc., it is a good plan to have a small piece of cotton, which when rubbed over the moist color will give the delicate shades desired. In cases where dark shades are necessary a little pure color can be taken from the color pad ... To secure flesh color, mix orange and red.

The Boston American Has Provided a

$2000 EDUCATIONAL FUND

To Be Given as Awards of Merit to Those Who Do the Best Hand Coloring Work

READ THE PLAN: THEN PARTICIPATE

CONDITIONS OF THE 1913 BOSTON AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL FUND:

The Boston American 1913 Educational Fund is a plan for the exhibition of artistic skill and judgment to be rewarded by a distribution of prizes.

This Fund consists of Two Thousand dollars ($2,000), cash. Eight hundred and seventy-eight (878) cash prizes, to the amount of this Two Thousand dollars ($2,000) will be given, absolutely free, by the Boston American to those of its readers who submit the best hand colored work on pictures furnished weekly by the Boston American.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this Fund.

The distribution of the Fund will be based upon the following plan:

The Boston American will distribute each week for twelve weeks beginning Sunday, November 23rd, Water Color Painting Sets, each set consisting of Four (4) Photo Gelatine Pictures, size 8½x6½ inches,

One set of paints of eight colors,
One painting brush.

Each person who desires to participate in this Fund will be allowed to submit one complete set of hand colored pictures, which set must consist of twelve (12) hand colored pictures. But not more than one picture subject from the four (4) subjects offered weekly can be submitted for any given week, although each week's subject must be represented in a complete set.

Great care has been taken to place the different grades of competitors in separate classes, as follows:

Class A—Artists and art students.
Class B—Kindergarten and Primary School pupils.
Class C—Grammar School pupils.
Class D—High School pupils.
Class E—Anyone not in Class A, B, C or D.

Name, address and class specification must be plainly written or printed on the reverse side of each and every picture submitted. No one person can participate in more than one class.

Participation in this Fund is open to any or all members of a family, irrespective of age, but not more than one prize will be awarded in any one family.

The Fund is open only to residents of New England, except such instances that may arise where a participant already entered is compelled to move out of this territory, in which case, decision of eligibility will rest entirely with the Fund Editor.

In case of exactly similar meritorious work, awards will be made on the basis of neatness and artistic merit. But if the excellency of the work cannot be decided in that way, the participants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their answers before the twelfth set of pictures is distributed, as any pictures sent in before that time will not be considered. Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first sets of pictures sent in after the last subjects are offered will stand no better chance of securing award than the last picture submitted.

All pictures must be delivered to the Boston American Educational Fund Headquarters, at No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give participants ten days to two weeks after the last week's picture subjects have been distributed, to prepare their sets of pictures, so that they can be sent in all together, at one time.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any pictures unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Educational Fund Headquarters, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

It is absolutely necessary that the pictures, if mailed, be fully prepaid. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse any sets of pictures upon which charges of postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

The prizes will be awarded by the Educational Fund Editor.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Educational Fund Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass. Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change or addition to these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting this distribution, and the decision of the Boston American Fund Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

THIS WEEK'S WATER COLOR SET,

as well as the ten sets previously offered, may be obtained at the AMERICAN PROMOTION DEPARTMENT, No. 5 WINTHROP SQUARE, OR AT YOUR LOCAL NEWSDEALER'S.

EFFIE sat up and looked at him with raised eyebrows.

"How dare I what?" she asked. "I meant to speak to you tonight, whatever happened, however late you were. You lock your door when you come to bed, so I waited here. You've got to listen to me now!"

"I'll not listen to a word! Go to your room at once, do you hear?"

The boy spoke sharply, dictatorially, and waved his arms toward the door with a gesture that was almost foreign.

Effie sat up and gave an angry laugh. "I'll go to my room when I'm ready," she said, "and not a moment before."

Archie turned and marched to the door. He unlocked it, opened it violently, and left the room.

In an instant Effie was out of bed. She ran to the landing, down the first flight of stairs, and flung her arms round Archie.

"You shall speak to me tonight, you shall!" she said.

"If you've got anything to say tonight, come down with me to your father's room and say it before him."

"I won't!" cried Effie. "What's the good of that? I can see you before my people any time, and that's what I'm so sick of. I want to speak to you alone, and I will."

He wrenched her arms away and flung them off. "Don't do that again!" he said. "I can't stand it!"

They stood facing each other angrily, breathing hard. Suddenly Effie sat down on the stairs, and burst into a passion of weeping. Great sobs shook her and almost choked her. She put her arms over her eyes and rocked to and fro.

"O God!" cried the boy.

He stooped down, picked her up in his arms with a supreme effort, and carried her into her room. He put her down tenderly into an armchair, snatched a blanket from the bed, wrapped it over her, shut her window, closed the door gently, and knelt at her feet.

"Darling!—darling!" he whispered—"darling!"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Pemberton Finds Archie in Effie's Room.

"YOU don't love me. You hate me," cried Effie.

"I don't love you? Oh, you don't know what you are saying."

"I do know. I know that you loathe me. I sicken you. You slip away whenever you see me coming. I can't even take your arm without making you shudder. Do you think I can't see? Do you think I go about as blind as a bat? What's the matter with me? What have I done to you?"

The boy got ... Effie ... his hand and held it tight.

"Tell me!" she cried—"tell me! —I must know!—I must! It's—it's simply killing me. Can't you see that it's killing me?"

"Oh, my dear!" he said, putting his other hand on her head.

The touch of him melted her. The vehemence left her voice. She put his hand to her lips and crooned softly like a mother with her child.

"Oh, Archie, my Archie, I love you!—I love you! I love you more than life, more than my father and mother, more than I know. And you love me, you do love me, you'll always love me. You can't help it any more than I can. I know that. I am happy about that. That's most awfully good. But what hurts me more than I can bear is your keeping away from your work. I want you to work. I want you to do big things. But I don't want you to love work more than you love me. I'm—oh! I'm too frightfully jealous of everything that keeps you away from me. I must have something of you. I must feel your arms round me sometimes to keep me alive. I can't do any more with just going out with you. I want to put my head on your shoulder and feel your heart beating against mine. If you told me you had been keeping out of my way because you don't love me any more I should laugh. It isn't possible for you not to love me. You're doing it for some other reason, and I'm going to know it now. You've got to tell me now, or I——"

"Sssh!" whispered the boy. "For heaven's sake don't move, don't even breathe!"

He had heard someone moving in the sleeping house.

With chattering teeth he tiptoed to the door, opened it, and stood on the landing face to face with Harry Pemberton.

It was too dark for the boy to see the expression on the Vicar's face. From the sound of his voice, which was thick with anger, he could imagine the expression all too vividly.

"Come with me," Harry said.

As they passed the old grandfather clock in the hall struck two.

Once in his room, Harry relit the still warm candles. And then Archie saw his face. It was not the genial, cheery, sunny face of Harry Pemberton. It was the face of a man all of whose blood was surging with rage and indignation, who was fighting hard to remain master of himself. His lips were set tight. His nostrils were distended. His eyes were screwed up. His breath came in great gasts.

"Shut the door!"

The boy did so.

"Come here!"

The boy did as he was bid. He went quietly up to the rug and stood looking into Harry's eyes fearlessly, simply.

"What were you doing in my daughter's room?"

"Saying good night," said Archie.

"You said good night at the club."

"I thought I would like to say good night again."

"Are you in the habit of making free of my daughter's room?"

"No sir."

"Tell me the truth."

"I am telling you the truth."

"You say that it's the first time you have been in her room when she has been in bed."

The boy hesitated. "Yes."

"I don't believe you!" cried Harry—"I don't believe you! You lied to me once. How can I rely on your speaking the truth now?"

The boy stood his ground, though his face turned white with pain.

"I give you my word of honor," he said.

"Honor!" cried Harry—"honor! What sort of honor is yours that allows you to live in the house of a man whose implicit trust you have won, and sneak into his daughter's bedroom at night?"

"You have a right to say that. I ought not to have gone into your daughter's bedroom. But we love each other, and——"

"And what?"

"And we like saying a few words alone. It's all my fault, and I'm sorry. But you've no right to doubt my word when I say that all we did was to say good night."

Harry seized the boy by the shoulders and looked into his eyes angrily and beseechingly.

"I don't want to doubt your word. I'd give a year of my life to believe you. But you lied to me once."

The boy flung himself free. "Once!—once! I told you why I lied to you then. I told you because you made me think that you'd never suspect me as all the others have. But you do suspect me. Even you!"

Harry's eyes could see the cabin of the Albert Edward, the golden hair and the big blue eyes of the little girl who lay upon the bunk. He had no eyes for the despair that had suddenly stamped itself upon the face of the boy, no care for the pathetic misery in his voice.

"Yes, yes, I do suspect you!—I must suspect you! I caught you creeping out of Effie's room at 2 o'clock in the morning. Is that a time when good night is usually said? Tell me the truth, you sneak!"

"I have told you the truth, but only half of it. Now you shall have it all. You deserve it. You may call me a liar if you like. What does it matter? No one will see me in East Brenton again after tonight as long as I live."

The boy choked and stood for a moment unable to speak.

Harry's anger still blazed, but it was mixed with a growing fear. "Go on!" he said.

"The first time I went into her room was the night I came back from London."

"Before or after I came up to your room?"

"Before."

"That's a lie! I followed you up after five minutes."

"I say that it was before. Effie met me on the landing outside her rooms. We were there for three minutes. I forced her into her room when I heard you and rushed into mine. I was not in bed when you came in."

"Why didn't you say so?"

"Because I wanted to protect Effie. Tonight, the second time we've met late, I found her waiting for me in my room, lying on my bed."

"You ask me to believe that?"

"I ask you to believe nothing; I don't care now what you choose to believe. I'm just telling the truth, to show you what I might have done because no one has seen fit to tell Effie that she is a woman."

"You prove yourself to be lying and trying to shield yourself behind Effie by saying that. Effie has been told that she is a woman and what it means."

"No, no!" cried the boy. "That's impossible. You may think that she's been told, but she hasn't. Good God! do you know what you imply by saying that she has been told? . . . I can't say it. I can't even think of it."

"Say it!" cried Harry—"say it!"

"You imply that Effie was not ignorant, but was tempting me."

With all his self-control out of hand, Harry sprang upon the boy and shook him as a dog shakes a rat and flung him away, as though afraid of what he might do to him if he had his hands upon him any longer.

Archie staggered backward across the carpetless room, and was only prevented from crashing into the window by a large armchair. Into this he fell. He did not stay in it an instant. He was on his feet again pointing a shaking finger at the Vicar.

THINKS MUSIC OF SCHOMBERG CAN NEVER BE POPULAR

CALLS IT "MONSTROSITY"

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Rumors of the amazing character of the music of Arnold Schomberg had been wafted across the Atlantic, but not until we heard the quartet in D Minor played by the Flonzaleys did we really get an idea of what this man is doing.

The present is a credulous age. All that any charlatan needs to get a hearing is to announce that his work is for the future, that posterity will understand him and smile at our stupidity. Immediately we set ourselves down and endeavor to think and hear like unborn generations.

This state of mind has been justified by the wondrous developments of the past century, both in science and the arts. We have seen both Beethoven and Wagner, flouted by their own generations, become the deities of the present, and we are afraid of missing a future Wagner or Beethoven in every crazy musician.

This explains the vogue of Schomberg. It explains why the Flonzaley Quartet, in my opinion the finest string quartet in the world, has wasted its valuable time preparing the D Minor Quartet.

ALSO BREAKS RULES.

You must remember that Wagner and Beethoven were condemned by the professional musicians of their time because they broke rules of composition, but were immediately accepted by the public because their music was attractive.

Schomberg also breaks rules. In fact, there are few rules of composition nowadays for anybody to break. Those few that remain he disregards. Professional musicians, doubting the evidences of their own senses, are afraid to be disrespectful to such a rule smasher. The public, however, judges only by what it hears. The revolutionary music of Wagner and Beethoven was beautiful. It pleased the ear even when it surprised and astounded.

Schomberg's music doesn't look, any popular appeal at all. It is a gigantic joke upon its auditors.

I have gone over its various themes, and as melodies they are absolute drivel. They are fitted together with a complete disregard for how they would sound. If you get a four-piece German band, and have each piece begin at the same moment to play a totally different tune, you will have some idea what Schomberg's Quartet in D Minor sounds like. Except that the German band might elect to play four good tunes while there isn't a decent melody in the whole Schomberg contraption.

PUBLIC THE LAST JUDGE.

In the end it is the public which decides whether a composer shall go down through the ages, or be tenderly laid in a discard like about ten thousand poor musicians who have lived and died since Mozart, making each his little furore and making no impression at all upon the mind of time.

Musicians who earn their living writing music or playing it are the servants of the public. Those who affect to disregard the public's verdict die in want and only one in a thousand is afterwards discovered to have rare talent.

Schomberg's music can never be popular. It doesn't please. Beethoven himself could not write music which could be performed for one solid hour without interruption or applause an audience. Schomberg has the monumental insolence to expect an audience to sit still for a full circle of the clock while his monstrosity is being performed.

The Flonzaley Quartet, as I said before, is a marvelous organization, but anybody who looks at those four queer little men, with their long hair and strange whiskers, is able to suspect they have no sense of humor. The Schomberg Quartet proves it.

ANNIE RUSSELL SEEKS TO KEEP ALIVE INTEREST IN ENGLISH COMEDY WORKS

"Under Cover" Another Proof of "Arch" Selwyn's Good Judgment of Plays

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WHILE [illegible] are indulging in the prevailing [illegible] its slave plays, Annie Russell, almost [illegible] to keep alive an interest in master works of Englis[illegible] Rather a large-sized order for so small a woman, you might say, but she has made much progress in her task. The present week will bring Miss Russell to the Hollis with her English company which, it is promised, is well grounded in traditional and practical training, and well fitted to interpret the vivacious wit, the sprightly satire of Sheridan and Goldsmith, and the elegant and lofty [illegible] eighteenth century England. Miss Russell, [illegible] manager, still begin her Boston engage[illegible] comedy "School for Scandal," which, though [illegible] frequently forbidding label "classic," might [illegible] early run by Dr Johnson (had his English [illegible] gant than we are told it was) as the "comedy [illegible] to life of today, its satire is as vital as it was [illegible] distinguished doctor said that the piece "fulfilled [illegible] of comedy." In contrast to the fashionable dis[illegible] and in our politest parlors of sex hygiene, clinic [illegible] or ufe, there should be a restful relief in the repro[illegible] ruling, mellowed atmosphere of Georgian days. This [illegible] of Miss Russell's work in the old English comedies, [illegible] Scandal," just added to her repertoire, is her fourth [illegible] at time. And it is said to be her most elaborate. Her experience, then, would seem to do violence to the pessimistic conclusions of keen observers that our tastes for theatrical fare have become hopelessly commonplace and that there is a demand only for expositions of social evils or academic discussions of why the well-known human race is not so noble as it should be. Miss Russell's own particular charms, added to the delightful plays she is bringing to the Hollis, should have an agreeable effect upon playgoers.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

PROSPERITY NOTE—Joe DiFeo, observing that good times have come to the Plymouth Theatre with "Under Cover," felt safe last week in ordering a new lining for his dress suit.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

AND, while on the subject of "Under Cover," it may just as well be mentioned that this stirring drama of high life and smuggling is proving the truth of old Will Shakespeare's oft-quoted phrase, "The play's the thing," for the success of this intensely interesting melodrama is not due to the fame of its author—that person being without any special distinction as a playwright—but to its genuine qualities as an entertainment. To come to this city without a New York indorsement and to remain here week after week to the joy of profitable business was more than was expected of it by those who, ordinarily, are supposed to foretell the length of a play's career after seeing the first performance. But the young man who is principally responsible for "Under Cover" is not the author—as you might suspect—but Archie Selwyn, whose faith in the piece encouraged him to back its production with a very ample sum of honest-to-goodness money. Mr. Selwyn has suddenly blossomed into about the safest judge of play values on this continent. It was Mr. Selwyn who declared that "Within the Law" would be a tremendous success after it had failed completely in Chicago, and when he took that property off William A. Brady's hands it fulfilled every hope or confidence he had in it. He confesses that the same instinct that told him "Within the Law" would be the greatest dramatic success of its time inspired him to select "Under Cover" for production. Not only is "Arch" Selwyn a safe judge of plays, but he is equally dependable in picking players. It would be hard to imagine any other actor than William Courtenay heading the cast of "Under Cover"—it almost seems as if the part might have been written especially for him. And Lily Cahill, although new to big and important roles, fits into the scheme of things in "Under Cover" in a fashion that makes the play distinctly human in its appeal. Mr. Selwyn might, with justice to himself, rest upon the laurels he has already earned as a producer, but he declares he has only just begun.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

LITERARY NOTE—Charles Bradford, press representative for "The Wedding Journey," which comes to the Shubert next week, is the author of a book called "Game Laws I Have Broken."

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

WITH the coming week the Boston Theatre passes from the management of Charles Frohman and William Harris to B. F. Keith. The famous old theatre slips into Mr. Keith's lap because he owns the property. The leasing of this house by the present representatives five years ago was supposed to be the final barrier that would check the progress of the Shuberts in this city, for at that time a healthy young war existed between the rival theatrical combinations. The Boston Theatre, however, proved a rather unwieldly weapon, and when the bloodless strife ended a year ago it was conceded on all sides that the Boston Theatre would be dropped at the expiration of the Frohman and Harris lease. But the Boston Theatre will remain on the list of live playhouses, and to give it a fresh start under the Keith management that good old rural drama, "Way Down East," will begin operations tomorrow at popular prices. As a theatre of popular prices the Boston should have many seasons of prosperity. Few houses in the country are better or more favorably known in their own territory. For many years it was the foremost playhouse in the city, and it has never lost its attractiveness to out-of-town patrons. William A. Brady promises a substantial production of "Way Down East," with a cast that will compare favorably with any that has ever worked in its historic scenes. Of the few old plays that are still on the road, "Way Down East" runs a close race with "Ben Hur" for first honors. Both have made fortunes for their producers, and both are still living on a very active public demand for their performances.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

SCANDAL NOTE—Lawrence J. Anhalt, manager and chief booster for Annie Russell, was the fire reporter on the Elmira (N. Y.) Poultry Journal twelve years ago.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

REALISM in the drama, in so far as it applies to mechanical devices, reaches the limit of man's ingenuity in "The Argyle Case," in which Robert Hilliard turns the dictograph into almost practical service. Mr. Hilliard has two dictographs, both of which were loaned to him by K. M. Turner, the inventor. One of these he uses as a stage "prop," and the other is displayed in the lobby at the Park Theatre as bait for curious eyes. Thousands of passers-by stop at the entrance of the Park every day to gaze at the dictograph which secured the evidence that resulted in the conviction of nearly forty defendants at Indianapolis upon charges of conspiracy in the famous McNamara dynamiting plot. It was through the friendship of William J. Burns, the detective, and Mr. Turner, the inventor of the dictograph, that Mr. Hilliard was loaned an instrument that had a thrilling record of actual service in crime detection. And as you watch the crowds study the exhibit do not be surprised if you are forced to the conclusion that human nature is pretty much the same the world over—that it is just as easy to collect a crowd in Boston as it is in Ypsilanti, Mich.

❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

STATISTICAL NOTE—During the five weeks that "Traffic in Souls" has been at the Globe the film has been run 190 miles. Each show has about 6,500 feet, and there are five runs each day.

BILLS AT THE PLAYHOUSES

Hollis Street Theatre.

Miss Annie Russell will bring her comedy company to the Hollis tomorrow night for an engagement of two weeks, presenting the master works of English comedy, a task she set for herself two seasons ago and which she has brought to a successful issue in this permanent organization of her old English comedy company. The engagement, which opens at the Hollis tomorrow night, will include two of the merriest plays of all time, Richard Brinsley Sheridan's satiric comedy, "The School for Scandal" which will be played all the first week, and Oliver Goldsmith's glowing comedy of youth and manners, "She Stoops to Conquer," which will be played during the second and final week.

Miss Russell has put her most ambitious efforts forward in the production of "The School for Scandal," which has just been added to her repertoire.

Majestic Theatre.

"Prunella," which Winthrop Ames brings to the Majestic for a two weeks' engagement, commencing tomorrow, is described as "a fantasy with music." Operatic in the fullness of its musical accompaniment, it is not classed as opera, and although founded on pantomime form it is not a pantomime. It is fantasy of which the music is as much a part as is the blending of poetry and sentiment, symbolism and quaint realism. Prunella is a little maid who has been living primly under the guidance of three aunts. The hedges of the garden are so high that the outside world is shut from her sight. One day, however, she gets a peep at it and then comes love with its joys and many sorrows, all leading to a happy termination. Marguerite Clark appears in the title role.

Boston Theatre.

Playgoers are familiar with the story and characters of "Way Down East," which comes to the Boston Theatre tomorrow. "Way Down East" has been presented in almost every city and town in the United States and Canada during the past nineteen years, and in presenting the play again this season, Mr. Brady, the producer, is only complying with the demand universally made, and in keeping with his usual custom he has provided the same competent cast and elaborate production. The success which has attended this rural drama would have been of a phenomenal nature under any circumstances, but considering the number of years the piece has been continually before the public, it is really astonishing.

Plymouth Theatre.

So great has been the success of "Under Cover" at the Plymouth Theatre that arrangements have been made to prolong the engagement. Since the opening performance, seven weeks ago, this new drama, dealing in its thrilling way with smuggled gems, love, intrigue, adventure and mystery, has appealed strongly to the interest of all classes of theatre-goers.

Shubert Theatre.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson begins his second week of his farewell Boston engagement at the Shubert Theatre tomorrow night with a special revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," which will be repeated on Tuesday night. The entire third act, which was omitted on the first production of the play in this city, will be given at this time. "Merchant of Venice" will be seen at the matinee on Wednesday and "The Light That Failed" on Wednesday night. "Hamlet" will be given on Thursday and Saturday nights and "Mice and Men" on Friday. "Passing of the Third Floor Back" will be presented Saturday matinee.

Owing to the enormous demand for seats, which the management has been unable to fill for Forbes-Robertson's engagement, Forbes-Robertson has arranged to extend his Boston visit to a third week, which will positively be the last of his farewell Boston season. This extension was made possible by the cancellation of time at Norfolk and Richmond, while he has also cancelled Albany and Rochester in order to visit Providence and New Haven following the close of his engagement in Boston.

Captain Scott Pictures.

A view of the South Pole. Just as it appeared to Captain Robert Falcon Scott and his four immortal comrades, is shown at Tremont Temple in the motion pictures known as "The Undying Story of Captain Scott." These motion pictures, which were taken by Herbert G. Ponting, follow the intrepid explorers through all the most perilous and interesting adventures of their daily life in the Polar regions, almost to the South Pole itself, of which "still" views are shown.

PARENTS An incident dealt in this play will cause you to wonder if you know all about all of your daughter's men friends. You should know!

In the early scenes of this play you may have seen it or read parts of its story, doubtless you did, for the words of author's delight "Those things might have happened in a big, wicked city like New York." But the last act of the adoration of the little model story girl, the cunning scheme to entrap the repentant girl by an organization of men of high and low social standing, has in action form anticipated newspaper reports of just such cases, just such as we take right at home.

Almost daily you can read a later using news article that reads like an excerpt from story of this play. That's why "Traffic in Souls" starts its 151st to 180th performances Tomorrow. It is of vital and timely interest.

WHY PLAYERS SHOULD RETIRE FROM THE STAGE

Forbes-Robertson Really Star Is Out to Tell All About It.

By FORBES ROBERTSON.

You ask me "When should actors retire from the stage—and why?" Well, one might [illegible] adopt or reject at the words [illegible] "Night" [illegible] retire- [illegible] retirement [illegible] even in [illegible] early stages of [illegible]

[illegible] from I might [illegible] addition to my [illegible] in the former [illegible] did suggest that [illegible] service on the [illegible] allowed to retire [illegible] not able to enjoy the [illegible] home life, for to me [illegible] I family are fre- [illegible] greatest sacrifice an [illegible] take in the pursuit of [illegible] hazardous calling [illegible] is a word I have al- [illegible] ished as applied to art of [illegible]

I [illegible] that an actor, like a [illegible] or indeed a man in any walk of life, should retire at the zenith of his powers, before his natural energies are abated and [illegible] fires of his ambition and [illegible] are burned low, [illegible] the battlefield of life to the younger generation, that is, of course, if he is in a position to do so, according to the demands of those dependent upon him.

It is one of the greatest tragedies in an actor's life that he is often forced to shoulder his pack and sometimes "lag superfluous on the stage" long after his work in other vineyards would have earned for him an honorable retirement in competence, if not luxury, for the rest of his days.

Names of great actors, some long since dead, and others not so long ago, as, for instance, Irving, spring to the memory in this connection, and I cannot but recall that it was he who first put me in the way of getting my first fair balance so far as the credit account was concerned.

It was in a day when Irving was playing Benedick and Ellen Terry as Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing," at the Lyceum, London, where I was playing Claudio in the production. But I [illegible] it was my [illegible] that I owe [illegible] count. Irving [illegible] to paint his [illegible] a wee one. He [illegible] proposed me $750 to do [illegible] and I was a [illegible] love in any event. It was [illegible] reason, no doubt, that I [illegible] canvas and picture [illegible] than he had anticipated with the result that the [illegible] for handing me a check [illegible] the amount promised, [illegible] $1,500, when the commission was completed. I returned [illegible] check twice, but Irving was [illegible] even in his generosity, [illegible] would have his way.

It is a great pleasure and satisfaction for me to think that my painting, which was purchased at the Irving sale by Mr. McFadden of Philadelphia, has been thought worthy of a place of honor in the Players' Club, which immortalizes the memory of that great actor, Edwin Booth, in New York.

Speaight Recitals.

Frank Speaight, who is called England's greatest interpreter of Dickens, will make his first appearance in Boston at Steinert Hall on the Tuesday evenings in February. His recitals are really dramatizations. No costume or makeup is used and by means of expression alone, Mr. Speaight is able to actually make you see the many characters he introduces. Mr. Speaight's first program, on next Tuesday evening, will be taken from "Pickwick," and deals with the story of the Bardell-Pickwick lawsuit, ending in the famous trial scene itself.

IN THE GREENROOM.

Of course you have actual facts regarding [illegible] in the Antarctic be [illegible] your South Pole pictures [illegible] flag by poring over all the [illegible] books which have ever been [illegible] Hess is a live and accurate record of [illegible] things as they actually [illegible] Peary [illegible] there is not a moment during the [illegible] two-hour entertainment that one [illegible] is not held of one's faculties aroused. The penguins of that [illegible] stupid are certainly the most amusing birds in the world. They alone would be sufficient to justify one's act [illegible] at this unusual entertainment.

Coming Events.

"The Wedding Night" will be the attraction to follow Forbes-Robertson at the Shubert Theatre.

"The New Henrietta," with William H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks and Amelia Bingham will come to the Hollis February 16.

"The Prodigal" will be the next attraction at the Hollis.

"The Doll Girl" with Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, will come to the Colonial next week.

One of the most famous of Drury Lane dramas, "The Great Ruby," will be given by John Craig at the Castle Square during the week of February 9.

Margaret Anglin will be the next star to visit the new Cort Theatre. She will appear in a Shakespearian revival.

DOROTHY QUINETTE IN "OH! OH! DELPHINE" AT THE COLONIAL.

PLAY BILLS

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

One of the most important features of the season at B. F. Keith's Theatre is announced for next week in the production of the dramatization of Irvin Cobb's successful story, entitled Sergeant Bagby. This play in one act is one of the best track of vaudeville productions. It is based upon the story of three Civil War veterans, two Confederates and one G. A. R., who meet in New Orleans by accident after the war on the occasion of a Confederate reunion.

Edwin Stevens will appear in his musical dramatic travesty, "The Troubles of H. and J." assisted by Miss Tina Marshall, and other features will be the Murray Sisters, Marion and Antonia, in new stories; Bowman Brothers, the Blue Grass boys, Sammy Burns and Alice Fulton in terpsichorean specialties; Three Alex, sensational equilibrists, and Leona Stephens in her novel songologue.

Globe Theatre.

With an added interest because of the recent widespread newspaper comment on several reports concerning the "White Slave" traffic, especially startling in New England, the photo drama, "Traffic in Souls," will begin the sixth week of its remarkable run at the Globe tomorrow. In this play of city night life one can gain an insight into the operations of the white slavers.

Tremont Theatre.

Boston theatregoers have experienced a decided enjoyment in "Years of Discretion," the Belasco comedy now [illegible] at the Tremont Theatre and which is about to enter upon the third week of one of the most prosperous [illegible] in the history of that house. [illegible] is admirably [illegible] usual excellence.

Park Theatre.

The [illegible] ods of Robert Hilliard as a real detective in "The Argyle Case" are followed with unabated interest by crowded houses at the Park Theatre, where the ingenious [illegible] [illegible] and stirring suspense is starting its third week tomorrow night.

Cort Theatre.

That Philip Bartholomae musical play, "When Dreams Come True," enters upon its third week at the Cort Theatre tomorrow night, and from present indications it is here for an indefinite engagement. Now that Joseph Santley has added his latest dance creation "The Aviation Waltz," the variety of terpsichorean feats has been extended.

Colonial Theatre.

The [illegible] week of the engagement at Night" Delphine" at the Colonial Theatre is announced. The whole piece is a revel of fun and melody from start to finish, and seldom has the combination of real comedy and sterling popular music been so successfully achieved as in this production.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Broadway Girls" company, which will begin a week's engagement at the Gaiety Theatre tomorrow has taken a firm hold upon the affections of the amusement seekers, for the reason of its many sided claims of superiority of construction. With a well-developed plot to guide the action of its manifold merriment, it is reputed to possess such novelty of scenes and incidents as would naturally enhance the value of its character as an entertainment out of the ordinary.

"Within the Law."

Great preparations are being made for the initial performance of "Within the Law," which comes to the Majestic Theatre February 16. Jane Cowl and the original company, who are still in New York, where they have been appearing in this phenomenal success for the past two years, will be accompanied to this city by Selwyn & Co., the producers of the play, who have arranged to move their executive staffs to Boston to look after the interests of "Within the Law" and "Under Cover," both of which plays are owned by the same concern.

Castle Square Theatre.

William Gillette's fame has come to him both as playwright and actor. In "All the Comforts of Home," which John Craig will produce at the Castle Square on Monday, Mr. Gillette is at his humorous best. Like "Charley's Aunt," it was written to create continuous laughter, and it succeeds ably in its purpose. It keeps the audience in a merry mood. The two leading roles will be acted at the Castle Square by Mr. Carleton and Miss Olsson, and the humors of the play will also be contributed by Donald Meek, Walter Walker, Frederic Ormonde, Al Roberts, Mabel Colcord and Florence Shirley. "All the Comforts of Home" will be seen on the Castle Square stage only one week.

National Theatre.

Jesse L. Lasky will present his farce comedy, "The Rest Cure," at the National this week. In the cast are eleven of the most capable entertainers. The scene is laid in the spring room of a private sanitarium and the playlet is replete with musical numbers. The Kathryn Purnell players, in that bright comedy playlet, "A Double Deception," will present a laughable sketch, with Miss Purnell showing to her best advantage. The Purnell players have just returned from a successful six weeks in New York. The Cavana Duo is a recent importation for the National Theatre, coming direct from the Apollo Theatre in Vienna, where the performance was considered a distinct novelty. Frank Alzardi and Sadie Stone who claim to be the champion tango dancers of New England, will be another feature of the bill.

Grand Opera House.

At the Grand Opera House the coming week will be viewed the burlesque organization known as "The Honey Girls." The management will also present a photo drama, "Traffic in White Slaves."

Howard Athenaeum.

Cora Livingston will be at the Howard Athenaeum this week ready to meet any wrestler of her own sex. She claims to be the real champion and stands ready to defend her title. The burlesque attraction will be "A Trip to Paris," with pretty girls and smart costumes.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The White Slaves of Paris," a photo drama, will entertain the patrons of the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. There will also be vaudeville.

St. James Theatre.

Featuring the big show at the St James Theatre tomorrow will be Zara and her trained leopards in an unusual novelty, "A Night in Jungleland." This is the first time this act has ever been presented to the Boston patrons.

Orpheum Theatre.

A splendid bill of vaudeville's best features will be presented at the Orpheum Theatre this week, headed by Eddie Heron and company, in a comedy sketch entitled, "Birds of a Feather." Heading the show for the last half of the week will be Zara and her trained leopards.

Waldron's Casino.

For the coming week at the Casino Theatre, "The Girls from Starland," with Will J. Kennedy, will be the attraction.

Surprised You, Didn't We?
You never dreamed that hidden in the simple announcement that the motion picture of Captain Robert Falcon Scott's South Pole Expedition was being brought to you here was contained the promise of a rare visual, intellectual and inspiratory treat.
Yet no great star nor dramatic offering was ever accorded the close attention, the appreciative applause, the unstinted praise that crowded houses are giving these truly marvelous pictures.
And no wonder, for they tell vividly the tremendous tale of human adventure, as Lord Curzon of Kedleston styled
"The Undying Story of Captain Scott."

FAMOUS SNOW IN 'WAY DOWN EAST'

For Nineteen Years It Has Been a Marvel to the Theatre-goers.

When "Way Down East" was produced at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, nineteen years ago, one of the effects that attracted attention was the snow storm in the third act. The same snow storm is still a big feature of the play. The snow is seen through a wide, deep set window in the kitchen of Squire Bartlett's farm house. It drives against the windows, and when the door is opened the white flakes fill the opening, being apparently driven by the wind. From the view point of the audience the whole thing is natural and simple, but as a fact the snow storm requires much care, costly machinery and many stage employes. The snow is dropped from a long cradle, swung in the flies and perforated like a sieve. To prevent the snow from falling directly on the stage two steel frames, each containing two powerful fans and perforated revolving cylinders filled with sand, drive the snow obliquely across the window and the door. The sand and the wind machine give the sounds incident to a storm. The snow is purchased in one hundred-pound lots and it can be used a number of times, but has to be sieved in order to eliminate the dirt that it picks up.

For weeks after "Way Down East" leaves a theatre bunches of snow will be found on drops, or will fall on the heads of actors at unexpected moments.

Scollay Square Olympia.

Another unusually strong bill with characteristic this week's program at Gordon & Lord's new Scollay Square Olympia. "High Life in Jail," with W. H. (Bill) Mack, is the title of a very funny skit; Carrollwood's big musical offering is made up of seven trained musicians, and another big act is the "Pekin Zouaves," comprising thirteen people, in a thrilling demonstration of wall scaling and drill corps.

Musicians' Concert.

Judging from the advance sale of tickets, unusual interest is being manifested by the music lovers of New England in the mammoth band concert which will be given in Mechanics Building this evening under the auspices of the Musicians' Mutual Relief Society of Boston. Fully 400 musicians, comprising the largest military band in the world, will participate in this tremendous undertaking, and as a special feature a grand musical finale, which will afford a great treat for music lovers, will be given by ten military bands and as many military drum organizations. This great international spectacular number, called "Under One Flag," will be under the able direction of John M. Flockton, the veteran leader, who has been selected to conduct this number, from one of the six famous bandmasters who will conduct various numbers of the mammoth program.

News of Society By The Chaperone

THOUGH the debutante season has practically ended and the buds are pining with ennui these days while their young Harvard gallants are plugging away for their mid-year's exams, there are still a few smart events left for them on the calendar. Among the more important ones will be the large dinner which Mrs. Charles E. Perkins of Commonwealth avenue is planning to give at the Algonquin Club, February 10, in honor of her pretty granddaughter, Miss Edith Perkins. This is the second dinner which Mrs. Perkins has given for her granddaughter, the first having been given at the Algonquin Club in November.

ON the same evening Mrs. Augustus Thorndike is giving a dinner dance at her Clarendon street home in honor of Miss Alice Thorndike, the popular young secretary of the 1914 Sewing Circle. Miss Thorndike, who recently entertained the members of the Sewing Circle at luncheon at her home, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Thorndike by whom she was introduced at a tea at their Commonwealth avenue home in November. She was later given a ball at the Copley-Plaza.

AMONG the leading events of the Lenten season will be the costume ball at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday, March 19, for the benefit of the Free Hospital for Women. It will be a decidedly smart affair, as was the costume ball last Winter given for the same cause.

Mrs. George Richmond Fearing, Jr., Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth and Percy Haughton are to [illegible] ...icers, as they were [illegible] last year the ball [illegible].

Mrs. Fearing and Mrs. Hollingsworth [illegible] two ideal women for this work, as both have pleasing personalities, are young and exceptionally good to look upon. I saw Mrs. Fearing at an evening [illegible] recently when she was certainly [illegible]. She wore a gown of [illegible] chiffon done with silver embroidered net and touches of black which made a most striking foil for her pretty Titian coloring.

Among the prominent buds of the Winter is pretty Martha Thorndike, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Thorndike of Marlboro street. Miss Thorndike was among the very first of the girls to be introduced and ever since the dinner dance which her parents gave in her honor, upon which occasion she was presented, she has been among the most popular of the girls in her set. She is a member of the 1914 Sewing Circle and will without doubt immediately be taken into the Vincent Club, where her talents may be shown to advantage.

She is the sister of Miss Anna Thorndike, who is still in school and her young brother is William T. Thorndike.

The World of Society

THE [illegible] been considered an especially favorable month for weddings, one of the important nuptials of Boston society is announced for the [illegible] Miss [illegible] daughter of Mrs. [illegible] has issued invitations for the wedding on the 12th inst. of her daughter, Miss Ellen Hoar, to Stephenson Carpenter Pepper. The ceremony will take place in the afternoon at 4 o'clock in the First Parish church in Concord.

Miss Hoar's engagement to Mr. Pepper was announced in the latter part of last March. Miss Hoar is a granddaughter of the late Hon. Samuel Hoar, who was at one time United States Attorney-General.

Miss Hoar's brother, Roger Sherman Hoar, married Miss Elva Stuart Cross of Boston as the result of a romance which took place last June.

Mr. Pepper, who lives in Concord, is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hovey Pepper, of that town, where they have a wonderfully attractive home. Mr. Pepper is a Harvard '13 man.

THE three performances to be given of the interesting play, "About Town," are attracting widespread interest, both from the fact that the play itself is beautiful and the charity for which it is given—the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children—is worthy.

Several of the prominent girls of society are to serve as ushers for the performances on February 11, including Miss Grace Lockwood, Miss Elsie Burr, Miss Lucy Aspinwall, Miss Theresa Weld, Miss Elsie Lawrence, Miss Frances Webster, Miss Alice Dudley, Miss Henry and Miss Helen Winsor.

Thursday afternoon, February 12, the ushers will be subscription under the leadership of Miss Olivia Lowell and Miss Nora Fiske. They are the Misses Ruth Paine, Mary Burr, Agnes Grew, Alexandra Van Rensselaer, daughter of Mrs. William McKee, and Margaret and Eleanor Greenwood.

The subscription ball at Whitney Hall, Brookline, Friday evening, for the younger married people of Brookline and the Back Bay was a wonderful success. The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. Paul Burdett, Mrs. F. Reed Stearns, Mrs. Joseph F. Hoyt, Mrs. Samuel H. Pillsbury, Mrs. Ralph L. Pope, Mrs. Stanley Talbot and Dr. John B. Wheeler, assisted by Miss Elsie Page. The ushers were Prescott Bigelow, Jr., Malcolm Bullivant, Paul Burdett, Payson Dana, Benjamine W. Dana, Wallace G. Pass, Curtis Plummer, Ralph L. Pope, Theodore Richards, H. Stanley Talbot and John B. E. Wheeler.

THE lure of the South is so strong these days that the fashionables are now waiting for Lent before migrating, and already a goodly number are settled in some of the popular Southern resorts for a several weeks sojourn. Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Jackson of Cambridge have recently joined the select little colony at Nassau.

MR. and Mrs. Benjamine F. Keith are at Miami, having made the trip from Washington on their houseboat Hildebrat. The Keiths have a beautiful villa at Miami and will stay on there indefinitely.

MISS MIRIAM GOULD, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs. George L. Gould of Malden, who have an attractive Summer residence at Topsfield, "Pinelands," has left town for a trip to Southern California. She will be away from home until early in April and will spend much of her time in Pasadena, later going north to San Francisco. Miss Gould may be induced much abroad and in the far Northwest.

AMONG the recent arrivals at Palm Beach are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Ahl, who also spent last season at that favored resort; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lee Whitman, who have a beautiful country estate at Hamilton and who are leaders in that exclusive little colony; Mrs. Charles Archbald Mudge of Beacon street and Mrs. Charles F. Choate who has remained late at her beautiful estate, Southbrook, which the late Gerard Hement of the Beverly Farms colony. Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Gardner are also late arrivals at that resort.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BOHLEN and their family of "Tigglesworth" branch, have gone to Aiken, South Carolina, where they will be for the next three months.

IREAL there is some splendid music promised for the second of the at-homes which Mr. and Mrs. Stephen M. Townsend are giving in the small ballroom of the Copley-Plaza, where they are making their home this Winter.

ON Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Roger Burnham gave the last of their Sunday at-homes which abound on Boylston street.

On February 17 Mrs. John R. Alley and her daughter, Miss Mathilda Alley, are leaving town for an extended visit in California.

Marian Blackall, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Blackall of Cambridge, who is to be the bride of Hans W. Miller

MR AND MRS CLARENCE H BLACKALL, of 16 Chauncy street, Cambridge, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Marian, to Hans W. Miller of New York and Boston. Miss Blackall was graduated from Radcliffe in 1912, and at present is interested in social service work. She is a college she was a leader in theatricals and a member of many societies.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of Harvard, class of '13. He is connected with a metal concern in Boston. While at Harvard he was president of the Dramatic Club, also a member of many fraternities. Mr. Blackall, the girl's father, is the well known Boston architect.

In the World of Society

THE concert which Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers gave Tuesday afternoon at Steinert Hall netted a nice little sum for the South End Industrial School. It was given under the auspices of the First Church Club and the Jubilee Chapel Club. The small hall was well filled with fashionables and the attractive array of ushers, under the leadership of Miss Mary Vaughan, one time president of the Harvard Club, was dressed alike in white and kept extremely busy. Nearly all the women who gave their names as patronesses were among those present.

Among them were Mrs. William W. Vaughan, mother of Miss Mary Vaughan, in black with black hat and black furs, Mrs. William C. Williamson, in dark blue cloth; Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, Mrs. J. C. Whitney, Mrs. Grant Walker, Mrs. Alice F. Whitney, Miss M. L. Ware, in dark gray cloth trimmed with fur; Mrs. C. F. Turnbull, Mrs. James P. Tolman, Mrs. Albert Thorndike, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, in black; Mrs. John J. Thomas, Mrs. Frederick H. Tappan, Miss Alice F. Tapley, Mrs. T. R. Sullivan, Mrs. Sidney Snow, Miss Abby Storer, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Mrs. Arthur A. Shurtleff, Mrs. Charles Simmons, Mrs. William Simes, Mrs. Robert G. Shaw, Miss Emily Shepard, the Misses Sears, Mrs. Robert Saltonstall, Mrs. F. W. Sargent, the Misses Rogers, Mrs. Moses H. Rogers, Mrs. Maurice Richardson, in black with black hat and sealskin scarf; Mrs. Thomas Gerard Rement of the Beverly Farms colony, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Gardner are also late arrivals at that resort.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BOHLEN and their family of "Tigglesworth" branch, have gone to Aiken, South Carolina, where they will be for the next three months.

IREAL there is some splendid music promised for the second of the at-homes which Mr. and Mrs. Stephen M. Townsend are giving in the small ballroom of the Copley-Plaza, where they are making their home this Winter.

ON Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Roger Burnham gave the last of their Sunday at-homes which abound on Boylston street.

On February 17 Mrs. John R. Alley and her daughter, Miss Mathilda Alley, are leaving town for an extended visit in California.

S. Parkman Blake, Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake, Mrs. Arthur T. Bradlee, Mrs. John T. Bradlee, Mrs. Sarah Bradlee, Mrs. E. H. Bradford, Mrs. Howard B. Brown, Mrs. W. H. Burden, Mrs. John A. Burnham, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mrs. David Cheever, Miss Helen Collamore, Mrs. J. T. Coolidge, the Misses Cordner, Mrs. H. G. O. Colby, Mrs. Charles A. Cummings, Mrs. C. S. Curtis and Mrs. Lincoln Davis.

FOR the large concert in aid of the Mount Pleasant Home, which was held last evening in the large ballroom of the Copley Plaza the following women were patronesses: Mrs. Edgar M. Young, Mrs. Fred M. Lamson, Mrs. Orren Sanborn, Mrs. Joseph Kemick, Mrs. Carrie A. Paul, Mrs. William H. Forson, Miss Caroline L. W. Prauch, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, Mrs. Frederick Barbour, Mrs. Frederick L. Emery, Mrs. Galen Stone, Mrs. John C. F. Slayton, Mrs. Noble Foss, Mrs. Frank L. Young, Mrs. James A. Neal, Mrs. Robert W. Williamson, Mrs. Charles I. Travelli, Mrs. Royal Wilbur, Mrs. George L. Ferin, Mrs. Clarence A. Vincent, Mrs. Arthur H. Merritt, Mrs. Alice F. Bates, Mrs. Walter J. Grimes, Mrs. Horace H. Jacobs, Mrs. Irving H. Upton, Mrs. Charles H. Bond, Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulliken and Mrs. George Winslow Perkins.

The concert was arranged by the Jubilee Choral Club, Mrs. Edgar M. Young, president. The program included numbers by the Tenth Coast Artillery Band. The assisting artists were Mrs. Helen Allen Hunt, soprano, John Thomas, humorist, and Miss Katherine Mason Hayes and Miss Gertrude Adelle Jones.

AT the seventy-seventh annual sale of the Ladies' Missionary Sewing Society of Trinity Church, held in the Parish House all day Thursday and continued Friday afternoon among the prominent women who served at the tables were: Mrs. John H. Storer, Mrs. George E. Crocker, Jr., Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin, Mrs. J. Dudley Clarke, Mrs. Sarah Bremer, Mrs. George D. Shepley, Mrs. Charles G. Weld, Mrs. J. R. Perry, Miss Mary Amory, Miss Josephine Bradlee, the Misses Hayden and Miss Emily Storer.

THE only dance of any importance during the week was that which Mrs. Eben Caldwell Stanwood gave Friday night from 9 until 1:30 o'clock at the Tuileries in honor of her younger daughter, Miss Faith Stanwood, whose sixteenth birthday will occur during Lent.

Only the young girls who will be sister debutantes of Miss Stanwood two or three Winters hence and their young cavaliers were among the guests.

At The Opera of the Week

SELDOM has a more gorgeously arrayed set of fashionables filled the Opera House this season than fluttered and gossiped and promenaded themselves there Wednesday night when the second performance of "The Meistersinger" was given.

It seemed more like the early days of opera in Boston, when everyone wore a new gown and all the boxes and seats were filled.

The promenade was quite the liveliest of any this season, as the opera being long, all were glad to walk about for a while, and the recently established rule made by the fashionables that they would remain in their boxes and let the element not quite so fashionable have the foyer to themselves was forgotten, and once more all classes of music-lovers touched elbows and gazed upon one another as they passed, just as they did before the foyer became the "peacock parade."

By far the handsomest matron in the lower tier of boxes was Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, who wore a stunning gown of white satin with chiffon embroidered in gold and a large cluster of pink roses on the corsage and a large white aigrette in her well-done coiffure.

The Hunnewell box was most attractive. Mrs. Hunnewell entertained a party of [illegible] friends, including her daughter, Mrs. Nelson A. Bartlett, Jr., (Christina Hunnewell) who was most attractive in cream lace with satin. Mrs. Hunnewell wore black velvet trimmed with black chiffon, the only touch of color being given by the pink rose worn on the corsage.

Mrs. Samuel J. Elder, who was a guest in the William A. Gaston box, was in white satin draped with [illegible] blue and white chiffon, and a touch of black velvet on the corsage.

Mrs. Gaston was in black velvet trimmed with jetted lace and a large red rose on the corsage.

Mrs. John Lawrence was in black satin and Mrs. Winthrop Sargent wore black velvet with white silvered net on the corsage and Mr. and Mrs. E. Peabody was in pale blue satin and lace.

Mrs. Charles R. Hayden was in black and white brocaded velvet with a red rose on the corsage, and L. G. Burnham, who entertained in a box near by, was in black velvet with cloth of silver trimming.

Mrs. George A. Draper entertained several guests in her box and was looking especially well in white brocaded velvet and diamonds.

Though opera began at 7 and most of the fashionables arrived late, Mrs. John L. Gardner was in her box several moments before the rising of the curtain. She was distinguished in a gown of black satin with a band of black velvet studded with diamonds circling her coiffure, and a black plume sticking up on the side. She also wore a black velvet necklace studded with diamonds.

Among the very handsomest of the younger girls present was Miss Margaret Thomas, who was a guest in the Charles G. Weld box and who wore a stunning gown of cream and silver brocade with upper corsage of white chiffon and the decolletege, outlined with bands of silver.

Mrs. Timothee Adamowski was in black satin and black chiffon and was one of the most enthusiastic of the women present.

Mrs. William Spence was one of the younger matrons there and was especially pretty and attractive in a gown of pale yellow satin trimmed with tiny roulade and chiffon of the same shade.

Mrs. Stanley P. Clemens was one of the handsomest matrons there and wore a wonderfully beautiful gown of brocaded cherry velvet and cream lace.

Mrs. Mary Parkman, who is quite the tallest girl of her set, was in dark pink satin and chiffon mikaret surged with fur.

Miss Clara Endicott Sears was among the diamond crowned beauty maids present and wore a stunning gown of white satin draped with black chiffon and a girdle and sash of cerise satin.

Mrs. Henry Quincy Adams was in gold embroidered lace over white satin and Miss Helen Adams was in black satin and black lace and diamonds.

Mrs. Alexander Abbott, who was among the attractive matrons occupying boxes, was especially handsome in a gown of cream satin and silvered net.

Mrs. Henry Endicott, whose striking blonde beauty always makes her an attractive figure, was in gown of lavender satin and chiffon with trimmings of fur.

I HEAR that Mr. and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan asked a few intimates to see a new painting added to their wealth of art in their town house on Beacon street the other day. It is the lifesize portrait of Ruth St. Dennis the well-known dancer, by Kaulbach. Mr. Jordan, I hear, has hung it in the large main hall just outside the dining-room door. It represents the dancer seated and holding a lotus flower in her hand, which she is blowing.

Gowns and Gems Society Wearing

MRS. EDWIN S. WEBSTER, who has come into such prominence this Winter as a hostess, has been also making a record for handsome gowning. Mrs. Webster's daughter, Miss Frances, is one of the prominent buds of the year, and her mother has been giving any number of smart affairs in her honor. She has been wearing some especially pretty frocks, also, one in which I saw her recently being of white charmeuse with drapery of white chiffon embroidered in gold butterflies, the chiffon made in minaret fashion and edged with fur.

On that same occasion Mrs. Webster was wearing a beautiful gown of black velvet, the upper corsage of white net embroidered in silver and brilliants, and worn with a wonderful necklace of diamonds. The latest of Mrs. Webster's hospitalities was the dinner dance which she gave last week at her Clarendon street home for the interesting girl, Miss Edith McHenry of Baltimore, who for some time has been a guest in Boston.

I HAPPENED to see Mrs. Richard Dixey the other day alighting from her limousine in front of her door at her Beacon street house, when she looked especially pretty gowned in black velvet trimmed in bias bands of black satin, the latter on the skirt and bodice. Her hat was a small one of black satin and velvet [illegible] (chantilly brownes) [illegible] with a touch of white [illegible]. She wore a small neckpiece of chinchilla fur, which also formed her large barrel muff.

I SAW Mrs. Rodolphe Agassiz the other day dancing with Mr. Guy Norman when at the Copley-Plaza dansant and it seemed to me she must have been very near suffocation, as she danced nearly every dance with her Winter coat on. Not until in the middle of the music talked-of tango did she "shed" her coat. Mrs. Boylston Beal, I thought, had even more courage than Mrs. Agassiz, as she danced with her furs on.

I CAUGHT a glimpse of Mrs. Gordon Abbott of Beacon street the other day coming across the street to her home after lunching at the Chilton Club, and she was looking especially smart. Her gown and hat as to combination of color was most unusual, but extremely effective. The gown was of dark-blue satin charmeuse, the skirt of which was done in the fetlple draped effect so popular this season, and the skirt finished in bias bands of the same. The coat was of the same material and had wide revers of the satin combined with a deep shade of blue. Her hat was a small [illegible] dark-blue satin and French felt, trimmed with high bows and ends of blue. Her furs were those of the long stole of sealskin having a stripe of the sable running through the centre of it, and her muff was of the satin with the sable bands edging it. She wore a remarkably dainty pair of shoes and silk hosiery which one could not help but observe. The shoes were of patent leather with very high heels and had huge cut-steel buckles.

MISS MARY CURTIS of Marlboro street, who has a great "penchant" for black, which is wonderfully becoming to her wealth of Titian hair and blonde coloring, looked extremely well the other day when I saw her dancing with "Tommy" Curtis at the Copley-Plaza dansant. She was gowned in a dark-green cloth combined effectively with tan-brown silk. It must have been an imported creation, as the colors were peculiarly put together, and brown silk forming a short, wide sash end at the back of the skirt and falling well to the left side. Her small turban was of brown velvet.

I THINK without exception that one of the handsomest wraps I have seen this Winter is that which Mrs. Howard Warren, formerly Miss "Lily" Sears, is wearing. Her wrap walks full nearly to the hem of her gown was of moleskin made up in the plain stitched effect and was very full, being in heavy, loose folds at the back and front, while the collar was of the richest sable in a wide effect as well as the cuffs which reached nearly to the elbow. It had a lining of heavy white satin brocade. Her hat was a small tarsan of black velvet trimmed with a single high black topped aigrette. She carried a large barrel muff of moleskin trimmed in the stripes of the moleskin. Her gown was of heavy black velvet, the skirt of which was absolutely without any trimming and her bodice was a white lace, done on Irish lace.

IT is seldom that one can wear as pronounced a type of head ornaments as Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno. She was by far one of the handsomest of the younger matrons the other evening at a large reception, when in addition to the superb creation of pale pink satin brocade, trimmed elaborately with exquisite lace, she wore in her wealth of black, wavy hair a headdress decidedly on the Mephistophelian effect. It was a narrow band of small diamonds, which was worn well down on her hair, from the front of which radiated two very high pale yellow feathery aigrettes, which oven when Mrs. Fenno was in repose were in constant motion. Her throat jewels were beautiful, as she wore a band of velvet fully an inch or more in width, on which sparkled numerous diamond ornaments, and the velvet was fastened at the back with a diamond clasp and ornament.

I SAW Mrs. "Bobby" Shaw of Newton Centre at the Chilton Club the other night, when she looked especially smart in a gown of black velvet combined with the most exquisite baby lamb. The coat was a short one, trimmed with wide velvet bands, and the skirt finished in a band of velvet, alternating with the baby lamb. She wore with it a small, low-crowned turban of baby lamb, trimmed in black and brown velvet and a lighter shade of brown wings. Her furs were very stunning in the way of sable and seal, combined effectively. The large muff of seal was edged with sable, while the long stole, reaching to her heels, was of sable, with a narrow band of sealskin and finished with sable tails.

IT is seldom that a young person can wear black and retain their youthful looks so well as Miss Dorothy Jordan does. I saw her at an evening reception the other night when she looked no younger than usual if anything, in a gown that many a debutante would easily have worn. It was an imported affair of black tulle, the skirt made very scant and in the hobble effect and accordion plaited to the knees, where a close tunic of the black tulle was edged in a narrow band of cut stones and rhinestone trimming. The bodice had the old-fashioned round neck, finished with a shirred full band of the black tulle, and over her shoulders she wore a scarf of the black tulle, her shirring were long diamond pendants and fell nearly to her shoulders. They were extremely becoming.

Whims and Foibles of the Fashionables

MRS. CHARLES SUMNER BIRD, who is without doubt one of the most attractive appearing matrons in society this Winter, is wearing some wonderfully becoming gowns of lavender. This seems to be her favorite color and no wonder, for the color seems to accentuate her extremely white hair and youthful face most becomingly. Mrs. Bird is opening "Endean," her beautiful Walpole estate, on Friday evening, February 13, for a dance arranged by the young women who are identified with Mrs. Bird's church. It will be a Valentine's eve affair, and there will be numerous features appropriate to the occasion. Mrs. Bird's hospitalities are always crowned with success and it will be very likely this one will be no exception. She will, however, be left in entertaining her two beautiful daughters, Mrs. Robert Bass and Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw. These two attractive young matrons are following closely in the footsteps of their mother and are already looked upon as the leading young hostesses of their respective sets.

COSTUME dances are coming to be decidedly the fad with the younger set who have just outdone themselves in every other line of amusement and now love to busy themselves with the preparation of new and unique costumes with which to surprise their intimates. Some of the younger girls are displaying surprising knowledge of designing and one young girl says that when one runs through having a good time these days to settle down and be a first class designer.

Miss Elizabeth Bennett, one of the most popular of the season's buds, has been attracting much attention in a Highland costume which she designed herself and which she wears most charmingly.

One of the prettiest of the costumes I've seen these young girls wear is the fetching little gown which Sarah Winslow has been wearing and which is made in every way to augment her beauty. She is a dainty miss, anyway, and with her butterfly costume looks most attractive. Pretty Anne Choate as an Oriental maiden makes a decidedly attractive picture and her costume is most gorgeous as well as most picturesque. Miss Ray Blaker is making a hit with her beautifully designed Japanese kimonas and makes the most attractive of Japanese maidens one can imagine.

OF all the Boston women who are figuring conspicuously in Washington society this Winter few are attracting more admiring attention than Mrs. Henry Gardiner, whose [illegible] entertainments come in for an equal share of praises. Mrs. Gardiner, and Miss Frances Lipton, a near resident member of the Chilton Club, are among those who have arranged a series of small dinner dances, the initial of which took place Friday evening, the second and is scheduled for the evening of February 17. Both affairs take place at the home of Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff.

Mrs. Raynal C. Bolling (formerly Anna Phillips of Boston) is figuring prominently in New York affairs this Winter. She is prominent among the several society matrons who have given the ball thus far planned to be given at the new Hotel Baltimore, New York, on February 4 for the benefit of a favorite society charity.

Mrs. William B. Bacon of Lenox, who has been the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Lovering (Elsie Bacon) at their home in Milton, has been the guest of honor at several smart luncheons and dinners during the past week.

The Muscovite Is Society's Latest Entrancing Dance

Miss Pauline Chamberlain of Brookline and Harold Whitney, posed in the nine steps of the new "Muscovite" dance, with which they created a sensation in Boston society circles last week

THE Muscovite straight from Russia only a few days ago has arrived in the midst of Back Bay society folk are wold over it. Of course it is a dance.

It combines the desirable and trancing steps of about all the most popular hits.

Its graceful and wild, lissome and expanding, it demands exercise of about all the muscles of the body; there is never a moment during this complicated Russian maze of steps, turns and whirls when the dancer can permit himself or herself to glide in unforgetfulness.

The honor of introducing the Muscovite belongs solely to a wealthy and fashionable Watertown youth and a debutante of the Brookline set—Harold Whitney of No. 249 Main street, Watertown, and Miss Pauline Chamberlain of No. 366 Bay State road, Brookline.

Mr. Whitney and Miss Chamberlain, the latter a winsome and clever dancer, easily scored a triumph when last week for the first time they appeared at two smart functions and "en costume"—that is, in Russian boots, white cord reaching almost to the knees and Cossack trousers—gave clever performances of their new and unique dance.

The dance somewhat resembles the wild Cossack dance counted among the notable of the Russian Folk dances, though the more exhausting movements, such as the whirling step, where the dancer leaps from one foot in a whirl, turning completely round in the air and then upon coming down takes three quick steps forward, have been somewhat modified to make it possible for partners to complete the movements together.

The photographs of Mr Whitney and Miss Chamberlain in the AMERICAN today give an idea of a number of the different steps in the Muscovite

Since the debut of the dance there has been little else thought of among the younger fash.onable dancing set. Teachers naturally are in the greatest demand, and Miss Chamberlain and Mr. Whitney are being constantly besieged by their society friends to initiate them into the mysteries of the new dance.

Outside a select coterie of friends, however, the pair are unwilling that a detailed description of the dance shall be made known.

"It is an absolutely new dance," declared Mr. Whitney yesterday, "one that promises to rival the best of the present modern dances, and we feel that as it was ours in the beginning, we should have the privilege of keeping it among our friends. We do not wish the dance to be taken up by everyone who feels inclined to try something new. At least, such people will have to learn the steps from teachers, and I can't see how teachers are going to get it, as only Miss Chamberlain and I as yet really know all the movements here

THE PIANO KING

Gives Another Talk on Piano Buying

It's an old-time "trick of salesmanship" for a salesman to try to sell you an article "just as good" for less money. In most cases the buyer gets inferior goods. But in the "piano business" such is not the case. We can sell you pianos for many dollars less than other dealers. This is accounted for in many ways. We have numerous ways of getting pianos besides from the manufacturer, where we would be tied up by contract to sell at a certain price. We have no large, expensive salesrooms, with expensive finishing and electrical displays to pay for. Other dealers have, and you pay for it. We have no salesmen out on the road to increase the expense. We pay CASH for everything and take advantage of all the discounts. All these and many other ways enable us to sell at a very close margin, and when you buy here you pay for "piano only," and not a lot of expenses added. We believe it to be a fact that we sell more pianos than any other dealer in the city. We believe it better business to have "many small profits" than a few large ones. It will pay you to investigate our goods and methods.

This Is Guaranteed to Stop Your Cough

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of [illegible] the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable [illegible] pound of Norway [illegible] extract, and is rich [illegible] other natural healing [illegible] Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The Pinex and Sugar syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. [illegible] in more homes than [illegible] remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex or [illegible] you. If not, send to [illegible] Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Drink Hot Tea For a Bad Cold

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFUL, CHARMING HAIR, NO DANDRUFF---25-CENT DANDERINE

Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair and stops it falling out.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

What Boston Women Are Doing

TO celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the guild of St. Elizabeth the active members of the guild met at a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday. The guild was founded by the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J. At first it was confined to small quarters. Now it occupies a large house on East Springfield street. Besides the regular day nursery for the little children who are cared for, the members of the guild have provided an opportunity for the older members in a family to obtain educational and industrial knowledge. Classes are supervised by excellent teachers. The mothers of the children also are given talks which are helpful and instructive.

The members of the guild voted to send Fr. Gasson a little reminder of the anniversary.

The banquet hall in which the luncheon was served was daintily decorated in pink and green. Charming little place cards were made of pink linen with small pink roses caught together with satin bows.

Among those present at the luncheon were Miss Maud Rockwell, president, black draped charmeuse with jet garnitures and black hat with feathers; Mrs. Warren Hill, vice-president, black voile with tunic of black lace and hat of velvet and tulle; Mrs. Gerald Blake, secretary, brown chiffon, draped velvet, with dainty velvet hat of black with fur; Miss Alice F. Murray, white pleated chiffon and lace with a charming velvet hat; Miss Marie Blake, American beauty panne velvet with duchess lace trimmings, and American Beauty velvet hat; Mrs. Thomas M. Devlin, blue charmeuse and gold lace with hat of black net and velvet; Miss Alice E. Rockwell, black charmeuse and lace with black hat.

Mrs. J. W. Hinkley, lavender chiffon and velvet gown with hat of same tone; Mrs. Mathew Fox, white chiffon and blue velvet, dainty velvet hat trimmed with fur; Mrs. J. H. Carney, black voile with jet garnitures and violet corsage bouquet, with a black hat and feathers; Mrs. Jay R. Benton, black charmeuse with bodice of orange chiffon, and black velvet hat with fur.

Miss Bessie Fitzpatrick, lavender brocaded silk broadcloth with shadow lace bodice and oriental girdle and hat of black velvet; Miss Louise F. FitzGerald, opal silk and lace with charming black hat; Miss Alice O'Mara, brown chiffon velvet and black hat; Miss Alice Durme, lavender chiffon bodice and velvet skirt and hat of velvet and fur; Miss Edwinea McCabe, blue velvet and bodice of lace with blue girdle, with hat of velvet and lace.

Mrs. William Dooley, brown charmeuse with bodice of gold and old rose, and hat of brocaded moire; Miss Ethel Thompson, blue charmeuse and blue velvet hat; Mrs. J. T. O'Brien, black velvet with shadow lace and fur and dark velvet hat; Miss Marie Egan, dark blue pleated crepe with light fox garnitures, and hat of same tone with fur; Miss Mazie Callahan, taupe chiffon and velvet garnitured with fur, and hat of velvet, lone plume; Miss Anna McAloon, gray crepe and white net with black hat, and Miss Marie Carey, blue chiffon and velvet and black Parisian hat.

Mrs. Patrick Barr, secretary of the Wellington Club entertained the members of the club at her home in Roxbury, Tuesday afternoon. The guests of honor included Mrs. Daniel V. McIsaac and Mrs. J. J. Mahoney. The members were glad that Mrs. David Long was able to be with them again, as she has been very ill. A very delightful afternoon was spent in playing whist, at the conclusion of which dainty souvenirs were given to Mrs. James H. Grimes, Mrs. Patrick O'Loughlin and Mrs. William O'Brien. After the distribution of the whist trophies a luncheon was served, the table decorations consisting of pink carnations and asparagus fern.

Miss Katharine Barr, who is a sophomore at Radcliffe, rendered some very beautiful piano selections for her mother's guests. A dinner and theatre party is being planned by the members of the club for Tuesday, February 10. The arrangements are to be under the direction of Mrs. James White, the president, and Mrs. Patrick Barr.

Mrs. James H. Doyle of Roxbury will entertain the Twentieth Century Whist Club on Wednesday afternoon, February 11. The club was entertained by Mrs. Margaret Culhane on Tuesday afternoon. After whist, souvenirs were given to Mrs. David Mahoney, Mrs. Daniel Coleman, Mrs. Frank Lavery and Mrs. Horace Bassett, being the highest scorers. A dainty luncheon was also served.

Friends of Dr. and Mrs. Colin W. Macdonald are very sorry to hear of the illness of their son, "Billie," and hope that he will soon recover.

Cards have been sent out by Miss Elinor McIntosh, niece of Mrs. Joseph E. Doherty of Bay State road, for a social gathering to be held in honor of Miss Alice Cronin of Taunton, at her aunt's home, Friday. Miss McIntosh is very desirous that Miss Cronin will meet some of Boston's charming debutantes and so has arranged it in this manner.

Mrs. Richard A. Lynch, as president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Daly Industrial School, will conduct the monthly matinee whist, which will be held next Saturday in the Daly Industrial School. These monthly whists are one of the most popular whists of the social set and a very large attendance is expected. Beautiful souvenirs are to be given to the highest scorers.

Ms. W. T. A. Fitzgerald was the highest scorer at the Abbotsford Club meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. William Walsh of Milton Tuesday, while Mrs. Frank Rogers and Mrs. Joseph E. Doherty ranked next. These women were awarded beautiful souvenirs. A dainty collation was served at the conclusion of the whist. The next hostess will be Mrs. Benjamin O'Neil of Dorchester.

Mrs. Charles A. Newell proved a charming hostess Monday afternoon, when she entertained the members of the Fortnightly Bridge Club at her home in Dorchester. Mrs. James J. Coleman and Mrs. Thomas J. Daley were the lucky recipients of dainty souvenirs. A collation was served after the bridge. Mrs. John Skinner of Savin Hill will entertain the members at their next meeting.

Mrs. Roger C. Sullivan and her daughter, Virginia, left for their home in Chicago last Tuesday. Miss Sullivan, who was the maid of honor of Mrs. John Coleman Kiley, formerly Miss Bertha O'Connor of Brookline, will visit Boston again in June for the wedding of Miss Mary O'Connell, niece of the Cardinal.

The members of the Chelsea Woman's Guild will be hostesses at a dancing party to be given in St. Rose School Hall tomorrow evening.

A very large attendance is expected to be present at the whist which is to be held in St. Rose Hall Friday evening under the direction of Mrs. George Winston. Mrs. Winston is one of the energetic workers of the St. Vincent Orphan Asylum.

Mrs. W. E. McGerigle is president of the committee in charge of the reunion of the parishioners of St. Leo's parish, which is to be held Monday, February 9, at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury.

After an extended tour through the South Mr. and Mrs. Clifford will make their home in Dorchester.

With new scenic equipment, costumes and added features which shall make the production more impressive and beautiful than ever, "Pilate's Daughter," the Lenten drama written by the Rev. Francis Kenzel, C. SS. R., formerly of the Mission Church, Roxbury, will enter upon its twelfth season when it is presented at St. Alphonsus Hall, Smith street, Roxbury, beginning February 26 and continuing every Monday and Thursday evening during Lent. The final production will be on April 2.

Already the cast has been carefully chosen by the Rev. William V. Knelf, C. SS. R., and rehearsals are well under way. It will be found that several have appeared in the cast in recent years. The players are so carefuly placed that each is especially suited to the role which has been assigned her.

In the sacred drama the roles will be sustained by Miss Edith Doyle as Claudia Proclea, wife of Pilate; Mary Bowen will be Claudia at the age of ten years, while Miss Anna O'Dowd appears in the same role in the remaining acts. The Misses Sadie Lamb and Mary Lynch will appear as the Roman ladies, while the servants in Pilate's house will be the Misses Josephine Lambert, Mary A. Dailey, Mary A. Kelley, Catherine Burke and Susie Davis.

The Misses Marie Guntner, Bertha Murray and Margaret Finn will play the Ghosts, and Miss Mary Birch the difficult role of the Sorceress. The Vestal Virgins are to be the Misses Lucy McKenzie, Joanne Tobin and Lillian Clark. The Christian women will be the Misses Mary Fury and Marie Drew. Miss Anna Crossen appears in the role of Agrippina, wife of Tiberius Claudius Caesar, Empress of Rome. The slave of the Empress will be Miss Mary Sullivan.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

SECRET IS TOLD OF DE LA LAMA'S HUERTA QUARREL

Special Wireless to Boston American.
By C. F. BERTELLI.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The secret of the resignation of Senor de la Lama, the Mexican Minister of Finance was revealed to me today by an authoritative source.

Shortly after Senor de la Lama's arrival here he brought off several brilliant financial coups for the benefit of the tottering Huerta administration. Then came the order suspending payment of the interest on the national railroad and other bonds, and then de la Lama threw up the sponge.

He is now in Switzerland and his friends privately assert he will never return to Mexico as long as the dictator retains even what little power he now holds.

Huerta and de la Lama were once the most intimate friends, but the breach between them is now irreparable.

When the Finance Minister arrived in Paris last Fall he found the Mexican credit in an almost hopeless condition. Money had been spent lavishly to pay the January interest on the old issues of national bonds, but it was his task to raise money to pay the interest on a partial issue of new bonds for which the Madero government was responsible.

Paris bankers holding an option on the unsold balance of these bonds refused outright to either abandon their option or to underwrite more bonds. De la Lama, however, induced them to defer their demands for interest due until January 5, and then he hastened to London, where he raised a short-time loan to cover the interest on the 1912 bonds.

It was immediately after the temporary lifting of the Huerta government from the financial quagmire that de la Lama received news from Mexico of the suspension of the bond interest payments for two years. In a state of the highest indignation, he immediately cabled his resignation.

De la Lama's negotiations in Europe had been closely watched by the American Embassy in Paris. Mr. Herrick having been closely informed of every move on the part of the Mexican representative. The French government was delicately given to understand that it could not wish at the beginning of a new Mexican bond issue without offending Washington. France has consistently expressed political sympathy with the United States in the Mexican affair, and Wilson's administration has constantly insisted that financial aid afforded to Mexico by French banks would be as detrimental to American interests as an open approval of the Huerta government.

Incidentally, the crisis has illustrated the comedy in modern diplomacy. Ambassador Herrick, through his amiable but very astute attitude toward Huerta and the Constitutionalist junta at Paris has been enabled to keep the State Department at Washington in close touch with the innermost secrets and activities of both factions. He has had as guests at his tables alternately the official Mexican minister and the Carranzist representative in the person of Miguel Lombardo. Senor de la Lama has also been Mr. Herrick's guest, as well as numerous wealthy Mexicans residing here.

Siamese Twins on View Before Doctors

Surgical Operation Will Be Performed to Separate Them.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—There was an extraordinary session in the French Academy of Medicine when Dr. Pillatre presented to his colleagues Suzanne and Madeleine, the two girls born just before Christmas, as Siamese twins.

The twins were photographed, radiographed and cinematographed, and demonstrated their displeasure in two distinct and very healthy voices from the moment of their arrival until their departure. A surgical operation will shortly be performed to separate the twins.

English Bookmakers Invade Switzerland

Postoffice and Telegraph Companies Doing Great Business.

GENEVA, Jan. 31.—English bookmakers in Geneva, where some of the largest firms are established, must be doing an enormous betting business with England. Statistics from the telegraph and postoffices here show one firm frequently buys at a time 50,000 stamps.

An English firm received in one day, chiefly from England, seven sacks of telegrams, and within a short time had sent replies to most of them.

PRINCE EITEL FRITZ'S WIFE REFUSES RECONCILIATION

Kaiser's Second Daughter in Law Returns to Berlin, but Will Not Live with Husband

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The announcement made exclusively in the New York American on December 26 that Princess Sophia, wife of Prince Eitel Friedrich, second son of the German Emperor, has run away from her husband is now confirmed.

The Princess fled to Paris after she had discovered conclusive proof that her husband had formed an undesirable friendship with a disreputable young gentleman.

The latter, who was terribly wounded at the discovery, fearing a scandal which would put the Hohenberg affair completely in the shade, dispatched his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, and the erring husband to Paris to fetch back the deserted wife by force, if necessary.

The two Princes stopped at the quiet and unpretentious Hotel Louvois, which faces the Bibliotheque National, in the Rue de Richelieu, while the Princess remained holed and barred up in the Hotel Meurice. Prince Henry, however, was recognized by compatriots who instigated patriotic demonstrations, with the result that in the middle of the night the Hotel Meurice was obliged to flee to the Hotel Continental.

After repeated efforts to persuade the recalcitrant Princess to listen to argument, the Kaiser's brother informed her to return to Berlin, which she did, only on the condition that while outwardly reconciled she should not be asked to speak to or live with her young husband.

GRAND DUKE'S BIBLE PLAY TO BE SEEN IN AMERICA

Special Wireless to Boston American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 31.—The first production of the drama, "King of the Jews," written by the Grand Duke Constantine, was made this week in the Czar's private theatre at Emitage Palace in the presence of the Czar and the entire imperial family.

The event marked an epoch in the history of Russia, not only on account of the royal authorship of the play, but because it was the first time that representatives of the press have been invited to attend any performance on terms of equality with the imperial family—that is, seated with royalty instead of in some distant part of the auditorium.

It is a significant fact that the New York American correspondent was the only representative of the United States newspapers invited, and it is believed no secret to relate that the Grand Duke himself told the writer after the performance that there was an extreme likelihood of his drama being seen in New York shortly.

In fact, it is understood that negotiations are now going on between the Grand Duke and a leading American theatrical firm with this object in view. The production long has been talked about on account of the refusal of the Holy Synod to allow a performance in public, and the fact that the Czar, who is the head of the church in Russia, waived this objection and granted the use of his private theatre for the performance, also, caused much comment.

As to the actual performance, the Grand Duke Constantine played the leading part of Joseph of Arimathea, the drama certainly is a remarkable work and is to be considered so even if the author does not belong to the imperial family, the poetry of the lines is wonderfully good and appealed strongly to the feelings of the audience. The crucifixion scene is told in the book was prohibited from being worked out on the stage, but the difficulty was met by having it supposed to be enacted "off stage," a slightly less effective method.

In the third act, which shows Pontius Pilate's palace with a feast in progress while the crucifixion is taking place without, one hears the tragic lament of the women who accompanied Christ to Golgotha, and at the same time there is seen the dancers and singers displaying their gaiety before the Roman Governor.

Suddenly the earth trembles and darkness falls. Then the scene is gradually lighted, revealing Pilate and his guests upon the floor unconscious. This proves a magnificent climax to the powerful fourth act. It seems unnecessary to tell the story of the resurrection, which is followed by a kind of Russian Easter service, to which is sung an accompaniment of resurrection hymns.

The drama, which is strongly written, would be shown to much better advantage if it was acted by professionals instead of amateur players, who, with the exception of the Grand Duke, are very badly. The Grand Duke intends polishing the play up somewhat and if negotiations for an American production are successful, he will probably go to New York to superintend rehearsals.

KAISER OPENS PALACE FOR GERARD AND PARTY

Allison V Armour Guides Americans on Special Inspection Tour of Castle at Posen

Special Wireless to Boston American.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard left Berlin last week for a short visit to Posen, his East Prussian province, in company with a number of friends.

The party making the excursion included Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Cassatt of Philadelphia, Mrs. Ernest Wiltse of New York, Secretary Willing Spencer, Professor Archibald C Coolidge of Harvard and Allison V. Armour of Chicago, who had charge of the expedition.

The prime object of the trip was to see the new castle of the Kaiser lately erected at Posen, and particularly the new royal chapel, which was expressly designed for the Gerard party by the Kaiser.

The chapel was built under the personal direction of the Kaiser, who had his architects follow the best models of early Christian church architecture and structure. It is decorated in wonderful style. The mass of rare marble and glittering mosaics which adorn the interior are said to be surpassed by any church in Europe. The chapel is actually a part of the palace and is not ordinarily accessible to visitors.

The invitation to inspect it was only another small token of the special feeling which is entertained generally for the American Embassy here, under the new regime. Mr. Gerard returned to Berlin immediately after the inspection, and on Tuesday he attended the religious service and reception at the Berlin Castle, where the ambassadors and diplomatic representatives of all the powers met to congratulate the Kaiser on his fifty-fifth birthday.

In the evening Mr. Gerard was the guest of Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg at a dinner to the diplomatic corps.

The living rooms of the new Embassy building have been completed, enabling Mr. and Mrs. Gerard to leave the Hotel Esplanade, where they have been stavying, and to move to permanent quarters.

Priest 'Mixes' with Foe; Breaks 4 Ribs

WILMINGTON, Jan. 31.—When Rev. John Lynch, a priest of the St. Thomas Catholic Church, learned that John Cavanaugh had striken his wife and four children into the cold, the priest hurried to the house and remonstrated. Cavanaugh attempted to attack the clergyman and as a result is suffering four fractured ribs and a black eye.

Vegetable Cure for Diabetes Discovered

Albumen in Food Basis of New Treatment by Dr. Labbe.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—A new remedy for diabetes has just been discovered by Dr. Montard Labbe. It consists of a diet of dried vegetables. The eminent doctor announced the fact in a paper read before the Academy of Medicine the other day.

To effect a cure, the doctor prescribes 300 grammes of dried vegetables with fresh eggs and 150 grammes of buttered albumen at breakfast with a small quantity of fresh vegetables and wine.

He says that the patient who follows steadily this regime should be cured, according to varying conditions, from three days to a fortnight. According to the report remarkable results have been obtained from the use of this diet, many of which in his presence in advanced stages.

Lawyers Healthiest, Says Dr. Bertillon

With Teachers', Theirs Is Safest Calling, Declares French Scientist.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Dr. Jacques Bertillon has come to the conclusion that "lawyers and university professors follow the healthiest occupation among all those engaged in the liberal professions."

For instance, among European lawyers, despite the fact that they are subject to diabetes, cancer, liver complaint and alcoholism, they nevertheless show remarkable longevity.

Lawyers' clerks, on the other hand, frequently succumb to the ravages of tuberculosis. It is not easy to assign a definite cause for this, but the inference is that the nature of their work entails close confinement and constant stooping over dusty papers.

British to Exhibit in 1915, Says Pennell

Artists Will Raise Private Fund if England Persists in Refusal.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Joseph Pennell, one of the prominent members of the committee selected from American artists in England to superintend the placing of American masterpieces from abroad in the Fine Art section of the San Francisco Exposition, said to the Boston AMERICAN correspondent today:

"Artists here are not blind to the opportunity afforded them at San Francisco in 1915. Even in the event that all attempts to interest the British government to obtain funds for a British representation prove futile, they will raise a private fund sufficient to send across the Atlantic an adequate exhibit of their works."

Egyptian Beauties to Gather at Ball

Cleopatras, Aidas and Salomes in Profusion Guests of Baroness Blanc.

ROME, Jan. 31.—According to whisperi, the Egyptian ball to be given by Baroness Blanc early next month will be a sumptuous affair.

It is reported that Princess Diteano will appear as Cleopatra; the Princess of Castagneta will dress as Salambo, and other Marchioness Casati or Marchioness Del to Gandara will be Salome. How many Aidas and Annerises there will be it is impossible to say.

Prince de Lichtenstein will dress as Radames and the feature of the ball will be "The Triumph of the queen of Sheba."

W. Astor Weary of Loss as an Editor

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Waldorf Astor, M. P., has given the Pall Mall Gazette one year in which to live or die.

The mandate has just gone forth that unless the paper makes both ends meet by January 1 next, Mr. Astor will grow tired of losing money over its publication.

Should such a sudden end be in store for the "Pall Mall," it will create real regret in Fleet street.

FLORAL SURPRISE AT DUCHESS' BALL

Daughter of Hostess Emerges from Basket and Presents Flowers to Torlonia Guests.

ROME, Jan. 31.—The wonderful ball given last evening by the Duchess Torlonia still is the talk of the town. More than 500 guests, including many Americans, assembled in the splendidly decorated ballroom of the Hotel Excelsior.

A feature of the ball was the entrance at midnight. Just before supper was announced, of little Marjorie Torlonia the Duchess' daughter, who was carried to the centre of the ballroom in a large basket, standing amble deep in flowers of every description. The little girl gracefully distributed fragrant roses and violets among her mother's guests and then retired with a graceful bow.

The cotillon was led by Prince Antici Mattei, Baron Morourge and Count Sgardi. The favors, consisting of silver bags for the ladies and silver cigarette cases and pencils for the gentlemen, were most elegant.

Ambassador Makes Record, and Incidentally Great Popularity for Himself and Wife

Special Wireless to Boston American.

ROME, Jan. 31.—Ambassador and Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page's efforts to attract to Rome a large number of socially prominent Americans has proved to be so successful that for this time of the year the Italian capital is entertaining an unusually large number of distinguished Americans—not counting the scores of students temporarily resident here.

Statistics say that with the presentation at the Italian court of fifteen Americans the Page family broken all records and have created for themselves an enthusiastic popularity never before enjoyed by any American ambassador.

Last year the number of Americans presented at court was not more than half a dozen. Now already fifteen Americans have been presented at court and half a dozen more are on the waiting list. These expect to be presented to the Queen shortly, and when the vast throng of distinguished citizens of the United States now wintering in Egypt arrive here for the Easter holidays, the number of presentations will easily exceed the total for the last three or four years.

The first large reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Page in their new apartments in the Del Drago Palace now has been fixed for February 21, the evening of Washington's Birthday. In the meantime the Ambassador continues to entertain many transient Americans. Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond and John Brown Gerrish have been among his recent guests at dinner.

Find Human Bones 3,000 Years Old

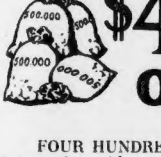
LONDON, Jan. 31.—The bones of a man, woman and two children, thought to belong to the Bronze Age (3000 to 1400 B. C.) have been found by Mr. Tharlow Leeds of Oxford, during archaeological excavations at Eye, near Peterborough.

KING OF DENMARK TO VISIT AMERICA

Will Probably Come Over in 1915 to Visit Exposition and Canal Opening.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Fear of leaving the reins of government in the hand of his recklessly impulsive oldest son will almost certainly prevent the Kaiser from carrying out his favorite scheme of visiting the United States, but another crowned head of Europe, King Christian X. of Denmark, is seriously thinking of visiting America, possibly this year, but more likely in 1915, for which he is present at the opening of the Panama Canal and the exhibition at San Francisco.

There is nothing strange in this desire on the part of the Danish King. He is the democratic ruler of a country that in many ways is far more progressive and democratic than any republic on either side of the Atlantic. About one-fifth of the Danes in the world are residing in the United States, and King Christian personally knows hundreds of them, and has time and again expressed to many of them his desire to visit the large Danish colonies in the Western American States.



$400,000,000 OF YOUR MONEY

FOUR HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS seems like a lot of money. IT IS. It represents the amount spent by our government in the construction of the great Panama Canal.

No such vast sum has ever before been expended on any one engineering project. The Suez Canal, though twice as long, cost about one-fourth as much as the Panama Canal.

The human mind cannot appreciate, without great difficulty, the vastness of this stupendous sum. It represents a

Boston Assessment of $2,190,000

Figuring three readers to every paper sold, Boston American readers have contributed MORE THAN FOUR MILLION DOLLARS towards the building of this 50-mile canal—our readers have an interest of $80,000 in every mile of "The Big Ditch."

Why then should YOU wonder at our efforts to inform you about this colossal undertaking? You and all readers of the American should try to appreciate the investment YOU HAVE ACTUALLY MADE. You have helped pay for the removal of every carload of earth, and every ton of blasted rock.

What are you going to get out of it? What benefit will you receive for your cash outlay?

Panama and the Canal IN PICTURE AND PROSE

will tell you what has been done to safeguard your investment—what income you may expect to receive from it.

A FASCINATING NARRATIVE

The author, Willis J. Abbot, has done more than merely write an accurate Panama history. He has made us understand it. His book literally takes us on a trip to Panama; shows us the strange land and people, their customs, romances, wars, hopes and aspirations. He makes us see it all with our own eyes.

Some say landslides will block travel and destroy the canal's usefulness, or that an unfriendly power will blow it up. Experts declare it is indestructible, and that the canal makes the United States the great world power for peace and war.

MOTHER! GIVE CROSS, SICK CHILD ONLY "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

No matter what ails your child a laxative should be the first treatment given.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated it is a sure sign your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleaning at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or, if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will come out, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless fruit laxative, millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

PAGES SPEND WEEK-END WITH KING AT WINDSOR

Special Wireless to Boston American.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Ambassador Walter Hines Page and Mrs. Page, in common with the diplomatic representatives of Turkey and Japan, were invited to spend the last week-end with the King and Queen at Windsor Castle. The invitation, of course, was promptly accepted, for it was the first opportunity the Pages have had to "get right in the social swim," as Senator James Hamilton Lewis would put it.

Besides, such invitations take the form, more or less, of a command, which one cannot very well decline. Among other guests staying at Windsor over the week-end were Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, Marquis and Marchioness of Winchester, Lord Haldane and according to the official court circular, Princess Wig-Schleim, Prince and Princess Alexandria of Teck, and Prince George of Teck visited the King and Queen Sunday and remained to luncheon.

So apparently Mr. and Mrs. Page had extremely good luck on the occasion of their first dive among royalty.

Still quoting the same court circular, some idea of how Sunday was spent at the palace may be obtained: "The King and Queen with their majesties' guests and ladies and gentlemen in attendance were present at divine service in the private chapel this morning."

The Pages arrived at the castle Saturday evening and left Monday morning. An American called on the Ambassador later in the day and obtained his first impressions of Windsor Castle and the people he met there, but the Ambassador preferred not to give his opinions, something the late Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, to say nothing of Mr. Choate and a long line of distinguished predecessors, were not so secretive about.

But, as a prominent American put it, look how Sunday was spent and remember that the Ambassador's chief job is to foster good feeling between the two countries.

By the way, this week's Punch honors Ambassador Page by its first reference to him. In commenting on the recent announcement that Mr. Page was confined to his room at the embassy with a cold, Punch says:

"Colds we know, are nasty things, but we consider it shows cowardice on the part of the staff, who have apparently locked the chief in his room."

'Harem Skirt' the Rage in Paris

Colors Are Simply Dazzling

The Craze Is for Orientalism

LIKE THE ORIENTAL SKIRT?

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The fashion craze has reached the Oriental limit in the "Harem skirt."

It is really an underskirt and is one of the sauciest garments that ever was devised for fair women.

It is a frilly, berufflied trouserette, reaching to the toes and showing daintily when the outer skirt is lifted—as it usually is in Paris.

The passion for slitted effect is carried out in the "Harem skirt." Each leg is slit up the front about a foot. The edges of the slit are faced with a broad ruffle and a bow or rosette or buckle is fastened at the apex of triangular opening.

The women of fashion in Paris are ordering "Harem skirts" by the dozen. Bewildering colors are shown, pale pinks, sapphire blues, magentas, old rose, Nile greens and even stripes and plaids.

The effect on a sunny afternoon on the boulevards is most dazzling and the "Harem skirt" is considered quite an asset to the decorative scheme.

MEAT CENTURIES OLD AT DINNER BY D'ANNUNZIO

Dramatist Serves Broiled Cold Storage Elephant Cutlets to Amazed Guests.

Special Wireless to Boston American.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Meat between forty and fifty thousand years old was the star dish at a banquet given by Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian dramatist and poet, at the Hotel Carlton last evening.

D'Annunzio obtained the flesh from Russia, where it was cut from the carcass of a mammoth, which was dug out of the ice round the Liakoff Islands north of Siberia, a few years ago, by Count Stenbock Fermor. The Count has presented the pachyderm to the Paris Museum of Natural History, where it is about to be exhibited. The skeleton, imbedded in the eternal ice, was in perfect condition and at the time of its discovery a large quantity of flesh was found clinging to its bones.

This fifty-thousand-year-old frozen meat is being treasured in Russia, but after repeated efforts, d'Annunzio, through influential friends, succeeded in obtaining a couple of pounds of this rare food stuff. Yesterday's sensational dinner was preliminary competition for the Fontency cup, awarded by the French Greyhound Club, of which the poet is one of the most enthusiastic members.

His guests were five fellow members of the club and covers were also laid for the favorite hounds of the guests. Describing the banquet to the I. N. S. afterward, d'Annunzio said:

"It was the most successful dinner I ever gave. Elephant meat exceeded my highest expectations. In flavor it was like tortoise flesh, but it was, well—a little tough.

"Take a piece of stout cardboard, smear it with tortoise paste, chew it for a few hours, and you will get some idea of the consistency and flavor of meat which has been in cold storage for 50,000 years. I had it broiled and served it with six different kinds of sauces.

"While my guests appeared to relish the savory novelty, one of them way through, and rudely refused to suddenly stopped eating when half-finish it."

Held for Blackmail on Telephone Story

Convicted Man Sent to Jail for Three Months.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The Paris Correctional Court has just convicted a man of attempting to blackmail by telephone.

The first time the man made a threat over the telephone his victim had no evidence of a third party on which to prosecute. The second time, however, he had a bailiff handy, who listened at another receiver and took down the blackmailer's words and also recognized his voice.

After a long legal argument on the point whether the telephone evidence was sufficient to convict, the court decided in the affirmative, and the prisoner was sentenced to three

Pasha, Ottoman Hero, Fails in Popularity

First Official Act Disappointment to Germans.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Enver Pasha, the Ottoman hero, who not long ago was the idol and hero of the German people, has fallen from his high place. Faith in this man, who had received his whole military training in this country and who pretended to admire everything German, fell short of public expectations the very moment he was placed in a position of responsibility. His very first official act as Turkish Secretary of War was to deprive the German General Limann von Sanders of his command of the First Turkish Army Corps.

Society Women Ride in Building Cranes

Just Like Ballooning, Say Leaders in London.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—London society women have taken up a new fad in their search for enjoyment. The architects and contractors engaged in the erection of buildings are besieged by requests from many of the most notable hostesses in the city to take them up in the buckets of the huge cranes used in excavating and erection work. Being hoisted up in the crane buckets is said to give all the sensations of ballooning without the risk. Crane parties are rapidly becoming as fashionable as tango teas.

Is Given Award on Family Resemblance

Chinese Girl Has "Sixty Per Cent. of Mother's Chin."

SINGAPORE, Jan. 31.—Two Chinese arbiters, selected by the Supreme Court to ascertain whether or not a girl named Koh Chen Neo was the legitimate daughter of a man named Low Kim Yong, who recently died, and if she were entitled to a share of his estate, have reported that the girl has "fifty to sixty per cent. of her mother's chin, while her forehead, two cheeks and face resembles her father's features and she is entitled to her claim."

On the report of the two Chinese, the court ruled in her favor.

Frank Harris to Print Volume Kept Ten Years in Safe.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A book, which was written ten years ago and has reposed in a safe ever since, is to see the light at last. The title of it is to be "Oscar Wilde: His Life and Confessions."

The author is Frank Harris, the friend to whom Wilde dedicated "An Ideal Husband." Mr. Harris, who knew Wilde from his college days to his death, conveys in this book the best impression that has yet been put in print of Wilde's power as a conversationalist.

237,589 on Lists of Whit Star for 1913

Leads All Lines, British or Continental, in Traffic Last Year.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Particulars of the north Atlantic passenger traffic for the last year have just been issued. According to the official figures the White Star tops all other lines, British or Continental.

During 1913 its vessels carried westward 140,724 passengers, 18,351 first cabin passengers, 46,081 second cabin and 92,292 third-class. White Star steamers traveling east during 1913 carried 57,865 passengers, first cabin 13,550, second cabin 24,181 and steerage 48,114, making a grand total of 237,589.

Sutherland Duchess to Wed Irishman

London Hears She Is Engaged to Hon. Evelyn Fitzgerald.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—It is reported that Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland, is to marry the Hon. Evelyn Fitzgerald, probably the best known bachelor in London.

Lady Millicent Fanny St. Clair Erskine was married in 1884 to the late Duke of Sutherland, who died last June. She is known as one of the most democratic noblewomen of England and has made a name in the literary world. Fitzgerald is forty years old. His father was an Irish lawyer.

Charge Signed Name of Woman for $1,950

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Frank P. Henniman, a Canadian, was sent to the Tombs by United States Commissioner Shields for extradition to Montreal on a charge of forging $1,950 in checks on Mrs. Odile Hensgel, a wealthy Montreal woman. Henniman was formerly a steward on the Allan line, on which Mrs. Hensgel was a passenger.

"Learn to Shoot," Says Lord Roberts

Urges All Men to Be Prepared to Defend Country.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Lord Roberts, in an introduction to the 1914 Handbook of the Society of Miniature Rifle Clubs, of which he is president, states that although his ideal of "Every Man a Rifleman" is very far from fulfillment, good progress has been made in their movement.

"I should be failing in my duty," he declares, "were I not to add a few words to those who either willfully, through ignorance or through supineness, are neglecting to fit themselves for the defence of their country. May I ask that all members of the society will do their utmost, not only by their example, already set, but by arguments to induce their friends and acquaintances to learn to shoot?"

$300,000 Paid Over to Princess Louise

BRUSSELS, Jan. 31.—The financial difficulties of Princess Louise, daughter of the late King Leopold, are said to be at an end, and she has received $300,000 as her share of her father's estate. Numerous law suits were entered against the Princess by creditors in Paris, Berlin and London, and these are said to have been satisfactorily arranged.

The Princess is at present living in Vienna with a young Hungarian nobleman, whose title was taken away by Emperor Francis Joseph.

Decrease in Number of British Coins

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The report of the Director of the Mint just issued shows that for the year 1913 the number of coins turned out by the mint was much smaller than during the previous year. During 1913, 24,125,032 sovereigns were issued, 6,123,660 less than in 1912. However, the mint only withdrew 1,221,706 sovereigns during the year, while in 1912, 2,170,000 were withdrawn. The coinage of half sovereigns and even silver and copper coins was also very much less than during the previous year.

Beatrice Claflin Not Presented at Court

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—It was expected that at the first court levee held this year, one of the American women to be presented would be Miss Beatrice Claflin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Claflin of New York. However, neither Miss Claflin nor her mother were present. They came to Berlin from Paris, where they had purchased many elaborate gowns.

Baroness Vaughan Would Enter Society

Purchases Mansion in Paris for Entertainment of Guests.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The Baroness Vaughan, morganatic wife of the late King Leopold of Belgium, is preparing to make an assault on the bulwarks of French society. She has purchased a mansion in the Avenue Henri Martin, capable of accommodating the largest parties.

One room of the costly mansion is fitted up as an office, and the Baroness has installed a ticker machine, whereby she keeps tabs on the stock market. The large fortune left her by King Leopold has been vastly increased by fortune speculation on the Bourse.

Mds. Edith Wharton Writing New Novel

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Edith Wharton, the American novelist, has returned to Paris, after a visit to her native country and now is at work on a new novel, in which, she says, she will severely criticise American women and their attitude toward the marriage laws. Mrs. Wharton recently divorced her husband.

Sues Wife Because Of Love for Movies

SAVANNAH, Jan. 31.—Charging that an insane love for "movies" and a gay life about town made her violate the promises she made when they were married, E. P. Dahl has filed a suit for divorce with the Superior Court against Mrs. Florence Dahl.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFULLY DARKENS THE HAIR WHEN FADED AND GRAY

Mixed With Sulphur Makes Hair Soft, Lustrous and Cures Dandruff.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, druggists, chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers indorse Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Prof. Stevens Talks on Old Greek Mines

Americans in Rome Hear Interesting Lecture by Archaeologist.

ROME, Jan. 31.—The first lecture under the auspices of the British-American Archaeological Society was given at the Hotel Excelsior before a large audience of distinguished residents in Rome.

Ambassador Page presided and introduced the chief speaker, Professor Stevens, of the American Academy of Fine Arts, who lectured on "Silver Mines in Ancient Greece." The lecture was warmly received.

Mrs. Penfield's Gowns Startle Even Paris

VIENNA, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Frederic C. Penfield, wife of the American ambassador, is planning a social season in Vienna, which will be the acme of brilliance and splendor. The gowns worn by Mrs. Penfield at various social functions have caused considerable comment, for they have been extravagant even for Vienna, where extravagance is a fine art.

CARNEGIE SETS HONOR DATE

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Andrew Carnegie, who already is a freeman over the cities of Great Britain, has appointed June 6 as a suitable date for him to receive the freedom of Lincoln, as on the same day he also gets the same honor from Coventry.

There's Only One Kind of Profitable Advertising

—The Kind That Establishes Good Will And Makes Every Customer a "Repeater"

Newspaper advertising's power can never be fully employed by that advertiser who plans only for present profits. Future patronage must be considered—for it isn't the single sale that counts but the sales that automatically follow as a result of today's transaction.

Successful Merchants know price, quality, style and "service" are equally strong factors in any store's advertising success.

In this the great law of compensation plays no small part. That merchant who gives the most invariably gets the most. Truth and integrity are the lasting ties between a store and its trade.

Thus merchants who offer goods of merit at reasonable prices—who make a sane and straightforward advertising appeal—are the merchants who invariably prosper. They build a bulwark of good will with advertising.

And advertising that fails to build is the only advertising that doesn't pay. Advertising, to be successful, must do more than create business for today. It must build business for tomorrow.

It must be backed up by flawless merchandise and sincere service. It must make a friend every time it makes a sale. It should go further and make a friend even though it does not make an immediate sale. That kind of advertising cannot fail—nor can the merchant who is responsible for it.

To have the confidence of the community is to have a business asset beyond all price—a form of business insurance that safeguards against fire and flood, famine and failure. And to strengthen and spread this confidence—to increase this asset—to make surer this insurance—is to advertise constantly.

Mark well, also, the fact that follows:

The basis of every permanently successful advertising campaign must be honesty of purpose to give the best possible value for the buyer's money. This means a satisfied customer, and a satisfied customer means a "repeat" customer, and a "repeat" sale is the real net money-making sale.

That is the trade to which the wise advertiser makes his successful appeal through the Boston American—to people who have both the means and the inclination to buy, and whose patronage is worth while.

Boston American Advertising is Business-Building Advertising, the Advertising That Creates Permanent Trade

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD--CATARRH GOES

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely, Nasty Discharge Stops, Head Colds and Dull Headache Vanish.

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning, the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone. End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat. Relief comes instantly. Stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucus dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Hyde Park Women to Censor Dances at Big Club Ball

When "The Tchapitoulas" organization holds its party the watchers will be on guard.

Miss Margaret Lynch (at top), Miss Gertrude Lynch (in centre) and Mrs. William F. Fitzgerald.

"The Tchapitoulas" is the name of a club of young men and women in Hyde Park, well known tennis players of a season, who held their first dancing party in Waverly Hall, Hyde Park, next Wednesday evening.

An interesting feature is that three women members of the club will act as censors and see that nothing but the glide and other graceful dances take place. The censors for the party are Mrs. William F. Fitzgerald, Miss Gertrude Lynch and Miss Margaret Lynch. The officers of the club are James A. O'Hearn, president, and J. Joseph Fitzgerald, secretary-treasurer. Among the young men who are assisting the committee are Representative William L. F. Gilman, T. H. Copeland, John M. Morrison, Joseph Meagher, John McGowan, J. "Gains 22 Pounds In 23 Days"

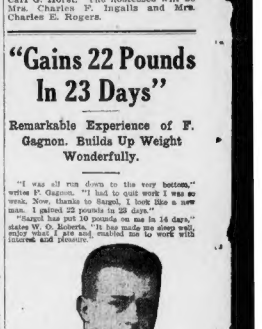
Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. O. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I eat and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."



A PLUMP, STRONG, ROBUST BODY

"Before I took Sargol people used to call me skinny. Now I'm plump and strong. The whole body is stout. Have gained 15 pounds and am feeling fine," writes Mrs. Alice Hall, Oakland Station, Pittsburgh. Sargol has changed hundreds.

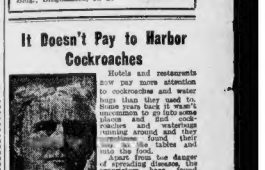
Would you, too, like to quickly put from 10 to 30 lbs. of good, solid, "stick-there" flesh, fat and muscle? Does your form look like a bean pole? Don't say it can't be done. Try it. Let us send you free a few samples of Sargol. Then, if convinced, get a regular package at your druggist's. Address The Sargol Co., 221-F Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y. Take Sargol, then your mirror and watch it work. The test will tell the story.

FREE SARGOL COUPON

This coupon, with free sample, entitles the bearer to have a package, packing, etc., and to show good faith, certifies that he or she has written for Sargol. Free. Address the Sargol Co., 221-F Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y.

It Doesn't Pay to Harbor Cockroaches

Hotels and restaurants never pay more attention to cockroaches and water bugs than when they are used to. Some years back it wasn't an unusual thing to find cockroaches in the best hotels and restaurants, and this one insect helped more to lower the standard of cleanliness than anything else.



Roach Gets Exterminated Than Anything Else

Science has come to the rescue with the result that the cockroach is now practically unknown in the best hotels and restaurants. May and June, and sometimes July, are the months when the cockroach is most annoying and difficult to exterminate. This insect feels by preference on animal matter, such as meat, bacon, various sweets, old cheese, bones, hoofs, etc. It is about one inch long when full grown.

In destroying cockroaches and waterbugs, Stearns' Electric Paste has proved a most successful remedy. Where this insect exists, a campaign of extermination should be carried on systematically and persistently. Place the paste in the cracks and around the haunts of the bugs and they will soon disappear. It has been used successfully for this purpose for years and is the standard powder throughout New England.

Sold by drug and department stores everywhere for 60 cents and $1 per can; $4 can, sufficient for 50 to 100 square feet.
